OPINIONS OF THE PRESS:

The allegorical military drama, "Andersonville," which has occupied the boards at Wood's Museum from the first of last week, is having a very decided success, both pecuniarily and artistically. The cast is filled entirely by members of Company E, 1st regiment, and the aptitude and cleverness they exhibit in their several roles has gratified, if it hasn't surprised, their friends. The performances will be continued nightly during the remainder of the week, with a matinee Saturday afternoon.—Chicago Times.

The military spectacle arranged under the auspices of Company "E," First Regiment, I. N. G., is attracting good houses at the Museum this week. The entertainment is well worth the money and the time, and has been got up with good taste. The Andersonville part of it is a highly realistic representation of the horrors of that terrible episode of the war.—Inter Ocean.

THE UNION SPY.—On last Monday evening Major Barton, supported by the Harmon Light Guards and other home talent closed the most successful engagement of four evenings we have ever known to be played in our midst by any troupe or combination either home or foreign.—Danville Commercial.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Major Barton, in his grand specialty of the Spy, is a splendid actor, and never fails to carry the audience by storm.—Cincinnati Gazette.

THE UNION SPY.—I wept, prayed and swore almost in the same breath when I listened to the thrilling drama.—General Kilpatrick.

The tableaux alone are worth the price of admission. They are grand and beautiful, the finest ever presented in the city.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

No entertainment was ever given in our city that had such a run. It has been produced over thirty nights to crowded and overflowing houses.—Lansing Republican.

Since the days of our city's foundation, no performance has drawn better than the Union Spy. The spectators find unflagging interest and excitement.—Kalamazoo Daily Telegraph.

Joseph Barton's rendition of the Union Spy took the house by storm last night. His acting is like Jefferson's in Rip Van Winkle—so real that it carries you out of the present into the past.—South Bend Tribune.

The Union Spy drew another immense audience, at the Opera House, last night. It is something that arouses a patriotic feeling in every heart, and the audience show their appreciation by their frequent bursts of applause.—Sandusky Register.

Major Barton has struck a popular chord in writing the beautiful drama of the Union Spy, and may justly feel proud of the enthusiastic reception which he everywhere receives. He is a thorough worker, and we indorse him as a gentleman and a fine actor, wherever he may go.—Bay City Tribune

In either the heroic or patriotic, Major Barton always held the attention and sympathy of the audience; especially in the effecting scene of Andersonville, when Little Jimmie lay dying, his power over the hearts of his hearers was felt.—Port Huron Standard Commercial.

Everything promised was accomplished. The tableaux were beautiful and thoroughly effective. Mr. Joseph Barton, the hero and actor of the play, is earnest, forcible and graceful in all his actions, thorough and unstagy in all he does.—Chicago Evening Journal.

"Joe Barton," of the Union Spy, bids fair to make for himself in that character as great a name as that of Joe Jefferson, in Rip Van Winkle.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

The above was our prediction in 1872. It has been verified.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

THE REASONS WHY
THE
Allegory of the Union Spy
SHOULD BE PATRONIZED:

1. The organization to be benefited in the successful production of this highly artistic, patriotic and moral exhibition, is the Harmon Light Guards of Danville, which is worthy of commendation and support, and merits your liberal patronage.

2. No traveling or itinerant theatrical company can afford to go about the country in a troupe numbering over one hundred performers, ladies and gentlemen.

3. Many of the actors in the play possess superior talent, and ALL far excel the average of companies that visit us.

4. The Allegory itself is one that inculcates patriotism, justice and humanity; and also illustrates many thrilling phases of the Soldier's career that cannot fail to move the stoutest heart from its former indifference.

5. With enough of fun and humor to keep the audience in good spirits, the performance is commendable for its historical representations, while it is free from the objectionable vulgarity and coarseness that too often characterizes dramatic performances.

6. Home talent and beauty are preferable to the sham materials that usually present themselves for our patronage; and the REALISTIC TABLEAUX presented cannot be produced with equal effect by any roving troupe of performers of inferior numerical strength.

7. The performance alone is worth more than the price of admission.

For these and many other reasons the house should be packed to overflowing upon each evening. Remember the price of admission has been fixed within the reach of all; so come early and avoid the rush.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The citizens of Galesburg are well aware that our Post 45, G. A. R., was organized in this city two years ago last August; also you must be aware of almost our sole object, CHARITY, in this, to alleviate the wants or sufferings of our comrades, and of the widows and orphans of those who gave their lives to save our country in the late war of the rebellion. Since our organization we have expended in charity and necessary expenses, nearly $3,000. Nearly every citizen in our city can recall some instance in which the benefits of our Order have been extended to some poor, suffering, distressed family or soldier. Cold, cheerless winter, is just ahead of us again, and to be able to do the most good, we again present to you this series of brilliant entertainments, and trust everybody will grace us with their presence.

Reward is a military drama or allegory, founded on scenes and incidents that transpired during the late war for the Union, many of which the author of this drama personally witnessed. It abounds with thrilling, startling and pathetic scenes, situations, and beautiful tableaux. Military, comedy and sentimental characters, etc., are vividly brought out, and rendered in a manner acceptable to the public. We are satisfied that all who witness this allegory will be gratified, and say that they have received the value of their money.

The music to be rendered at this entertainment by the Galesburg Quartet Club, will be first class, as no pains or expense has been spared in the selection of pieces.

Note down in your memorandum-book: Reward, Oct. 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Don't fail to see Charley Collins in his great character of Fritz Stein. As a Dutch Comedian he stands to-day without a rival. He is simply immense.

Admission 35 cents; reserved seats 50 cents. Sale of seats will commence Tuesday, Oct. 14, at Fahnestock & Fuller's, where diagrams of the Opera House can be seen.

The tableaux in this piece are well worth the price of admission, as they are far ahead of anything ever yet given in our city. Twenty young ladies of Galesburg will take part in them.

Collins' support has been selected with great care from the best home talent we have. Nothing will be spared to make this the grandest entertainment ever given in Galesburg. And just think of it, only 35 cents admission, and 50 cents for reserved seats. We are incurring a great expense in this undertaking, and we hope the general ring a great expense in this undertaking, and we hope the general public will sustain us. Turn out and give us crowded houses nightly. Everybody, and all your friends, come.

Little girls, the daughters of Comrades of G. A. R. will visit our citizens and solicit the purchase of tickets; don't turn them away, but gladden their little hearts and bid them God speed in their good work. These little girls will wear red, white and blue badges, an emblem of loyalty, and to signify their authority. They will sell all kinds of tickets. Each ticket good for any night. Those purchasing reserved seat tickets can secure seats for any night by calling at Fahnestock & Fuller's.

There is a divorceity of opinion between many men with many wives.

If you should happen to meet your sister on a crowded thoroughfare, don't lift your hat to her as you would to any other lady—wink at her and bellow out, "Hello, sis!" She may feel mortified, but you're her brother, you know.

A man may be great by chance, but never wise and good without taking pains for it.

Mental pleasures, unlike those of the body, never coy, and are increased by repetition.

Those who blow the coals of others' strife, may chance to have the sparks to fly in their face.

Friendship is like a garment—when new it is valued and cared for; when old, cast aside and forgotten.

He who thinks too much of himself will be in danger of being forgotten by the rest of the world.

Never ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem as such, however obsurd they may appear to be.

A veteran observer remarks that mankind loves mystery. A hole in the ground excites more inquiry than a star in the heavens.

It is a singular fact that wise men learn more from fools than fools learn from wise men, and there seems to be no end to the opportunity for learnig.

Give a man brains and riches and he is a king. Give a man brains without riches, and he is a slave. Give a man riches without brains, and he is a fool.

Truth is the bond of union and the basis of human happiness. Without this virtue, there is no reliance on language, no confidence in friendship, no security in premises or oaths.

To know how bad you are, become poor; to know how bad other people are, become rich. Many a man thinks it is virtue that keeps him from turning rascal, when it is only a full stomach.

Character grows; it is not something to be put on, ready made, with manhood or womanhood; but day by day, here a little and there a little, grows with the growth and strengthens with the strength, until good or bad, it becomes a coat of mail.

It is the will of Chambers, the Tobacconist, that the boys all chew the "Monarch fine-cut. Go to Chamber's stand, No. 11 Massachusetts ave., and fill your pouch, pockets and mouth. and go on your way rejoicing.

It is charged that "out of thirty-five Vastar Collage girls who had studied Latin, Greek, French, music drawing botany and mineralogy for five or six years, twenty-seven married poor men and have to do their own housework."

Information is wanted by Mr. T. B. Carroll, of the wholesale house of Mullany & Hays, and others, regarding certain payments made to "a rather slender young man, with black hair, dark complexion, stove-pipe hat, and about twenty-two years of age."

A female at confession acknowledged that she used rough. "For what purpose?," asked the father. "To make me appear captivating," was the answer. "But does it make you more beautiful?" "At least, holy father, I think it does." The priest took the penitent out of the confessional into the light, and, looking into her face, observed, "Madam, you may paint without offense, for you are still very ugly.

Observation of a woman—The foot is the point of departure for the whole toilet. She who can prettily dress her foot, is very easily to costume elegantly, but a woman who dreads to expose her feet can never be well attired. The German, who has generally big feet, is always badly dressed. The American has a little foot, so she is elegant. The Russian, who is not pretty, is ravishingly attired, for she has little feet. She Spaniard is elegant, her foo t is small, but she dresses it badly. The French woman has a little foot, and her boot is the hight of perfection

A pair of stairs that ordinarily are as solid as a rock will straddle in the joints and crack and crack together with all the ferver of a thunder clap, when one is attempting to climb them noislessly at night.

Schuyler Coalfax is slowly but surely regaining the confidence of the American nation. He has been unanimously appointed judge at a baby show at Niles, Michigan.

It is said that a Missouri clergyman has left the pulpit and become a clown in a circus. He gives as a reason that "three square meals a day, and fifty dollars a week are better than $40000 per annum, payable in dried apples, hay and old clothes."

Furrow Cayenne Pepper in their Eyes.

Indianapolis Saturday Herald.

As the weather grows mild, the ranks of the brazen brutes who stand in the lobbies and ogle ladies as they pass in and out of theatres, are receiving nightly accessions.

If theatrical managers would distribute a portion of their properties known as "stuffed clubs" through the auditorium for use on the heads of those parties who feel called upon to explain the plot of a play in advance of its development, they would deserve, and doubtless receive, the thanks of the public.—Saturday Herald.

Grand—Baker & Farron.

Cincinnati Commercial.

After several years' absence abroad, in Australia, New Zealand and Great Britain, Baker & Farron reappeared before a Cincinnati audience last night, at the Grand, in a play entitled "Emigrants. It was a rainy, sloppy, dismal night, yet the attendance was surprisingly good, a crowded gallery, good balcony, and quite a large number of pleased auditors down stairs. Baker & Farron are excellent exponents of the style of drama that Emmet has made famous. Their play has been written with a view of easy introduction of the many specialties in which the stars excel. Their collection of songs is entirely new, and many of them are remarkably pleasing, needing only a little more familiarity to have them whistled and hummed everywhere. Both gentlemen have good voices, singing with dash and spirit, and dancing gracefully. Farron in petticoats is quite captivating as a German girl, and immensely funny later in the play as an Irishman. The specialties introduced in the last act, where Baker appears as the modern gentleman, and Farron as an elegantly dressed lady, were exceptionally fine and received with enthusiastic applause. Nothing of the kind so good has ever been witnessed here before. These clever people have so much of that peculiar charm which is Joe Emmet's principal stock in trade that it is no wonder their tour around the globe has been a series of successes. The members of their company do all the work the play requires acceptably.

"My Geraldine."

New York Democrat.

Bartley Campbell excels in pathetic incident and love making. He presents the prettiest miniature romance of the American theatre, and proceeds to elaborate at once ravishing and fascinating. He can set the story of the heart in diamond tints of fire, and make the sentiments, pains, struggles, sufferings and triumphs so many bits of brica-a-brac in human history. The dramatist must not only paint the picture; he must frame it and then hang it to the best advantage. Mr. Campbell is a medallionist. Sculpture, with all his vagaries, is an artist to whom the breadth of the largest canvass conveys no idea of timidity. What he lacks is sweetness and delicacy (qualities eminently distinguished in Campbell's nature). He is the one and only perfect stage mechanist of the day. Campbell is a mere tyro in the pyrotechnics of stage effects. "My Geraldine," in delicacy of tone, brightness of narrative, sweetness of pathetic feeling and grandeur of sentiment, exhibits more of what the Irish drama ought to be than any play of its class we ever saw.

Be Courteous.

A person who is courteous to others feels the happier for his courtesy; and it creates sunshine and happiness around. We feel drawn involuntarily toward a person who treats us with courtesy and speaks kindly to us. If we think a brother is in error, if we wish him to receive any view of divine truth which we have formed ourselves; if we wish him to adopt any line of conduct in preference to the one he is now pursuing, a courteous and respectful forbearing will enable us the better to accomplish our end. We cannot lose anything by elegance of manners; we may gain a great deal. A man with a disrespectful manner, and with rough and hasty words, damages the cause he wishes to promote. Study to be respectful. Study to be easy, graceful, kind in your general demeanor. You will find in passing through a world like this that it will pay well to be courteous.

Hereafter when "Sweety" and "Beauty" go out after nightfall they are going to carry in each of their pockets a little bottle of vitriol to burn off the faces of scoundrels who have the impudence to speak to them. There are about four thousand well dressed young men, (?) pimps and bloats in the neighborhood of South Illinois street and on West Washington street who want to have their eyes and tongues burned out with some of "Sweety's" vitriol every night. God speed such burning!

When, in passing a country villa, the only thing out of order is the front gate, it is evident that there is a marriageable daughter in the house.

Be good natured, if you can; for there is no affection so great, no charm so admirable.

By a strict examination of ourselves, we can judge more justly of other men's characters.

The tree keeps its trunk in good order during the winter, so that it shall be ready to leave early in the spring.

It was a Windham wife who, when her husband was brought home intoxicated, thanked God that he was not a blood relation.

A Georgia paper tells a wonderful story of how a mule killed a negro. The man was riding a mule to the town of Gordon for a doctor. Just as the town was reached, the hind legs of the mule, without any provocation whatever, were seen to fly into the air, the negro shot upward about ten feet, and, falling upon his side on the earth, his body burst completely open. He died within ten minutes after the fall.

Important Removal.

The Parisian Kid Glove depot formerly at Hess, Baylor & Co.'s, has taken enlarged quarters with many improved conditions, occupying the west side of the commodious millinery house of Dietrichs & Walker, No. 10 East Washington st. The increased space at command has enabled Mr. Tucker to add to his kid glove stock every description of gloves made, both for ladies and gentlemen. This is the only exclusive glove establishment in the city, enjoying the incidental advantages of that fact, not only in the benefits to the purchaser in buying of a merchant who gives his undivided attention to the glove trade, but also the superior advantages in the purchasing market among manufacturers. Mr. Tucker has just received a case of fine goods, a fresh importation from Europe, and now that Indianapolis has been made a port of delivery will take his importations out of customs here. This establishment was the first in the city or state to inaugurate the custom of fitting gloves to the hand before sale.

NOT BLIND.—"Don't make a fool of yourself with that girl, now, Tom; you know love's blind," said his cautious parent. "That's all bosh," said superior Tom. "Love's not blind at all. Why, I see ten times as much in that girl as you do."

As through fashion's decree, ladies' dresses grew small, gentlemen's pants were enlarged, and now that hoops are again affected, trousers' legs begin to get tight. That's the general rule—the looser the women the tighter the men.

The New-Dennison tonsorial artists give the best satisfaction in barbering. Hair-cutting, shaving, shampooing bathing, etc., are all made mighty pleasant to take in their establishment because they are all tempered with neatness, gentility and dispatch. Try them!

Four gentlemen and five lady graduates of the Dramatic College, No. 18 North Pennsylvania street, have obtained first-class engagements this season, and are making rapid progress in their profession. The college offers a rare chance to those who wish to become proficient in the dramatic art, the higher branches of elocution, gesticulation, parlor reading and fencing. Each pupil receives private instructions.

DRESS MAKING.—Mrs. Ida Siebert, 36½ West Washington street, room 3, continues to give ladies the best satisfaction in dress making. The very latest fashions, the very lowest prices and the most stylish work can be depended on. Mrs. Siebert makes beautiful fitting garments and no mistakes.

The best bath in the city can be had at the New-Denison barber shop for 25 cts.

A young lady wrote some verses for a county paper about her birthday, and headed them "My 30th." It almost made her hair turn gray when it appeared in print; "My 30th."

A Nice workman lighted a match to discover a leak in the gas pipes behind the scenes. He discovered it but will never communicate the intelligence.

The Great Western Bill Poster, John Edwards, has largely increased his business by the addition of a number of large and commodious bill boards, new wagons, &c., in order to accommodate his large and growing trade. Theatrical and Circus agents will find John the boss bill poster of the West. Leave orders at the Sentinel building.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.—A fashionable young man lately presented his sweetheart with a string of pearls. As she hung them joyously about her neck, a cloud came over her brow, and she cried, "Beloved, do not pearls betoken tears?" "Don't fear," was the response, "them's imitation."

No matter how old a crow-bar may be, it remains as pry as ever.

E. L. Davenport.

The fall of death's curtain upon the life of the eminent artist above named, marked the close of a career professionally honorable in the extreme. In the death of Mr. Davenport, the American stage lost its brightest ornament, for he was, beyond comparison, the greatest actor America ever produced, and it will be many long years ere we look upon his like again. He has left no successor, none worthy to wear his mantle, for it has fallen on none.

It may be said of him, he was truly great, not alone in those points of excellence which mark the summit of the high career, but in every detail, from the least unto the greatest, entering into, and forming a portion of the glorious total. Whatever he touched, his glorious genius beautified; in his hands, the most unimportant detail of dramatic machinery, became ennobled. What, in other hands, would seem but a species of semi—important filling in, in his, became a beautiful figure in the fabric of the perfect whole.

In point of versatility, the world has never produced his equal. There he shone forth pre-eminent. From the most mirth provoking comedy, dialect included, to the grandest creations of the world's greatest dramatists, and in all that lies between, his all-embracing genius found naught too insignificant, naught beyond his reach. But it was in those glorious creations of the "Poet of all time," the immortal Shakspere, his grander genius displayed itself.—As a Shaksperian exponent, he never had a peer, the late matchless Walter Montgomery alone excepted. Never ranting, he was thrillingly intense; free from all taint of stage trickery, his conceptions were powerfully dramatic; never borrowing from the traditional gods of the Thespian universe, himself an originator, his readings were chaste, original, and artistic. Take him for all in all, we shall never look upon his like again.

Around the new made grave that holds all that remains of Edward L. Davenport, all lovers of true worth are mourning, for in his death all have suffered loss. The stage has given up its brightest exemplar, the dramatic profession has lost one who ennobled it in every respect. The glorious artist, the loving husband and father, the polished and scholarly gentleman, the brilliant and fascinating associate, the kind and faithful friend, alike descended to the grave that opened to receive America's greatest dramatic artist.

May his rest be as deep as his merits were great, and his sufferings were intense.

HARRY CRAFT.

An old-established Dry Goods House: The Boston Store of M. H. Spades 5 & 7 West Washington St.

The Boston Store was established in the year 1869, at No. 30 East Washington St, in a room whose dimensions were only 15 x 40. The business conducted from the beginning on correct principles, grew and prospered, and in 1872 it became necessary to enlarge the room occupied, by building an addition in the rear, which increased its depth to 120ft. In 1874 the business had grown to such proportions, that Mr. Spades was compelled to seek still larger quarters, and the elegant and spacious rooms now occupied were secured. The location is one of the very best in Indianapolis, and no poor rooms are now used for the Dry Goods trade anywhere. The business of the Boston Dry Goods Store has steadily and constantly increased, and notwithstanding the fact that other houses complain of dull times and loss of trade, Mr. Spades' business has increased so far this year, over last, thirty per cent. No doubt this increase may be fully attributed to the reputation which the management has justly earned for square and just dealing. No house has a better corps of salesmen and ladies. They are all courteous and obliging, and Mr. Spades attributes to their uniform kind treatment of patrons, much of the credit for the excellent reputation his house has attained.

The stock of goods is now very large and attractive. Special attention is called to their stock of Hair and Millinery Goods, Dress Goods, and Cloaks. Mme. Weisenburger, a lady of fine reputation as a trimmer, has been secured for the millinery department.

Our advice to those in want of Dry Goods would be, look through the Boston Store.

At last our city has an establishment such as has been needed for a long time. The opening of Schaffner's New Oyster Parlors, for ladies as well as gentlemen, has indeed, supplied a want long felt, and we feel assured that our people will patronize only too willingly, such a deserving enterprise as this of Mr. Schaffner's. His rooms are excellently furnished, his assistants courteous and efficient, his business relations with the eastern oyster markets such as to ensure daily supplies from the sea side.

Sparks of Mirth.

About people;—their clothes.

Right about face;—an essay on Physiognomy.

A tie vote;—when both parties vote "yes," and the preacher ties the knot.

To address a bride by her ante-nuptial name, is a misnomer, as she is a miss no more.

Sugar loaf hats are thrown in among the Fall styles. Of course they are awful "sweet."

Happy is the deaf man, he can hear no evil of himself; and the dumb man, for he can speak no evil of any one.

"Baba," the new spectacular play, is said to be gorgeous beyond description. If so, it will gorge us with pleasure.

"Don't you think," she innocently enquired, "that most men are possessed of a devil?" "After marriage, alas, yes," he mournfully sighed.

The Occidental Hotel Shoe Store is on the corner of Washington and Illinois Streets, the most central and popular location in the city. Just three blocks from Union Depot, up Illinois Street.

"It is not good to be alone," say the philosophers. If one of these philosophers were to find himself in the company of an entertaining bull in a two acre lot, surrounded by a high fence, he might change his opinion, unless he had a pair of those boots from the Occidental Shoe Store to do his running in.

Even the consciousness of a pair of Arctic shoes and clean striped stockings affords a very weak consolation to a woman who gets out over the back of a cutter when it strikes a crossing and stands her on her head in a snowdrift.

We once knew a man who said to his pastor, "I am going to the other church after this." "Indeed! and why?" "You don't get your shoes made at my shop, and I won't have my preaching done at yours."

An eastern friend relates the following:—A german clergyman, visiting the city of Hartford, Conn. was invited to fill the pulpit of the church of which the friend he was visiting, is a member. Opening the Bible, he commenced;—"Mine friends, I will breach to you vrom der sixteenth shapter oof Shon. Der dext am, 'Und he tore his shirt.' The congregation began to look at one another, and some tittered outright. The regular clergyman, who also was sitting in the pulpit, taking in the situation, arose, looked over the shonider of his Teutonic friend, and scarcely repressing a smile, explained, 'My friends, the text is, And the door is shut."

Hints to Housekeepers.

The best way to preserve peaches—dont eat 'em.

In selecting a black silk that will wear well, test it as follows:—pull a few threads from the filling; if it breaks easily, look at that piece no longer. If you find a piece in which the thread is reasonably strong, then it is neccessary to take the silk by one corner and give it a good rubbing, as if washing. If the silk is heavy with dye, this process will reveal (if held to the light,) slight traces of disaster.

To remove iron rust;—rub with salt mixed with lemon juice.

To clean point lace, (if not very dirty,) without washing;—fix it in tent, and rub with soft bread crumbs the crust having been carefully pared off; when done, brush off the crumbs.

To clean kid gloves. The easiest way is to take half a pint of benzine in a small vessel, and dip the gloves into it. After thoroughly wetting them, squeeze them dry, repeating till clean. Then hang the gloves out to dry.

To remove ink stains while fresh, pour fresh water on the stain, perseverig until the stain is gone.

Dry ink stains may be removed, by dipping the stain into hot milk and rubbing gently until stain is gone. This is a sure thing.

To clean carpets.—Shake and beat well; tack smoothly to the floor; then, with a clean flannel rag, wash with a mixture composed of one quart of bullock's gall mixed with three quarts of cold, soft water. After this, rub with a clean flannel, or house cloth. Any spot particularly dirty, should be rubbed with the pure gall.

To clean white satin shoes. Fill out the shoe with paper, or rags; then rub gently with a piece of clean muslin, dipped in Spirits of Wine. Do this several times, then rub off with dry muslin.

To clear cider and improve it generally. Take two quarts ground horse radish, and nearly a pound of thick grey filtering paper to the barrel. Stir it until the paper has separated into shreds, let it stand for twenty four hours, when the cider may be drawn off.

To preserve leather and render it water proof.—Mix 4 ounces of mutton tallow, 3 ounces of beeswax, 2 ounces of lampblack; melt, and oil the leather well with Castor Oil before applying the dressing.

To remove grease spots from any woolen garment;—cut em out. We have lots of other ways, but none half so sure as this, which was never known to fail.

TO THE PUBLIC:

Discovering that my former place, (No. 60 East Washington Street), was entirely too small to accommodate my friends and Customers, besides being business having increased to such an extent—I decided to make a move and fit up my "New Bay" in style and convenience only EQUALLED by the finest establishments east.

The "New Oyster Bay" contains three separate parlors. Private supper parlor for ladies unattended, magnificent parlor for ladies and gentlemen, and dining parlor for gents only, complete and inviting, presided over by my former attendants, who will be found as genteel, accommodating and attentive as before.

Thanking the public for their past liberal patronage, may I not ask a continuance of the same at my "New" and elegant "Oyster Bay." Ever the public's servant,

Safe For Sale.

To any one wanting to buy a large size safe, made by the Hall Safe and Lock Co., or any person wishing to exchange a small safe for a large one, a rare bargain will be given on application at the Gossip office.

FOR SALE.—At this office—a claim of $8 against O. T. Wells, Central Cigar Store.

One dollar has been offered. Please make your bids, gentlemen.

One dollar and fifty;—do we hear two dollars? Bid lively.

The last bid is withdrawn, are you all done at one dollar?

GOING!—

The gentleman who offered one dollar desires, to reconsider, but—"we'll think on't."

G. P. Miller, of the New York Candy Store, desires us to say that he has been "sweetened" to the tune of $2 55. Misery loves company, and there's lots of it. Gracious, how Well(s) he did Cook us.

GOING!—

As this Wells has no credit and deserves none, and as he has concluded to seek other fields of uselessness, and above all, as our columns are too valuable for any longer continuation of this subject, we will dismiss it at this point, with the hope that he will endeavor to pay up in future, such confiding souls as will allow themselves to trust him.

GONE! ! !

The Holidays.

On all sides we begin to see the preliminary stir which ushers in the holiday season. Tradesmen are filling up their stores, or arranging so to do, business affairs are brightening, slowly, it is true, but improving, and soon we shall be in the full tide of the festival time of year. The cry of "hard times; no money; crops failed," etc., is fast fainting into silence, and the truth that the times are "not so bad after all," is fast gaining ground in trade circles. The bugbear of the "terrible results of the freshet—crops destroyed," served for a time to paralyze all movements tending to business interests, but that spectre has been exorcised, and a feeling of security fills its place. Now let us once more enter upon "the feast time of the year," with renewed energy and zeal, determined to extract from passing events all of hope and happiness they contain, elaborating from both, by a judicious mental alchemy, such promise of future good as can be extracted from them.—Let no spirit of distrust enter into our pursuit of worldly interests, no dread paralyze our efforts, no suspicions annoy, no apathy impede our way. Energy, honest intent, and tolerant co-operation, will best ensure success in every walk of life, and inspired by these sentiments, one may always achieve success.

PERSONAL.—Frank Dell is on the lookout for the man who says that his big solitaire isn't genuine, and that block coal don't pan out well. He says the man who intimates that he cant dazzle the eyes of any person who looks through the pigeou hole of the ticket office at the Grand Opera House, is a falsifier and a prevaricator, who would do well to read the history of Annanias and Sapphira.—Frank is fast ripening into a champion ticket tosser, and is a worthy pupil of his instructor, Jimmy Dickson.

Skinner, he of the Camel boot and shoe store, is a sportsman and has a keen scent for game. We give it on the veracity of the youthful assistant of Skinner & McGee, who, like his immortal namesake, George Washington, cant tell a lie, (that is, without a consideration,) that Skinner went out after game, a few days ago, and didn't return empty handed, either. George says the "game" that Skinner brought home, was raised in a farm-yard, and was brought down by a "charge" from Skinner's purse. Of course, the indignant sportsman declares the story a "fowl" slander, for which he will make Georgie quail.

In speaking of the termination to the Munson—Robertson affair, a young lady friend of the Gossip, Miss Carrie H—s, says she thinks Munson took an awful long time to find out his own mind. To our suggestion that this case is a warning against long engagements, she declared, "When I make up my mind to get married, I aint going to risk either of backing out. I'm going to get married off hand, and so stop all that nonsense." Sensible girl.

Mrs. D. M. Jordan was in the city on Monday last, and attended the opening of the Grand Hotel. Early in the evening Mrs. J. looked into the new Grand Opera House and expressed herself well pleased with our new buildings. A call upon the Gossip was one of the pleasantest features of the visit—to us.

Frank Walker went into Perry's drug store a few days ago, enquiring for "Grains of Paradise," but as Perry was just then holding a literary coterie, Frank couldn't get his G. of P., and concluded to unprove his mind by joining the coterie aforesaid. Ask him about the watering place complication.

Mr. A. P. Ross, of the I. P. & C. Ry General Office, says he doesn't think much of the overcoat somebody "borrowed" from him a few days ago; "it wasn't much of a coat, anyhow, but the contents of the pockets were particularly dear." He declares his fixed determination, to keep his next outside garment locked up, and carry the keys safe in his overcoat pocket. By this judicious arrangement, he hopes to be able to circumvent all sorts of combinations, and avoid making involuntary donations of wearing apparel etc., to strangers.

Chris. Hendricks, chief clerk at Asa W. Burrow's confectionery, is just the man for the place he fills, as he has grown up in the place and fully understands his business. He is a good fellow, and will make himself popular with all.

"The Met."

As usual, the attendance at this popular theater during the present week, has been very good, in fact, a poor house at "The Met" is a matter of such unusual occurrence as to be classed almost as an impossibility. The attractions now being offered are first rate, as usual, and thus the patronage is well deserved. Manager McCarty has secured a first-class company for the season, and even were no stars offered, there would be no falling off in the interest, as the "stock" are equal to any emergency. Clark Gibbs, Marsh Adams, Al. S. Lipman, Geo. Beane, Fannie Beane, and the others, are a host, and their performances are always excellent. Miss Jennie Wade, the Holland Brothers, Jennie Eagan, and Josie Farren, are all first-rate, and an evening passed with them is a pleasure. On Sunday evening, the "Carolina Jubilee Singers" will give a Sacred Concert, assisted by Prof. Beisenherz and his fine orchestra, and a treat may be anticipated. Next week Miss Rena, in "Cush," the Victorelli's, and other fine attractions.

James Russell Lowell has invented a new Beatitude: "Blessed are those who have nothing to say and can not be persuaded to say it." But history mentions the case of a boy who had nothing to say, and yet he was far, far from blessed.—[Detroit News.]

Please name the boy, and the occasion.

A hen never has a regular meal—she always gets a picked-up dinner.—[Commercial Bulletin] And she has to scratch around considerably to get it too. But then it doesn't cost anything. She has it all put down in the bill.—[Boston Advertiser.] And that "sticks in her crop."

We commend the following to the attention of one of our neighbors: There is only one thing worse than ignorance, and that is conceit. Of all intractable fools, an overwise man is the worst.

On With the Dance.—The Capital City Base Ball Club is making arrangements for a ball to come off some time during the month of November. An efficient committee has the matter in charge, and a splendid affair is certain. Full announcement hereafter.

Chas. Gorsuch, the enterprising agent of the Hall Safe and Lock Co., has sold to Messrs. L. S. Ayres & Co., for their new Trade Palace, in Wright & Bradshaw's block, the beautiful Vienna Exposition safe, which attracted so much attention at our Exposition, and which won the world's premium. This safe is by far the finest specimen of safe we have ever seen, combining strength and beauty to a degree seldom attained even by this justly celebrated firm. Messrs. Ayres & Co., may congratulate themselves on being owners of the handsomest safe ever made.

The Indianapolis Brass and Supply Co., are fast assuming a leading position, not only in the ordinary line of builders supplies, but as bell founders. They have just cast and finished two excellent bells, weighing respectively 1000 and 2000 pounds, for the German Lutheran Church, and the Meridian Street School house. These bells are said to be models, both in tone and construction.

The Cigar Makers' Ball at Mozart Hall, Nov. 15th, will undoubtedly be one of the pleasantest affairs of the season, as their parties are always highly enjoyable. At the rate at which tickets are going off, there is no question of a well filled hall.

There is a whole world of gospel in the following lines from a little poem in the North End Mission Magazine:

"But I've tho't a great deal about it,
And I've kind of made it ont,
That the way to bring up a boy,
Isn't just to kick him about.
I don't think much of talking,
And I haven't much to say—
But the better you use a creature
The more you will get in pay.

The objection to the Exposition Grounds for base ball purposes is, it is impossible to mark out a foul field on Fair ground.

A fowl bawl—a hencoop discuss.

A newspaper is the only instrument which can drop the same thought into a thousand minds at the same moment.

The excesses of our youth are drafts upon our old age, payable with interest, about thirty years after date.

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of a great action is gone, like the bloom from a soiled flower.

Gaming leaves no satisfaction behind it to those who reflect when it is over; and in no wise profits either mind or body.

'68 to Shilling, 55 West Washington Street, for anything in the line of trunks, valises, &c. One is always certain of receiving the best article at a fair price, who deals with him.

The Gossip Job Office, at Rooms 21 and 22 Talbott Block, is the best place for all who are in want of any kind of Printing.

Perry isn't a Perry-patetic vender of drugs and sich, and any one who will Perry grinate past the corner of Pennsylvania and Market streets, will be sure to see his Perry-cranium. As the Herald says, "he is a man of cents, scents, and sense," with occasionally a little nonsense thrown in by way of flavor. His store is the headquarters for all choice spirits (not ardent), and one is always certain to receive prompt attention and courteous treatment. Call on Perry for anything in his line.

No entertainment is so cheap as reading, nor any pleasure so lasting.

The New York Dandy Store, No. 11 North Meridian St., is become a popular place, as Miller understands how to make the most tempting styles of confectionery, and as he sells at low prices, his patrons are constantly increasing. Wm. Snarr, one of Miller's old clerks, is at present behind the counter, selling sweets as tho' he understood his business to a perfection.

Andy Sharpe has got another good thing, and we think is bound to make the people see it. His new brand, "The Big Bonanza," will be such, without doubt; but he still keeps up the old favorites, "Bon Ton," "La Intimidad," "Best Beloed," "Flor del Fumer," and always has in stock the very choicest Fine Cuts and other tobaccos. Andy is always bound to keep ahead.

ARGUMENT.

An irascible old "toy-maker," who has a mania for experimenting in magic and the "black art," wishing to secure a wife for his wayward son, but having a poor opinion of women in general, he toils for years to perfect a life-sized Doll to which he proposes to impart life, and thereby give his boy a wife after his own heart. The Doll is completed, and on the evening of which this scene opens, the old man is waiting for the conditions of the weather to be suitable to the life-giving ceremonies—which calls for rain, snow, hail, thunder and lightning. This night being abominably pleasant, he takes his son to sup with a friend, leaving his nephew (whom he has robbed of a small fortune and kept down as an apprentice) and servant maid to look after the house. While he is away the nephew dons the garb of Mephistopheles, and awaits his sweetheart, a pretty milliner, who is going to the masquerade with him, but unfortunately on his arrival he finds she has no costume, and rather than be outwitted he decides she shall wear the dress of the Doll. While in the act of dressing the terrific storm long hoped for arises, bringing the old man and son home in hot haste, and there being no way out of it, she takes the place of the Doll, and the old man is fooled, through the aid of his "Satanic Majesty," into believing his masterpiece is brought to life. But alas! instead of an "Angel," he finds he has awakened a Demon, for she abuses father and son, smashes the dishes, breaks their toys and finally drives them almost insane with her mad pranks, which causes the old man to repent, and vow to make way with her at once; when he is accosted by his nephew in his Satanic Costume, who offers to take her away for a certain sum, shrewdly naming the small fortune he was deprived of. This is agreed upon. Mutual understanding. Clouds disappear. Everybody happy and our Jollities are over.

The Mitigating Plea.

"A Tin Soldier" is an unassuming effort to present a few character sketches in an amusing form. It may possibly illustrate the every-day events of domestic life, and incidentally narrate some of the odd ways of plumbers.

"A Tin Soldier" is a collection of incidents, with musical interruptions, and is called "A Tin Soldier" because somebody has already used the title. "Mathusalem," and is announced as musical, etc., giving everybody a chance to exercise individual taste and fancy in describing it.

There are three acts; the author believing the audience entitled to two chances to rest and think of something else.

"A Tin Soldier" makes no attempt to teach a moral. The author has simply thrown his energies in an effort to avoid the immoral, and if he has succeeded, feels that he has done mighty well for these times.

HUMOR OF THE DAY.

When is a tree like a boader at a hotel minus funds? Why, when it leaves, and its trunk is seized for boards. "Twig."

A person is reminded of that old saying, "Bring flowers, sweet flowers," as they pass Nanz & Neuner's Floral Bazaar and see the rare flowers in the windows, and inhale the fragrance from the hot-house adjoining.

"Tulips close at night, or will do the same if placed in a dark room in the day time," says the Waterloo Observer. Tu-lips meets tu-lips under the same condition.

A lady with a pretty set of teeth is always admired, and just to think, Dr. C. G. Wayt will make a beautiful set for $5.00, put in gold fillings from $1.00 up. These prices are within the reach of everybody.

"Humorists never like to ride behind a chestnut horse," says an exchange. "How do they like an old saw-rel, or would they rather ride the roan Pegasus?"

It is curious to look around at the different kinds of machinery, but Thos. Bottomly has struck the key-note by adding the most improved machines in the "The Old Reliable" Steam Laundry, so now the washing is done without wearing out the goods, and within a few hours.

"The number of suicides committed in front of altars in the Italian basilicas is largely on the increase." It would be well to remove the increase if that is the favorite spot and the altar can get along as well without it.

The Louisville Jewelry Bazaar, No. 206 West Jefferson Street, is selling good nickel-plated clocks for 80 cents, and jewelry at equally low prices. Call and examine and be convinced.

"It would be as well to be out of the world as out of the fashion," is an old saying that should be remembered, also that Henry W. Eddleman is the fashionable hatter of this city, at whose store the rich and poor can be supplied.

Many girls attract a man by their fine figures, and it's the girl that has the most figures—in her own right—who gets the most attention.

Housekeepers should remember that A. A. Glass, the Troy Steam Laundry man, makes a specialty of washing curtains, laces, etc.; also the best and quickest laundry work.

A philosopher says: "Man was born to rule in this world." It is believed that the philosopher never was married.

Now the base ball season is upon us, the Louisville club will be with us for over a month, and of course every person who takes a delight in sports of any kind will call on J. W. Reccius & Bro. and supply themselves. Billy has everything in the sporting line at reasonable prices.

A speechless lady regained her tongue by a fall down stairs, in Hannibal, Mo. Let this be a warning to men who have speechless wives to have the stairs removed and an elevator put in immediately.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to say before sentence is passed?" "No, your honor, replied the prisoner, "my lawyer took my last cent."

In an Ohio [illegible] the other day a woman went about insisting that she was mayor of the place. She declared, also, that she wanted to resign, and then every body knew she was insane.

NOVEMBER 24th, THREE NIGHTS AND WEDNESDAY MATINEE, DENMAN THOMPSON'S CELEBRATED PLAY.
THE OLD HOMESTEAD,
A PASTORAL DRAMA OF NEW ENGLAND.
Acknowledged By CLERGY, PRESS AND PUBLIC to be the Best Domestic Play Ever Written.
Presented here with the same minuteness of detail which characterizes Mr. Thompson's production at the Academy of Music in New York City, where the play is now in its FOURTH SEASON.
American character, of which so much has come and will yet be written, forever proves the refreshing fact that the public taste for frivolous nonsense has been satisfied, and the demand for something meritorious. It contains too much human nature, kindly, pathetic humorous and simple to call it a play. Plain, homely Joshua Whitcomb, the New England farmer, who has been for a long time one of the most real and lovable creatures to haunt the onte country in his faithful devotion to an erring son, whom he saves from destruction, preaches by his actions and words the most powerful sermon ever heard. Besides being a strong every-day play, "The Old Home-tead" has an historical value in its perfect reproduction of the New England life which has always been a part of this country, and may, before another generation, become a thing of the past. The plot is a thread that holds together the moving panorama of city and country life, bringing back to all who witness it a dear memory of "old home ways." This drama is full of health and good cheer. It makes you laugh, says a critic, till the tears roll down your face, and weep till you laugh again. It is replete with quaint types and loaded down with honest character. It has won undiluted praise from the clergy. They endorse it as simple and pure, with a moral, as well as an amusing purpose. Numbers of prominent clergymen of the East have witnessed and endorsed the comedy, as an entertainment to which a husband can take his wife, and a mother her children, without fear of their finer sensibilities being shocked.
Commencing Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 27-28-29, and Saturday Matinee,
MR. RICHARD MANSFIELD, in BEAU BRUMMELL.

We lost in other years;
There above the little grave,
O, there above the little grave,

Superbly Acted and Beautifully Staged.

THE STAR CAST:
The name of the Madison Square Theatre has been associated with such eminently successful productions that an announcement of the coming of one of its companies is a guarantee of a pure play, excellently acted, and beautifully mounted. The reputation of the theatre is such that the management could ill afford to recede in the least particular from the high standard which has been adopted. Amusement-goers, therefore, may be assured that the production of "Young Mrs. Winthrop" will be of such a character as to reflect credit on the theatre. The play will be presented with a reproduction of the original Madison Square scenery and with the following powerful athletic ensemble:
DOUGLAS WINTHROP, A Man of Business.....Mr. E. J. BUCKLEY

THE KHEDIVE'S EGYPT;

OR,

THE OLD HOUSE OF BONDAGE UNDER NEW MASTERS.

By EDWIN DE LEON.

With Illustrations. 12mo, Cloth, $1 50.

Mr. De Leon lived behind the scenes in Egypt during the rule of three successive viceroys. * * * It is, in fact, this personal knowledge, spiced as it often is with ready anecdote, and setting before us, as it always does, the leading men of modern Egypt with the distinctness of fellow-guests at a table d'hôte, that gives much of Mr. De Leon's work its greatest charm.—Graphic, London.

There is a great deal of life and color in this amusing and instructive work, whose writer knows well how to lead to his statement of facts the relief of picturesque description and illustration, by historical, national, and individual traits of character and character in Egypt.—Spectator, London.

This book contains a very considerable amount of information, and Mr. De Leon contrives to impart it in an agreeable manner. Any one who reads it carefully, and remembers what he has read, will possess an almost exhaustive knowledge of the recent history, economical condition, and financial prospects of Egypt. The author writes with as much impartiality as boldness.—Evening Standard, London.

Mr. De Leon's admirable and most charming volume. * * * The book is an excellent one, and a most valuable contribution to political as well as to general literature.—Morning Advertiser, London.

Mr. De Leon's book deserves, and doubtless will take, a high place in public estimation as a comprehensive, well-digested, and, on the whole, impartial exposition of the condition of Egypt under its present ruler.—Scotsman, Edinburgh.

This book will be read with interest and profit by all who wish for information respecting the present state of Egypt. Mr. De Leon writes with knowledge and with impartiality, and no other book gives so succinct an account of the financial condition of the country and of the position of its industrial enterprises.—World, London.

The oldest civilized country in the world furnishes material for one of the most interesting books recently published. Mr. Edwin De Leon has written a most admirable description of the country—perspicuous, animated, impartial, and full of information.—Morning News, London.

It is a first-rate, rattling book on Egypt, touching off, in a vivid manner, and in great part from personal knowledge, the characteristics of four viceroys; the changes which the country has undergone during their reigns; the characters and appearance of their ministers and of distinguished Europeans connected with Egypt; its foreign population, its fellaheen, irrigation, education, slavery, finances, resources, judicial tribunals, army, and annexations; together with some pleasing pictures of the Egyptian landscape.—Academy, London.

MODJESKA.

An artist of rare sensibility and refinement, wide experience and exceptional culture, made her first appearance in this city at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, yesterday evening. We refer to Mme. Helena Modjeska, who came hither from California, where she acted a few weeks ago with real success, and where arrangements for her debut in New York were completed. She was born in Poland, she acted many years in the Imperial Theatre in Warsaw, and she journeyed to the Golden State in pursuit of health During a twelvemonth's sojourn near San Francisco she studied Eug ish, and at once accepted a proposal to perform in the California theatre. The critiques of which she was then the subject do not deceive the reader. By all spectators whose praise is worth anything, Mme. Modjeska must be accounted a great actress. In appearance she is of medium height and slender and graceful figure; her face is attractive, sympathetic and extremely intellectual, her voice is sweet, is flexible, but possessed of a silvery timbre which lingers in the ear long after the tones have left the speaker's lips; her accent, though clearcut, is never unpleasant. Her art is that highest of all arts—method in everything, but method so concealed that it is only detected by its fruits. Those who hope to enjoy representations bristling with "points," and lurid, at well-timed moments, with flashes of lighting or claps of trap-drum, will never rise to the appreciation of this actress' work. It is so symmetrical, so skillfully-balanced, so smooth, so elegant that its most marked excellences must escape the vulgar eye, as the beauties of a Meissonier the glance of an admirer of chrome-lithographs Last night's audience, however, was of no common kind, and tokens of appreciation were never wanting. The piece in which Mme. Modjeska appeared is a familiar one, and hardly a favorite. "Adrienne Lecouvreur" was originally written for Rachel, and she performed in it, if we are not mistaken, under protest. It has since been played by most tragediennes, but has hold upon the public has not been particularly firm. During the three acts the heroine has little or nothing to do, and her share of the proceedings in the last two must make amends for all the dullness that has gone before. The experience of yesterday was of the wonted nature, though the force of the final "situation" in the third act was felt at that stage of events. Throughout the piece Mme. Modjeska acted with infinite delicacy, sentiment and skill. We can scarcely recall what may be called a more soulful effort, and in none within the memory of the present generation has the supreme art of the actor—the art of interesting, of captivating, and of moving by the heat, and therefore least perceptible, means—been a more grateful demonstration. Th labors of the Polish player would b poorly described by allusions to any special stage of the action. Her Adrienne was gentle, sweet, and touching in all her early dealings with Maurice de Saxe, bitter and stinging, but unvarnishly noble and courtly, in her conflict with the Princess, and pathetic and tearful beyond measure in the final scenes with her lover. Bits of what is technically but harshly called "business" of the most felicitous sort delighted the observer throughout the drama. Her change of facial expression and attitude when she leaves Maurice to step before the footlights in the second act was one of a dozen instances which might be cited, while the attentive spectator must have noticed that not for one minute was the actress aught but the author's Adrienne, a woman loving Maurice de Saxe, hated by a Princess, surrounded by rivals and foes, and with heart and mind ever active in passion or defense. The portions of "Adrienne Lecouvreur" by which the liveliest impressions were sought came, as implied, toward the close. The fourth act, in which she overwhelms the Princess with her rhymed denunciation, terminated with a fine illustration of her rejection of Maurice de Saxe's love, and in the fifth act, the affecting death scene—replete with realistic touches, and yet so completely freed from the gross materialism of imitation, that these so-called students of death in hospitals, who bring but the coarser traits of dissolution to satisfy the morbid appetites of the crowd it should be held up as an example and a reproach—was followed by loud applause. Mme Modjeska's representation of Adrienne must be seen again, let us add, before being discussed from critical attention.—N. Y. Times.

THE SEA OF ICE;

OR, A MOTHER'S PRAYER.

This thrilling drama was originally produced in London during the year 1853, where it had an unparalleled run of over 200 nights—creating the novelty of the situations, the thrilling skill with which its many incidents are elaborated, and above all by the heart-touching moral of its story, the widest excitement. Its first production in this country occurred in Boston, quickly followed at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y. Its marked success at both those cities induced the management at Holliday Street Theatre to attempt its representation in a style of splendor and effect which they designed should far surpass aught previously exhibited in its production—to that end they procured, at a great outlay of money and care, the Original Models and Scenic Designs of this great play as first presented at the London Theatres—and on the night of March 3d, 1856, it was first produced by Manager Ford in Baltimore, crowding his spacious theatre from parquette to dome. In evidence of its literally unprecedented success, it may be instanced that in two weeks it nightly attracted densely crowded audiences, comprising our regular and habitual play-goers not only, but parents, heads of families, clergymen, and hundreds of our citizens who for many years previously ceased to visit them even—the enthusiasm in its favor extended to all classes, and the beauties and mysterious effects of "The Sea of Ice" became the fruitful theme of social conversations on the streets, on 'Change and in the home circles of that city—and when in infilment of arrangements previously entered into it was eventually, though reluctantly withdrawn.

STAGE NOTES.

THE CRUSHED TRAGEDIAN will soon appear in this city.

MODJESKA, the Polish Countess, is pronounced by the New York Times to be a second Rachel." Is now at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York.

BOUCICAULT is crowding the Grand Opera House, New York to see "The Shaughraun," which has already had a run in that city of fully fifty-two weeks.

EDWIN BOOTH commenced an engagement at his own theatre, New York, on Monday January, 7th for six weeks. Opening in his own arrangement of Shakespeare's "Richard the 3rd"

IT IS SAID that the largest audience in any theatre in the country on New Year's day was attracted by Maggie Mitchell to the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati. The receipts day and night exceeding $3 000. Maggie is deservedly a great favorite with families.

STRAKOSCH & Grand Italian and English Opera Company will appear on Monday, January 21st at Ford's Grand Opera House, Baltimore.

WILLIAMSON AND MOORE These great comic artists so successful in their beautiful drama of "Struck Oil," will soon visit Baltimore. The play and company are the same that opened the present season at the Union Square Theatre, New York.

LOUIS L. JAMME, of Manager Ford's Baltimore Company, is acting the leading character in the great drama of "The Exiles," at the Boston Theatre. Mr. James was to have acted with Mr. Booth in New York through Mr. Ford's consent, but the success of "The Exiles" has proven so great, that Mr. Booth has consented to cancel the engagement, so as to permit him to remain in Boston.

THE NEW YORK PAPERS announce Miss Eleanor Carey in Mr. Booth's company for a period of six weeks, "by permission of Mr J. T. Ford, of Baltimore." Mr. Milnes Levick is with the same company.

FACTS OF INTEREST.

A bank president in New Hampshire recently took an endowment policy of insurance for $100,000, on which the premium is $8,500 a year. Banking business must be good. The same amount placed in the assessment companies of this State would have cost only $83 a year.

Jay Gould has $800,000 insurance on his life. Is it worth it?

There are lots of men who read this who sleep soundly on the fact that if death comes to-night they will leave their families penniless. Are you one? If so, call at once on the Massachusetts Benefit Association, which is the largest association in New England, and provide for your family at a cost so low you will not feel it.

THE inauguration of the popular price in Opera Puffs Cigarettes goes into effect to-day. The Opera Puffs Cigarette will find a cordial welcome among its old patrons, who had deprived themselves, owing to its additional cost.

LADIES—Call at STORER'S Bleachery, 673 and 678 Washington St., and have your Hats and Bonnets made into the latest styles.

America is ahead on spool cotton, and Willimantic is the best American thread,—that is why you should buy it. Be sure you get Willimantic six-cord, with bronze label on one end of the spool, and red star on the other.

We all remember how cities attempted to destroy his dog, and the dog could not see it. 'Cause why? The ambition of that dog's life had not been fulfilled; he wanted one of our collars. Collars marked, etc.

A. W. MITCHELL, 200 Washington St.

Clifford's Perfumes 40cts. per ounce. All odors open to smell before buying. Lohan's Genuine Extracts. Clifford's Compagne to arrange the hair, moustache or whiskers in any desired position, 25 cents per package. Toilet Articles of every description. CLIFFORD, PERFUMER, 25 SCHOOL ST., Boston.

Skilled labor, well paid and contented, and the best of material, are sure to give a good result. For evidence of this try Willimantic six-cord spool cotton for sewing machines.

THE SQUIBBS AUTOMATIC ENGRAVING CO.—The popularity of our new process of engraving photographs on gold and silver has attracted a number of imitators, who call their manufactures "The New Art" after our original card. To protect the public from imposition we shall be known, from this time, as "The Squibbs Automatic Engraving Co.," represented in Boston only by C. A. W. CROSBY, 474 Washington Street, where beautiful examples of our work will be shown all visitors. We engrave any subject, any size, on any surface. Photographs a specialty, and satisfaction guaranteed. We challenge comparison. SQUIBBS CO., 474 Washington Street.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET.

NO BONES TO BREAK.

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principles of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size; consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other Corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

By a recent ruling of the Custom House authorities, by which the duties on the yager ambre have been largely reduced, the popular Opera Puffs Cigarettes are now sold at ten cents per package. RECEPTION AND PROMENADE.—Boston Lodge of Elks announces that it will give a grand reception and promenade in the great hall of the Mechanics' Building, Huntington Avenue, on the evening of Easter Monday, April 6th. The affair promises to be a brilliant success, as the most elaborate preparations are being made. Music will be furnished by the American Band of Providence, R. I., Prof. Jas. D. W. THE IMPROVED
COMFORT CORSET.

NO BONES TO BREAK.

Ladies who have not been fitted with the Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size; consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other Corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

Miss Fanny Davenport

In Sardou's greatest sensation, "La Tosca," will begin a limited engagement in the Boston Theatre on Monday evening, Dec. 3d. Her success in this play thus far has eclipsed even the brilliancy of her "Fedora" career. The play will be presented here with all the accessories and scenic grandeur that characterized the productions in New York and Paris, with over one hundred people in the production.

over 1800 York Safes sold by CURTIS, 104 Sudbury, within 26 mos.

Fun, Fiction and Fact.

—Miss Penelope: "Before I give you an answer, Marshall, I want you to know that I believe the married state is simply a reinforced condition for the better amelioration of the wrongs and sufferings of women. Do you subscribe to me?"

Mr. Mallow: "I think I do; and, if you'll allow me, I'll go a little. Won't you be a sister to me?"

—If you want to reach the greatest number of people, put your "want ad" in the columns of the BOSTON GLOBE, which has the largest circulation of any newspaper in New England.

—An Italian has invented a balance upon which every dreams, or the fall of a pin, or the sound during sleep, turns blood enough to the brain to produce a measurable impression.

—It's always best to take advantage of a good thing when you see it. If you want to, you consult the "Want" columns of the GLOBE.

—Frenchman: "Yes, Miss Bostonia, in the Mediterranean I sailed through schools of sardines."

Miss Bostonia: "Nonsense! How could they swim in those heavy tin boxes?"

—How the presses did fly in the GLOBE office the day after election! Over 634,000 papers were printed; and that number of people all over New England stood up to be counted as GLOBE readers. This is the largest genuine success ever chronicled by any newspaper in New England.

—City man: "Is this locality healthy?" Countryman: "Healthy? You bet we're healthy. We've got to be. There ain't a doctor within forty miles."

—If you want anything under the sun, look in the "want ad" of the GLOBE and you will find it.

—Hadji Hussein Khouli Khan, Persian Ambassador at Washington, always sleeps with his hands resting in a pan of cold water. He got into this habit because he had been used to a warm climate, and could cool his blood in this way.

—All active, energetic, pushing young business men, who want to make more money, should consult the business chances columns of the GLOBE. There are tips there that mean money.

FAR AWAY LITTLE FOLKS.

THINK! Have you not some little child, some young friend in a distant city, some loving companion of the past summer, some dear boy or girl in a foreign country you would like to make happy by a suitable and pretty gift? Of course you have,—every one has. You would like to do so, no doubt; but there is the bother, what to select, the mailing, etc. So, finally, at your wits' end, you give it up.

Stop, do not let your better thoughts be so easily vanquished. Allow us to make you a suggestion.

EDITHA'S BURGLAR,

By Frances Hodgson Burnett,

Is just the present any English-speaking boy or girl in the wide, wide world would like to have. It is the most charming book of the year. We have them ready in good, strong, heavy envelopes, stamped, and ready for the U. S. Mail-boy, which hangs by. Nothing is needed but the address. A pen and ink are at hand, the deed is done. The child is sure to be happy, and so are you.

Mr. Charles Bouret, of Paris.

We claim to make the only glove to compare with the real Parisian article made in this country. This department is not manipulated with the idea to make money solely, but to give to our patrons all and every advantage in being correctly gloved, as we can take your measure and deliver a pair of gloves in

HARBINGERS OF SPRING.

An unfortunate Maine baby that happened to be born on the day of the grasshopper's golden wedding was named Anna Versary.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Robinson are solid citizens of Charlestown, Mass. They have been married fifty years. Mr. Robinson weighs 278 pounds, Mrs. Robinson weighs 225, and of their seven living children none weighs less than 200 pounds.

A new continued story, by a famous author, will begin this week in the BOSTON DAILY GLOBE. Look out for it!

FOUR YEARS AGO Addison Gifford, of North Rochester, Mass., went shooting. His dog started a fox, followed it, and never returned. A few days ago Mr. Gifford was out again when another dog which started a fox and chased it to its hole. Mr. Gifford began to dig the fox out, and while at work unearthed the skeleton of a dog, the collar on the neck of which showed that it was his own lost dog. It had evidently tried to dig the fox out and got fast in the hole.

The average circulation of the BOSTON DAILY GLOBE in January was 120,665, which is the last ever recorded in its history. The average of the BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE for January was 119,006. The GLOBE (DAILY and SUNDAY) has a larger circulation than any other newspaper in Boston.

According to statistics gathered by the Railroad Gazette, there were in December last 92 railroad collisions, 83 derailments and seven other accidents, making 182 in all; in which 71 persons were killed and 211 injured.

The BOSTON GLOBE prints more "Want" advertisements than any other Boston paper. Compare it with the others on this point, or on any other.

A citizen of Salina, Kan., saw a big jack rabbit sitting by the side of the road. He ran home, a quarter of a mile, got his gun, ran back, and fired a charge of shot into the rabbit, which was still sitting there. Even then it did not move; and further investigation showed that it was frozen stiff.

THE JUDGES, Messrs. Hitchings, Moses and Roth, in their report to the Governing Board of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics' Association in awarding to us the first prize (gold medal) over all competitors, including such studios as Hardy, Holland & Robert to Fritz, Partridge, Chickering, Ritz, and others, say that they base their award "for general success in the artistic arrangement of groups, and in the pose of heads and single figures, and for the highest results in all departments of photographic portrait work." 'Twas an honor well earned. Good work rarely misses true appreciation.

The rubbing process is becoming general in its application, yet it is a troublesome and expensive form of treatment compared with the cheapness and efficiency of the "Wilsonia" Magnetic Corsets, which are recommended by skilful physicians.

COMFORT CORSET.

No Bones to Break.

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of abonsider sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other Corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

Messrs. WM. B. RIKER & SON:

Gentlemen,—Having heard your American Face Powder so highly commanded, I have been anxious to try it. Since my arrival in New York I have done so, and I must say that it fully justifies its brilliant reputation.

Yours sincerely,

CLARA LOUISE KELLOGG will not sing any more after she gets married. It is said she will lecture on the merits of Opera Puffs Cigarettes.

THERE has been a great decline of brilliant wit by the young paragraphers of the American press. Some, having got married, are nursing something besides feeble jokes. The brilliancy of wit could be returned by inhaling the delicious flavor of the Opera Puffs Cigarettes.

WOMEN accuse politicians of stealing time away by being devoted to red tape and smoking Opera Puffs Cigarettes. No one can decide what particular color of tape the ladies are partial to, but if the politicians lose any more time over red tape than they do over assorted tapes, they are doing well.

This was the unanimous decision of the Judges at the Paris Exposition, World's Fair, London, Centennial at Philadelphia, and American Institute Fair (recently held in New York City). That Thomson's Patent Glove Fitting Corsets were superior to all others in shape, style, quality of material, finish and general excellence and worthy of all merit as claimed for them by the manufacturers, Thomson, Langdon & Co., New York.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET.

No Bones to Break.

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Coresis without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of abondier sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other Corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

Mary Anderson.

This gifted and favorite artiste will remain for a few nights only, and take her farewell with the performances to be given on the 25th inst. This fact will indnce her legions of friends and admirers to assemble in large numbers at her every appearance. The selections are: —

Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 20 and 21, 1882, and Saturday afternoon, Feb. 25, W. S. Gilbert's play, Pygmalion and Galatea. Mary Anderson as Galatea.

Wednesday, Feb. 22, gala matinee, Mrs. Lovell's romantic play, Ingomar. Mary Anderson as Parthenia.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 22, Shakespeare's play, Romeo and Juliet. Mary Anderson as Juliet.

Thursday and Friday evenings, Feb. 23 and 24, Knowles' play, The Hunchback.

Saturday evening, Feb. 25, benefit and farewell of Miss Anderson, Romeo and Juliet.

The Ideal Opera Company.

Our "home favorites," the Ideal Opera Company, will begin a limited season here on the 27th inst., and give a succession of their delightful lyric entertainments. They will have a cordial welcome home.

Monday, Chimes of Normandy; Tuesday, Mascot; Wednesday, Bohemian Girl; Thursday, Musketeers; Friday, Pirates of Penzance; Saturday matinee, Mascot; Saturday night, Fatinitza.

The World.

The great realistic drama of The World is in preparation for presentation here, and the efforts of the management to make it a companion production to Michael Strogoff is warrant that it will be received with the favor always accorded to plays of merit.

M. Mamert, for the past two seasons ballet master at this theatre, is giving lessons in dancing and deportment to classes of ladies and gentlemen. He is an accomplished teacher, and his terms are moderate. Instruction given at residences. His address is Boston Theatre.

Interesting news for neat sewers is that the "Corticelli" Spool Silk and Button-hole Twist are the best in the market. For elasticity, evenness, uniformity of thickness, closeness of fibre, and their non-liability to knot or ravel renders them without a rival.

The Charles S. Cayfery Co., of Camden, N. J., who have warerooms on Chestor Street, above Race, Philadelphia, Pa., have become famous the country over for the beauty, strength, and elegance of the Road Wagons, Sulkies, and Skeletons sent out from their manufactory. Many of their rigs are in use in this vicinity.

"A MAN out in New Jersey attempted to vaccinate a bulldog the other day, just for an experiment," said a man in a cafe the other evening.

"It took, I presume," replied his companion.

"Took! Well, I should say it did; the bulldog crouched like a ball, and, letting himself suddenly out, took a couple of fingers off the man, who took to his heels. Like the Opera Puffs Cigarettes, it was one of the supremest cases of took on record."

THE wife of the new Chinese agent of the Opera Puffs Cigarettes has such small feet that she cannot go about unsupported. American girls may not have such small feet, but they display as much enterprise as the Chinese women in getting business to support them.

COMFORT CORSET.

No Bones to Break.

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other Corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

A. F. COPELAND'S Washington Street Store and Restaurant has surely become the greatest Resort in the city for after-theatre lunches of all kinds. Being without doubt the most elegantly furnished and most convenient restaurant, as it is within two minutes' walk of the theatre, and cars to all parts of the city passing day and night, — it justly deserves for the excellence of its bill of fare and the courtesy of its attendants the large patronage it now holds. Catering for Wedding Parties a specialty. An elegant large room connected with the Washington Street store, where parties or clubs of from five to fifty may be served entirely apart from the large saloon. COPELAND'S Famous Ice Creams and Ices are now known the world over.

Stylish and tasty as a French Corset, yet combining ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

In the place of bones we insert continuous rows of very stiff cord, which give all the support of bones, with the advantage of yielding to every movement of the form, and of being washed without changing the fitness of the garment.

The whole burden of the clothes is transferred to that part of the shoulder best adapted to sustain their weight; supporting everything without the least inconvenience, and almost without the wearer's consciousness, realizing the same we give to the garment, making it in very truth

SPRING NOTICE.

In inviting attention to the stock which we have prepared for the spring season, in our retail departments, we wish to remark that while we are anxious to keep up the quality of the goods which we manufacture to the usual standard, we have endeavored to meet the demand for low prices this season, by marking many important articles, in all departments, at as near the actual cost of production as possible.

In our Custom Department, we offer a very handsome line of Scotch, English, and American fancy suitings, at thirty-five and forty dollars for suits made to order. An excellent quality of French black worsted diagonals, imported by ourselves, for double-breasted frock coat, made to order in the best manner, $28; single-breasted coat, $25; vest, $6 (about 20 per cent less than usual prices for similar fabrics).

In our Retail clothing department, Business Suits, having all the appearance and qualities of Custom-made garments, at from $18.50 to $32. Overcoats, including some of the handsomest goods ever shown in Boston, at $14 to $30. Trousers, $5 to $10. Fine Double-breasted French Worsted Frocks, $22 and $25.

Our Ready-made clothing is made in the best possible style and manner, our sales in this department being largely to those who have formerly had their clothing made to order.

In our furnishing goods department we make a specialty of fine shirts, keeping in stock regularly three grades, which we sell this season at $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 each, and which are the best qualities that can possibly be furnished at the respective prices. We also make to order, shirts from the finest materials, with the best workmanship, guaranteed perfect in fit and shape, at the rate of $36 per dozen; price last year, $42.

We mean that all goods sold by us shall be thoroughly good, and fully worth the price which we receive. As all the tests which we have found to be of value in our experience of twenty-five years in the business are applied in the selection of materials, and the greatest degree of care exercised in the manufacture of our goods, we feel confident that gentlemen will find it decidedly to their advantage to examine our stock when about making spring purchases.

He has secured the services of Mr. C. H. Averell, who has had an experience of twenty years as a salesman, and who has the reputation of being one of the best posted men in this line of business in Boston.

A fact worth remembering,—that the colors of kid gloves vary to the extent of twelve hundred shades, no two of which are exactly alike. Very few people are aware of the fact that of the entire number of colors, ten hundred of the entire number can be found at the Kid Glove Establishment of Gifford, Simpson & Co., 59 Temple Place. ROMEO AND JULIET.

Her snow-white arms steeped me tight,
Her warm kisses thrilled with delight;
Furoxysmal were her fervent caresses,
Glorious were her dark-brown tresses;
Her murmured words were sweeter than honey,
Her passionate love more precious than money;
She was wholly mine—in me she trusted,
And would stick to me, even if I were busted!
How sweetly she thrummed the light guitar,
As I smoked a delicious Havana cigar!
How dainty her bread, how fragrant her tea!
Her table and viands were wondrous to see.
I had a comfort, and had her own way,
Our life was like a long midsummer day.
Do you ask the reason, and why thus we brag?
Why, because our supplies are furnished by FLAGG!
If you would be happy, and wise and discreet
Call on FLAGG, 161 Blackstone Street.

By a recent ruling of the Custom House authorities by which the duty on the paper cambric has been largely reduced, the popular Opera Puffs Cigarettes will now sold at 15 cents per package. This will be welcome news to cigarette smokers, as the Opera Puffs are recognized to be as every way superior to any other 15 cent cigarette in the market. Until now they could not be sold at the present price which necessitated them being withdrawn to a large extent.

FACTS OF INTEREST.—A bank President in N. H., recently took an endowment policy of insurance for $100,000—on which the premium is $6,500—a year. Banking business must be good. The same amount placed in the assessment companies of this state would have cost only $80 a year.

There are lots of men who read this who sleep soundly on the fact that if death comes to-night they will leave their families penniless. Are you one? If so, call at once on the Massachusetts Benefit Association, which is the largest association in New England, and provide for your family at a cost so low you will not feel it.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET
No Bones to Break!
Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset, do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the Comfort Corset. It has a variety of shoulder sizes, and a long waist, so as to meet the requirements of a hunch back or the case of a straight form. The prone gre of following the form from a given waist measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other corset. It has all the style and finish of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and Comfort with elegance and shape.

KIRALFY BROTHERS'

'EXCELSIOR'

TO THE PUBLIC.

"EXCELSIOR" deals with the greatest themes of modern times, and may be said to be in advance of the stage at least one hundred years. No attempt has been made to follow the lines of plot where anecdotes and episode destroy the story of the great work. This will be readily seen and fully appreciated by a public so keen and discriminating as that of America. Nevertheless it will not be out of place here to give a brief description of the narrative and incidents which will be presented on the stage, for the purpose of explanation so much as to facilitate the study of the artists and to prepare the spectator for that close attention unusual on close and crowded occasions.

"EXCELSIOR" is called a pantomime abroad, but it is more than a pantomime. It is an epitome of the progress of civilization, of strength, mechanical freedom, invention, art and elevation, illustrated and illustrated by the grandest apotheoses of inventive genius, and related by artists delightful as the world can produce. Not a word is spoken by them; still are their actions so eloquent, their gestures so graceful, their poses so correct, and by their attitude made clear to the simplest minds the meaning they desire to convey. Music accompanies and expresses the sentiments, emotions, emotions and actions. Everything moves on the stage in concert. In the music, which is beautiful and melodious, is full of sentiment and freighted with suggestion. It is the author's object to extend the feelings of the artists to the spectator, and prepare the appreciative mind for the scene to follow.

The ballets comprise the greatest artists who ever danced upon the admirated stage of Italy, France, and Central Europe. Among them are ladies of exquisite grace and beauty, attitude of wondrous ability, man of rare facility, and corpses unrivalled for agility, beauty and grace. They will illustrate by their evolutions, motions, dressed and attitudes the various periods of progress epochs, in the history of the world, the progress of science and civilization, and exemplify the fulfillment of the promise of Light to free the world from the thraldom of Darkness and Ignorance.

It will thus be seen that in "EXCELSIOR" is portrayed the struggle between Light and Darkness, Knowledge and Ignorance, Liberty and oppression, Genius and Stupidity, Right and Wrong. The actors are leaders of Light, and they are personations of the principles they engage in in that which has agitated the universe, and has been since the beginning of the world. Darkness does its best to hold mankind in bondage, to cripple genius, obstruct progress, destroy invention and bar civilization; but Light conquers and overthrows, and blesses the world with all that art, science, invention, electricity, time and enterprise can achieve, and buries darkness in oblivion.

The contest between the powers of Light and Darkness are shown in "EXCELSIOR." Darkness and his power are indicated first, and each example of his sovereignty on the stage is followed by a tableau which illustrates how and by what means he was beaten. Every appliance of plot, science, music, beauty, motion, invention and genius necessary to the elucidation of this theme is used in "EXCELSIOR," as before stated, and in a series of tableaux.

In order to surpass the Parisian production of "Excelsior," which was given over 300 nights, we have imported the greatest artists in Europe to assure all the roles and to illustrate which over 400 persons will appear in our representation, and every dress, scene, decoration and piece of scenery have been specially prepared under the direction of the author. The cost of the entire production, and has cost over $75,000. The result of this enterprise has been phenomenal. The attendance at the Globe Theatre the first night have never been equalled even in this theatre of crowded audiences. Thousands of people have witnessed the great spectacle, and thousands have applied for seats and been unable to obtain them. "EXCELSIOR" has set the world wild, that is the dramatic world, and the whole public have pronounced it undoubtedly the greatest stage production ever seen.

Respectfully,
KIRALFY BROTHERS.

GLOBE THEATRE

Messrs. Kiralfys' Parisian Spectacular Drama,

EXCELSIOR

Many ladies were at the first performance of Messrs. Kiralfy's Parisian spectacular drama "Excelsior," last evening. A humerous audience filled Niblo's Garden from pit to dome. With the exception of a few niches in the workings of the stage scenery, incident to a first night, the piece went off like clockwork. The scenery is grand and elaborate. "Excelsior" differs from the "Black Crook" in the fact that it represents ideas and the progress of science, though at times it is difficult to see where the scientific portions end and the undressed anatomy of the first of ballet girls begins. There is no singing nor declamation in the play.

The curtain arose last night on the ruins of an ancient city. A swarthy sorcerer, Nibalo, personified the spirit of barbarism, opposed to the progressive spirit of Excelsior, representing the Genius of Civilization. Three two-line characters in charge of the events of the evening. Sometimes the flashy Bacchanalian genius of barbarism seemed to have things his own way, but the well developed Genius of Civilization always triumphed. When anything of importance was done, a marvellous ballet scene followed, and when any little incidents—such as opening the Suez Canal or the Mont Cenis Tunnel—occurred, the stage would be filled with angels, bouncing French ballet girls until the eyes of the audience became quite blood-shot. When the ruins of the mighty city loomed and the twilight gave place to a modern metropolis, with the glory of a civilization breaking all around it, Nibalo's Garden shook with applause. This followed spectacular ballet scenes such as has never been witnessed in this country.

Next came a scene in Germany—a village on the banks of the Weser, in this scene a portfolio dance was given and received. Next came the old-fashioned boat race with Oxford, the first pulling down the river, the snob attempting to cut across the current. Then the Genius of Civilization came in a flood of glory, and with a movement of her hand a suspension bridge appeared, and the Brooklyn bridge appeared, and the audience cheered again. Next came a scene in Arabian scene, with the Pyramids and the silent Sphinx, looking like a phantom from the ruins of old Egypt. The Genius of Light came again, and pyramids of darkness fled away, and Stanley met Livingstone, and the Suez Canal was opened, and the Genius of Civilization had a wonderful ballet of the events, and a grand transparency of the Goddess of Liberty of Paris or Constantinople. The applause was long and enthusiastic. The figures and waving out of the dances were new and beautiful. There were also scenes of the lava-pottery. Solomon reveals its marvels. Electric sparks drove the Genius of Darkness away, an opening of the Mont Cenis Tunnel was represented; an electric flame burst from the torch of Liberty, and Franklin, Morse, Edison and Washington were applauded. The statue of Liberty and the grand ballet finale was illuminated as by a flash of lightning from a thousand swinging Edison lamps.—New York Herald.

THE IMPROVED

COMFORT CORSET

No Bones to Break!
Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset in use. It is entirely free from bones, but very much like in appearance to the Comfort Corset. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things we claim BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted by any other corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

GREATER THAN BERCH.

W. J. Anderson, Proprietor Plymouth House, Bonds, Mass., deserves to have his name inscribed high on the roll of public philanthropists. He has invented, and is now introducing to the public, Anderson's Electric Salve, an article which whatever used, is highly endorsed by all lovers of horses. This salve possesses the potent power to cure rapidly and effectually scratches, grease, cracked heels, ringbone, affections of the throat, horses' colds, and frequently all diseases of the feet. Its effect upon wounds and cuts is so instantaneous, and without so beneficial, that, as soon as its merits become widely known, it will doubtless meet with an enormous sale, which it so richly merits. Anything which can relieve dumb beasts will be gladly welcomed in every stable in the land, and the names of Bergh and Anderson should be honored by every lover of humanity, one as the originator, the other as the alleviator of pain. One trial of Anderson's Electric Salve will convert the most skeptical of its wonderful curative powers. I would not be without it.

KIRALFY BROTHERS'

'EXCELSIOR'

TO THE PUBLIC.

"EXCELSIOR" deals with the greatest themes of modern times, and may be said to be in advance of the stage at least one hundred years. No noble subject ever lacked a theme that thus which underlies and controls the action and story of this production, and which is the key to the progress, success, and splendid laws and institutions as that of America. Nevertheless it will not be out of place here to give a brief description of the narrative and incidents, which will be presented on the stage, not for the purpose of explanation so much as to facilitate the efforts of the artists and to relieve the criticism of that nervous tension attendant on close and critical observation.

"EXCELSIOR" is not a pantomime abroad; but is more than a pantomime. It is an epitome of the progress of mankind through darkness, freedom, invention, art and civilization, illuminated and illustrated by the grandest appliances of inventive genius, and related by artists as skilful as the world can produce. The work is spoken by them; still are their lessons as eloquent and as plain as words. Every movement, every gesture, every attitude, will make clear to the audience the meaning they desire to convey. Music accompanies and expresses the sentiments, motives, emotions and actions. Everything moves on the stage in concert. The music, which is beautiful and melodious, is full of sentiment and freighted with suggestion, and causes the auditor to comprehend the feelings of the artists on the stage, and appreciate the spectacle as they so receive the story.

In "EXCELSIOR" surprise the greatest artists who ever danced upon the elevated stage of Italy, France, and Central Europe. Among them are ladies of acquired grace and dancing, artists of wondrous ability, men of rare faculty, and corypheus unrivalled for agility, beauty and grace. They will illustrate by their evolutions, motions, dresses and balance, the climates and progressive episodes in the story. In other words, they will be the exponents of the laws of progression and civilization, and exemplify the fulfilment of the promise of Light to free the world from the thraldoms of Darkness and Ignorance.

It will thus be seen that in "EXCELSIOR" is portrayed the struggle between Light and Darkness, Knowledge and Ignorance, Liberty and Oppression, Genius and Obscurity. The principal characters are Darkness and Light. These are personified by the most accomplished artists, and the one is agitated the universe from the moment of the beginning of the world. Darkness does its best to hold mankind in its baleful sway, to stop progress, obstruct progress, destroy invention and bar civilization; but Light opposes and conquers him and blesses the world with all that art, science, invention, electricity, steam, and mechanism can achieve, and buries Darkness in oblivion.

In the first scene, which is the realm of Light, Darkness and its power are indicated first, and each example of the supernatural on the stage is followed by a tableau which illustrates how and by what means she was beaten. Every appliance of plot, science, music, beauty, motion, invention, and mechanism is used to the elucidation of this theme is used in "EXCELSIOR." Such as better can not be said of it.

In order to surpass the Parisian production of "EXCELSIOR," which has attracted all Europe, we have imported the greatest artists in Europe to assume all the roles and to dance the ballets. Over 400 persons will appear in our representation, and every dress, every scene, every piece of scenery have been specially prepared under our personal supervision. The cost of the luminescent and brilliant costumes has over $12,000. The production of this enterprise has been phenomenal. The excitement at Niblo's Garden for the first night have never been equalled even in this country. Thousands were turned away. Thousands of people have witnessed the great spectacle, and thousands have applied for seats and been unable to obtain them. "EXCELSIOR" has set the world, that of the theatre and the public, in a ferment, and public have pronounced it unquestionably the greatest stage production of the century.

Respectfully,
KIRALFY BROTHERS.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENERY AND INCIDENTS.

ACT I.—Scene 1, Cave in Rolze. Darkness reigns supreme. He requires subduing at his first beautiful woman. Darkness taunts her with her condition, but she receives no ills, for head becomes radiant; her fetters are broken and she enters upon the conflict against darkness with renewed life and spirit. Darkness defies her, and tells her that he will retain his power over humanity. The scene changes to Scene 2, The Temple of Light and Progress. The triumph of Exultant Genii in illuminating Humanity.

ACT II.—Scene 3, on the banks of the Nile. Fanciful scene for ballet. Appearance of the first steamboat, built by Faptic, the inventor. Obscurantism aided by his ministers. Envy and Malice incite the peasantry to destruction. The triumph of Darkness is aided by the appearance of Light, who supports the steamboat, and holds the waters back from the boat. Scene changes to that in the great victory of steam and engineering. Scene 4, Valentine's Cave and Smoking Bridge. Moonlight. The usher lights up to electric light. Darkness has the power over the ocean and sea and ferry boats in the waters beneath. (Darkness worsted.) He lights a bonfire on the top of the cave, with explosions and a beautiful tableau, when he has purchased an ally slave. "You are my property," saith he. "I had rather die than be my minion," she replies, offering him a dagger. He relents, and is about to free her from darkness and slavery, and bids her remember that he is not the only slaveholder, for this is the only lovely slave. He shows him a salon of bondage, which is changed instantly by Light into one of freedom, which is a tableau that displays and defeats Darkness. Scene 5, Interior of Cavern. The Spirit of Darkness. The spectre of the Sand Cloud. Blight, starvation and storm; the Bedouin Arab throws and Darkness rejoices. He defies Light again, and, though apparently triumphant, is overpowered again by Light, who restores the dead slave into one of blue. Scene 6, Sea. Opening of the Suez Canal. ACT III.—Scene 1, Volta's Laboratory. Volta, the electrician, is experimenting and inventing. Darkness foils him at first and will not allow him to succeed. Light appears and gives him the desire—the discovery of electricity. A spark illumines the laboratory, and he is delighted, runs off to tell his family of his success. Darkness tries to destroy the machine. He is opposed by electricity and almost paralyzed. He is confounded by Light, and the thrilling of electric bells are heard, and scene changes to Tavern, which shows the application of electricity to the telegraph. Darkness is defeated with the scene and ballet of boys, nurses and picturesque groupings. Darkness is once more beaten. Scene 2, Fleeting of Mount Cenis. The engineers working in the last stage. They are startled by hearing the noise of the miners' engines working through the mountain. The engineers believe the sound and are in agony because it causes the wrong direction. Darkness is almost delirious with joy, but his joy is short-lived, for the sounds come from the right direction, and the two armies meet. Darkness is defeated by the miners. Scene 3, Interior of the tunnel is completed, and the engineers and their men, Italian and French, fraternize. Scene 4, Valley of Susa. GLOBE THEATRE.

Messrs. Kiralfys' Parisian Spectacular Drama,

EXCELSIOR

Many ladies were at the first performance of Messrs. Kiralfys' Parisian spectacular drama "Excelsior," last evening. An immense audience filled Nilsh's Garden from pit to dome. With the exception of a few hitches in the working of the stage scenery, last evening's performance was made a "hit." Each act was received with applause. "Excelsior" differs entirely from the "Black Crook" in the fact that it combines the art and the progress of science, though at times it is difficult to see where the scientific portion end and the undressed anatomy of the forest of ballet girls begins. There is no singling out fashionables in the play.

The curtain arose last night on the ruins of an ancient city. A small band of barbarians, posed beside a colossal statue, fiercely-looking girl, representing the Genius of Civilization. These two characters had charge of the events of the evening, sometimes the Saadi Hassak genius of barbarism seemed to have things his own way, but the well-developed Genius of Civilization always triumphed. When anything of importance was done or sung the ballet arena followed, and when the Genius of Civilization sang the Suez Canal or Suez Canal or the Mont Cenis Tunnel—concerned, the air would be filled with angels, houris and French ballet girls till the general breath of the audience became quite short. When the ruins of the mighty city faded and the twilight gave place to a modern metropolis, with the glory of a civilization breaking all around it, the curtain fell to loud applause. Then followed spectacular ballets which took us back to the ancient days in this country, such as Iowa scenes in Germany, a village on the banks of the Weser. In the scene a peculiar dance was given and encored. There was an old-fashioned four race with oxen; the first ride steamboat glided down the river and Indians attacked and saw the invention. Then the Genius of Civilization came in a cloud of fire, and with a movement of her hand a steamer appeared, and engineers and firemen and passengers appeared, and with the waved again, and the scene was the Arabian scene, with the Pyramids and the sleeping Sphinx replaced by a plantation scene in the land of Egypt. The Genius of Light came again, four quintettes of dancers and sang the praises of the Isaulis and the Suez Canal. There the most gorgeous, artistic and really wonderful scene of the evening was given. It was purely theatrical, a display of Fare of Comedian, Ballet and Sophistry was long and enthusiastically applauded, and worthily was the applause. There were new and beautiful. There were also scenes of the laboratory. Science reveals its marvels. Electric sparks drove the Genius of Darkness away; an opening of the Mont Cenis Tunnel was represented; an electric flame burst from the hand of Liberty; pictures of Morse, Edison and Washington were applauded, and at the close of the piece the Statue of Liberty was illuminated as by a flash of lightning from a thousand swinging Edison lamps.—New York Herald.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET
No Bones to Break!
Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form perfectly. This Corset has a new style of shoulder sizes for each waist measure, and meets the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principle of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things secured by PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist; size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well suited with any other corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.
Manufactured and for sale by the

TO THE PUBLIC.

GREATER THAN BERCH.

W. J. Anderson, Proprietor Plymouth House, Boston, Mass., deserves to have his name inscribed high on the roll of public philanthropists. He has invented, and is now introducing to the public, Anderson's Gall Cure, which is guaranteed to cure all forms of gall and sores on all horses. This salve possesses the potent power to cure result and effectually scratches, galls, cracked heels and similar ailments with which horses are so frequently afflicted. Its effect upon wounds and cuts is so instantaneous, and so beneficial, that, as soon as its merits become widely known, it will doubtless meet with a ready sale, which is so richly merits. Anything which can relieve dumb brutes from the pain and misery of fresh wounds, or the blind, and the tortures of Bergh and Anderson should be honored by every lover of humanity, and as the preserver, the other as the alleviator of pain. One trial of Anderson's Electric Liver will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful curative powers. I would not be without it.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET

No Bones to Break!

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principal of following the form from agonies waist-measure is peculiar to the COMFORT CORSET, and cannot be found by tailors. None of the Corset trade make one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the ranks of home-made bones will be filled with any other corset. It has all the elegant taste of any Foreign Corset, and yet combines ease and Comfort with elegance and shape.

PATRONS OF THE [illegible] THEATRE WILL PLEASE REPORT TO THE [illegible] AGER ANY INATTENTION [illegible] MISDEMEANOR ON THE PART OF THE [illegible]

ANNIE PIXLEY.

On Monday, September 18, this charming little actress will make her first appearance at this theatre in her play of "Miss," the Child of the Sierras," of which the New York Herald says the following:

The emotional and sensational as well as popular, and as a picture of the phase of Western life Bret Harte has loved so well to paint, the starring play of "Miss" was given last night at the Grand Opera House by Annie Pixley and the theatrical combination of which she is the leading member. The drill of the company was so efficient that the piece was rendered without a pause to mar the dramatic and highly exciting action. The curtain went down on the first act, leaving the great crowd in the elegant house a most effective tableau for their mental entertainment until the next act should be ready.

Miss Pixley's energetic and whole-souled declination of her difficult part won her rounds of applause at almost every step, and she was called before the curtain several times in the last act. She interpolates as the encore of the piece a touching song, a humorous imitation of "The Cows are in the Corn," which proves a very taking bit of vocalism.

Miss Pixley's support is excellent, and the performance drew one of the most fashionable houses ever in the theatre under the present management.

MODJESKA.

Speaking of Modjeska's acting as Odette—role she is likely to assume during her approaching season in this country, under Mr. Stetson's management—a London correspondent says: She is in the same little group of established mistress of her art that she was when last seen in America. She has not altered perceptibly in any respect during the interval, not even in that indescribably pretty accent which we all remember with pleasure. She is more powerful in sketches than in any character I recollect her to have played. In the little beadrinking comedy scene at the beginning of the piece her delicate touches is most delightfully apparent. Later, in the same act, her horror at her husband's discovery of her shame, her defiance of him, her pleading when she finds that her child is to be taken from her, and her final consumation of rage as she goes out of his house, all play in quick succession, and with wondrous vividness. Later, in her renewed defiance, she is again very strong, and, finally, when she meets her daughter and deliberately conceals her own identity lest the knowledge shall mar that young life she holds so dear, the greatness of the artiste came out more clearly still. I have rarely, if ever, seen upon the stage a piece of work so pathetic and so touching to every feeling of tenderness. Modjeska is certainly greater than ever.—HERALD.

A race between a carrier pigeon and a man kicked by a mule would be very close, if the man had half a mile the start.

A French proverb says: "It is always the unexpected that happens." If there is anything in that proverb we may expect a Greenback president to be elected by acclamation in 1884.

Another case of bulldozing is reported in North Carolina. The Democratic candidate broke up an opposition meeting by inviting the spellbound crowd to accompany him to a neighborhood negro.

We have often read remarkable stories of motherless sparrows and rats being raised by female cats, but up in Tarrant county, Texas, an eagle raised a young pig, which weighed forty pounds. The eagle's wings measured nearly eight feet from tip to tip.

A letter addressed to Mr. Obedient Servant, New Bedford Mass., is said to have been received by the party for whom it was intended, and whose signature had been mistaken, by the sender of the letter, for a flourish under what he supposed was the writer's name.

A sure cure: Hostetter McGinnis, who has ruined his constitution by getting drunk again, went to the sanctum of an Austin doctor and said: "I am troubled with unpleasant dreams at night. How can I prevent myself from dreaming that I am drunk?" "Well, perhaps, the best remedy for you to try first is to do all your sleeping before sundown," said the doctor, solemnly.

"What is a yacht?" we inquired of a long, gaunt codder who was lounging about the wharf. "Wot's a yac?" said the fisherman. "Well, you get any sort of a craft you please and fill her up with liquor and cigars, and get yer frens on board and have a high old time—and that's a yac." We thanked him with fervor, for we had long been trying to find out what a yacht really was.

THE IMPROVED COMFORT CORSET

No Bones to Break!

Ladies who have not been fitted with this Corset do not realize the advantages it has over any other Corset. There are other Corsets without bones, but none so shaped as to fit the form like the COMFORT CORSET. It has a variety of shoulder sizes for each waist size, so as to meet the requirements of a tapering waist as well as of a straight form. The principal of following the form from a given waist-measure is peculiar to this Corset, and is one of the things SECURED BY PATENT. No other Corset has more than one size at the top for any one waist size, consequently the variety of forms cannot be so well fitted with any other corset. It has all the style and taste of any French Corset, and yet combines ease and comfort with elegance and shape.

Lawyer Brown is a Sabbath school teacher. He was endeavoring to inoculate into his pupils' minds the necessity of a firm belief in things spiritual, when one of the class with wide-eyed astonishment exclaimed: "Why, Mr. Brown, I heard you tell a witness in court the other day that you didn't care what he believed. All you cared about was what he knew."

A Jerseyman went to Manch Chunk, Pa., to spend his vacation, and during the first night three old hens, which had gone to roost on a tree outside his bedroom window, were disturbed by a cow and flew into the apartment. The Jerseyman awakened and slashed a pillow around until the two wildered fowls found their way out. The next morning he told his host that he should come there every summer, for during the whole night he had seen but three mosquitoes.

A number of Boston clergymen have gone on bird hunting expedition on the coast. Larks!

The boys are telling a good story on one of the conductors on the Cincinnati Southern Road. On that run the knights of the punch are not wont to dress in broadcloth or interview a razor every day. On one of his trips Conductor Foster caught a tramp stealing a ride on the front platform of the baggage car. Yanking him into the car, the tramp was subjected to a perfect broadside of invectives. Looking up at his abuser the tramp, after a careful glance, taking him in from head to foot, remarked: "Cheese it, cull; the conductor will bear you and put us both off." The tramp was led back into a passenger coach and carried to his destination, and now that conductor blacks his shoes and dusts off his clothes at least once a day.

How do you feel when a woman laughs at you? You feel she grinned, of course. They will not laugh at you for smoking Opera Puff Cigarettes.

A lady in court, being asked her age, replied that she didn't know; she couldn't remember the exact hour when she was born, and could only depend on hearsay. Heresay is not evidence, and the matter was ruled out.

The small-minded swindler, arrested for stealing railroad passes, deserves the severest condemnation. If he had simply stolen the railroad itself he might have become an honored and respected member of the Wall street board of brokers.

A Massachusetts woman was so jealous of her husband's first wife, that when he died she refused to allow him to be buried beside her. She remarked to the undertaker at the funeral: "I ain't agoin' to have that woman a-lying on Jim's arm at the reserection day, if I can help it, you bet."

Conjugal amenities—"Do you know in all the years you have my wife talks the least?" "Well, I suppose when she catches cold and loses her voice." Not at all. It is in February." Because February has the fewest days."

An Englishman was boasting to a Yankee that they had a book in the British Museum that was written by Cicero. "Oh, that ain't nothing," retorted the Yankee; "in Boston they've got the lead pencil that Noah used to check off the animals that went into the ark."

I can't get up early," said a poor victim to his doctor. 'Oh, yes you can," was the reply, if you only follow my advice. What is your hour of rising?" "Nine o'clock." "Well, you get up half an hour later every day, and in the course of a month, you will find yourself up at four in the morning.

An exchange says man is very much like an egg. Yes, poor man, he carries his yolk around with him, and has to shell out every time his housekeeper gives him a rap on the head.

The school is still; a hand is raised—
"May I go out, please sir?"
And 'tween his handkerchief and nose
Do ruddy stories sputter.

"Why, certainly," the master says.
The urchin straightway goes;
He takes his cap from off its peg,
The cranberry from his nose.

Her lips were so near
That what else could I do?
You'll be angry, I fear,
But her lips were so near—
Well, I can't make it clear,
Or explain it to you,
But—her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?

'Twas a newly painted door-step,
And the lassie—most unkind,
Made him sit there till departing
He on impress left behind.
'Twas a double impress, plainly—
Let us shyly give the tip—
There was one upon the door-step
And another on her lip.

A preacher, in Tennessee, tried to establish a church in which there should be no members who used tobacco or any beverage but water, and his only congregation was an old woman who chewed slippery elm and believed in catnip tea for measles.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.
Many men, from the effects of youthful imprudence, have brought about a state of weakness that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever being suspected, they are doctored for everything but the right one.
Notwithstanding the valuable remedies that medical science has produced for the relief of this class of patients, none of the ordinary modes of treatment effect a cure. During our extensive college and hospital practice we have experimented and discovered new and concentrated remedies. The accompanying prescription is offered as a certain and speedy cure, as hundreds of cases in our practice have been restored to perfect health by its use, after all other remedies failed.
Perfectly pure ingredients must be used in the preparation of this prescription:
R—Cocain—from Erythroxylon Coca—1 drachm. Ext. ignatæ amaræ—alcoholic—2 grains.
Jerubebin, ½ drachm. Ext. leptandrin, 2 scruples.
Hypophosphite quina, ½ drachm. Glycerin, q. s.
Gelsemin, 8 grains. Mix.
Make 60 pills. Take one pill at 3 P.M., and another on going to bed.
In some cases it will be necessary for the patient to take two pills at bedtime, making the number three a day. This remedy is adapted to every condition of nervous debility and weakness in either sex, and especially to those cases resulting from imprudence.
The recuperative powers of this restorative are truly astonishing, and its use continued for a short time changes the languid, debilitated, nerveless condition to one of renewed life and vigor.
As we are constantly in receipt of letters of inquiry relative to this remedy, we would say to those who would prefer to obtain it from us, by remitting $3 in post-office money order or registered letter, a securely sealed package, in its purest state, will be sent by return mail, from our private laboratory, or may be had by calling.

Wholesale and Retail Dealer of FINE CIGARS
19 Water St. & 22 Spring Lane.
SOLE NEW ENGLAND AGENT FOR THE Famous LA GRACIA 5c. Cigar

This marvelous and unrivalled brand has just made its appearance on the market, and its popularity is already unbounded. No Cigar ever met with such an enthusiastic reception since the invention of tobacco. The doors hadn't been open ten minutes before the house was crowded, and the standing room was so full of eager purchasers that their feet stuck out through the transom. President Grant sent for the first box, and said he would rather be the man who made that Cigar, than be President.

The tobacco from which these cigars are made is grown entirely in conservatories, and the Cigars are manufactured on mahogany tables by thoroughbred Cubans, in shirt-sleeve coats and white kids. When a man smokes one of these cigars he walks on air, and dreams that he has a diamond scarf-pin and a sixty-five dollar suit of clothes, and has just married rich. It makes the breath sweet and keeps the teeth white, and will force a moustache on the smoothest lip in five weeks. It improves and beautifies the complexion, eradicates tan, freckles and dandruff, and imparts to the oldest countenance the rosy freshness of youth. It permeates the house, window curtains, closets and clothes with the delicious odors and exquisite fragrance of heliotrope, frangi-pani, jockey club and white rose. It will fasten the front gate every night, carry in the paper in the morning, chase the hens off the garden, and blister the boy with a rubber gun. No christian family can properly keep house without it, for the man who smokes this Cigar will never cut wood too long for the stove, stop on a trail, join a club, or go 'down to the post-office' after supper.

People who smoke this Cigar will live longer, make more money, wear better clothes, drive faster horses, be stronger parent and go to church more regularly, marry prettier wives than any other class of men. It burns with an ash so white it chalk would make a black mark upon it, and it wouldn't break off and fall into your vest, not if you were to strike it with an earthquake.

Its unprecedented popularity and immense sale has enabled the manufacturers to place them on the market at the ridiculously reachable price of 5c. The place for you to buy your Cigars by the box.

"J. Pot."

Thomas N. Nichol, who never plays cards, nevertheless tells a story about card playing. A coterie of his acquaintances who were poker players had a night session in Chicago which closed in a contest over a jack pot containing some $60. They had started their game on Saturday and on looking at their watches discovered that it was nearly 5 o'clock on Sunday morning. One of the players suggested, by way of penance, that whoever won the jack pot should take it to church that day and put it into the contribution box. The winner was somewhat of a humorist. He put the cash into an envelope, marked it "J. Pot," and laid it on the contribution plate. On Monday morning a week later, happening to pick up a paper, he was astonished to find in it a report of a sermon delivered by the pastor of the church, in which a feeling allusion was made to the fact that on the previous Sunday a kind stranger had made a generous donation to the church. "I sincerely hope and trust," was the clergyman's language, "that if Mr. J. Pot is still in the city and intends to remain here he will make this his permanent religious home."—New York Tribune.

A young man in Covelo recently thrashed a clergyman because the church would not receive his mother as a member.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Some talk of hats so cheap!
Well, if they do, no matter;—
You'll not find any cheaper
Than those sold by BUNCE, the hatter.

If you want a first-class hat,
A third grade one won't do;—
Remember, ere it is too late,
A poor one will go back on you.

Then go to BUNCE, the Hatter,—
He buys for cash, you know,
And BUNCE'S margin is so small,
His hats are always low.

ENCORES.

When an artist deserves a round of applause, we are glad to see him get it, especially when this sign of public approval is spontaneous and general, and not the studied freak of an insidious clique.

The performer in search of a reputation has a relish for encores. But he may satisfy himself with the truth, that they are not so potent a testimony of public approval as downright, hearty applause. Some people encore because they want to have the entertainment prolonged, and have a maximum amount of music for a minimum price. Many encore merely because others do.

Numerous people have not yet decided why they encore at all. Quite a number of the regular concert-goers are not in favor of encores. They rarely is an audience entirely unanimous in demanding an immediate repetition of any part of a musical performance. The artistic effect of a good performance is sometimes spoiled by its immediate repetition. Too much of a good thing is apt to cloy the refined taste. An artist is not always at his best, and it is a dangerous thing for himself when he consents to repeat a good, soulful performance.

Thus, while he may temporarily ingratiate himself into favor with the audience by conceding to its caprice, he is, to a certain extent, endangering his reputation. If by an encore, an audience demands that the artist should sing or play a composition other than that which he has just interpreted, the artist cannot flatter himself that he thus is the recipient of a compliment. It is virtually demanding something else from the artist in order to further test his strength. He responds to such an encore at his own risk, inasmuch that the next piece he may perform is not unlikely to dispel the favor which has already been accorded him by the audience for his previous performance. All artists should stoutly refuse to respond to encores. Fortunately, the public itself is beginning to be convinced of the absurdity of the encore nuisance. The most enlightened concert-goers are those not given to the "festive blistering of a hand." It is unfair for one-half of an audience to demand the repetition of a performance which the other half does not care to hear. It is the duty of artists and the intelligent portion of our concert audiences to exercise their influence towards the abatement of the encore nuisance.

Mr. Emmett Keinard having purchased the interest of his former partner, Mr. Dagett, will hereaftar have the exclusive management of the Academy of Music under control.

The following is a list of amusements for this week and next: Neal Burgess in "Widow Bedott." Friday and Saturday evenings of this week; Haverly's Mastodons (minstrels) on the following Monday evening; "Damon and Pythias," by an excellent home company, on the 15th and 16th.

A teacher defined conscience as "something within you that tells when you have done wrong." "I had it once," spoke up a young tow head of six summers, "but they had to send for the doctor."

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Daly is scrupulously particular in keeping the details of his new theatre himself.

Max Strakosch guarantees Miss Neilson a very large sum. Who guarantees Max?

An English company will shortly appear in Burmah. King Thebow is calling out for "Drink."

Mme. Rudersdorff will not return to New York any more. She has decided to settle finally in Boston.

Raymond will, it is said, play only "Wolfert's Roost" all this season. Oh, Ichabod! Ichabod! what a falling off.

"Widow Bedott" is among the brilliant successes this season. Neal Burgess is accompanied by Petroleum V. Nasby.

George Clarke is well enough in "Rescued," but only well enough. Should a clever actor be spoiled by a poor part?

Why are Mr. Bandmann's company called "dramatic emigrants?" Is emigrant a term of reproach or compliment?

F. A. Schwab, the dramatic and musical manager, has arrived in New York. He will manage the Neilson business this season.

An Italian critic says that Blanca Lablanche sings like Patti and acts like Sara Bernhardt. We are anxious to see this wonder of the operatic stage.

Sarah Bernhardt has been commissioned to execute a bust of Felicien David for the Museum of Versailles. This is worse than Berlioz's remarks on him.

The Philharmonic Club has issued its prospectus for the coming season of six concerts. If quality is in conformity with quantity, the public cannot complain.

Caecilie Gaul, the Baltimore pianist, returned last week from Europe, after a protracted absence of several years.

Mary Anderson is undoubtedly clever, and has great charm of voice and manner. But it is a mistake in her too ardent admirers to liken her to Sarah Bernhardt. She is not thin enough yet.

Franz Rummell has gone to Canada to play at the opening of Nordheimer's New Music Hall in Toronto. It is to be hoped he will impress the Princess Louise favorably, and obtain letters missive to London.

A cultured Bostonian says that Father Giovanni, the celebrated church tenor, of Rome, has an "elephantine voice." There is nothing like a good epithet. Tenors sing from the chest; elephants from the trunk. See it?

The head dress, as set forth in the latest photograph of that sterling actor, John McCullough, suggests to one that he might be King of the Zulus or Grand Royal High and Mighty Mogul Potentate General of the Kickapoos.

Dulcken calls Wilhelmj his relative, and the violinist denies the soft impeachment, whereupon bonhommie Dulcken shows a photograph which bears the inscription, "To my dear cousin Dulcken. Aug. Wilhelmj." That settles it.

EVERYTHING.

Boquets are going for the florists! The public is not so much carried away by stands and baskets of flowers, all prepared beforehand, and more often than not provided by the manager or even the artist. In the old time, when every lady carried a boquet, and the house rose with salvoes of applause, and the boquets were thrown on the stage, as at Jenny Lind or Taglioni—ah, that was a sight!

Miss Kellogg is known as a delightful entertainer of her friends. It is something new to hear of her as a "reader." She has been doing, among other matters, Aytoun's "Charles Edward at Versailles," a dramatic piece of poetry. Whether for her friends or for the general public, with all admiration for her musical abilities and appreciation of her pleasant songs, we must postpone faith in her dramatic or recitative powers until we hear for ourselves.

Mr. A. M. Palmer gives the following figures for the receipts at the Union Square Theatre during the run of five plays: "Two Orphans," 170 times, $182,090.50; "Led Astray," 100 times, $154,938.40; "Camille," 28 times, $22,400; "A Celebrated Case," 111 times, $105,450; "Rose Michel," 120 times $102,000; "The Banker's Daughter," 137 times, $129,250; total, $695,834.90—an average of $946 a performance. Good for A. M. P.

Two ladies took occasion to walk far enough away from their hotel in the Catskill Mountains to get lost. They were found at 3 a. m., sitting on a log and talking about the fall fashions.

Some talk of hats so cheap!
Well, if they do, no matter;
You'll not find any cheaper
Than those sold by BUNCE, the hatter.

If you want a first-class hat,
A third grade one won't do;—
Remember, ere it is too late,
A poor one will go back on you.

Then go to BUNCE, the Hatter,—
He buys for cash, you know,
And BUNCE's margin is so small,
His hats are always low.

ENCORES.

When an artist deserves a round of applause, we are glad to see him get it, especially when this sign of public approval is spontaneous and general, and not the studied freak of an insidious clique.

The performer in search of a reputation has a relish for encores. But he may satisfy himself with the truth, that they are not so potent a testimony of public approval as downright, hearty applause. Some people encore because they want to have the entertainment prolonged, and have a maximum amount of music for a minimum price. Many encore merely because others do.

Numerous people have not yet decided why they encore at all. Quite a number of the regular concert-goers are not in favor of encores. Very rarely is an audience entirely unanimous in demanding an immediate repetition of any part of a musical performance. The artistic effect of a good performance is sometimes spoiled by its immediate repetition. Too much of a good thing is apt to clog the refined taste. An artist is not always at his best, and it is a dangerous thing for himself when he consents to repeat a good, soulful performance.

Thus, while he may temporarily ingratiate himself into favor with the audience by conceding to its caprice, he is, to a certain extent, endangering his reputation. If by an encore, an audience demands that the artist should sing or play a composition other than that which he has just interpreted, the artist cannot flatter himself that he thus is the recipient of a compliment. It is virtually demanding something else from the artist in order to further test his strength. He responds to such an encore at his own risk, inasmuch that the next piece he may perform is not unlikely to dispel the favor which has already been accorded him by the audience for his previous performance. All artists should stoutly refuse to respond to encores. Fortunately, the public itself is beginning to be convinced of the absurdity of the encore nuisance. The most enlightened concert-goers are those not given to the "festive blistering of a hand." It is unfair for one-half of an audience to demand the repetition of a performance which the other half does not care to hear. It is the duty of artists and the intelligent portion of our concert audiences to exercise their influence towards the abatement of the encore nuisance.

Mr. Emmett Kennard having purchased the interest of his former partner, Mr. Pagett, will hereafter have the exclusive management of the Academy of Music under control.

The following is a list of amusements for this week and next: Neal Burgess in "Widow Bedott," Friday and Saturday evenings of this week; Haverly's Mastodons (minstrels) on the following Monday evening; "Damon and Pythias," by an excellent home company, on the 15th and 16th.

A teacher defined conscience as "something within you that tells when you have done wrong." "I had it once," spoke up a young tow head of six summers, "but they had to send for the doctor."

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Daly is scrupulously particular in keeping the details of his new theatre himself.

Max Strakosch guarantees Miss Neilson a very large sum. Who guarantees Max?

Levy, the cornetist, plays "With Verdure Clad" at the Beach. A souvenir of his late lawsuit.

An English company will shortly appear in Burmah. King Thebow is calling for "Drink."

Mme. Rudersdorff will not return to New York any more. She has decided to settle finally in Boston.

Raymond will, it is said, play only "Wolfert's Roost" all this season. Oh, Ichabod! Ichabod! what a falling off.

"Widow Bedott" is among the failures. A man may be a clever political satirist, and yet not able to write a play.

George Clarke is well enough in "Rescued," but only well enough. Should a clever actor be spoiled by a poor part?

Why are Mr. Baudmann's company called "dramatic emigrants?" Is emigrant a term of reproach or compliment?

F. A. Schwab, the dramatic and musical manager, has arrived in New York. He will manage the Neilson business this season.

An Italian critic says that Bianca Lablanche sings like Patti and acts like Sara Bernhardt. We are anxious to see this wonder of the operatic stage.

Sarah Bernhardt has been commissioned to execute a bust of Felicien David for the Museum of Versailles. This is worse than Berlioz's remarks on him.

The Philharmonic Club has issued its prospectus for the coming season of six concerts. If quality is in conformity with quantity, the public cannot complain.

Caecilie Gaul, the Baltimore pianist, returned last week from Europe, after a protracted absence of several years.

Mary Anderson is undoubtedly clever, and has great charm of voice and manner. But it is a mistake in her too ardent admirers to liken her to Sarah Bernhardt. She is not thin enough yet.

Franz Ruumell has gone to Canada to play at the opening of Nordheimer's New Music Hall in Toronto. It is to be hoped he will impress the Princess Louise favorably, and obtain letters missive to London.

A cultured Bostonian says that Father Giovanni, the celebrated church tenor, of Rome, has an "elephantine voice." There is nothing like a good epithet. Tenors sing from the chest; elephants from the trunk. See it?

The head dress, as set forth in the latest photograph of that sterling actor, John McCullough, suggests to one that he might be King of the Zulus or Grand Royal High and Mighty Mogul Potentate General of the Kleapoos.

Dulcken calls Wilhelmj his relative, and the violinist denies the soft impeachment, whereupon bonhomme Dulcken shows a photograph which bears the inscription, "To my dear cousin Dulcken. Aug. Wilhelmj." That settles it.

EVERYTHING.

Boquets are good for the florists! The public is not so much carried away by stands and baskets of flowers, all prepared beforehand, and more often than not provided by the manager or even the artist. In the old time, when every lady carried a boquet, and the house rose with salvoes of applause, and the boquets were thrown on the stage, as at Jenny Lind or Taglioni—ah, that was a sight!

Miss Kellogg is known as a delightful entertainer of her friends. It is something new to hear of her as a "reader." She has been doing, among other matters, Aytoun's "Charles Edward at Versailles," a dramatic piece of poetry. Whether for her friends or for the general public, with all admiration for her musical abilities and appreciation of her pleasant songs, we must postpone faith in her dramatic or recitative powers until we hear for ourselves.

Mr. A. M. Palmer gives the following figures for the receipts at the Union Square Theatre during the run of five plays: "Two Orphans," 179 times, $182,206.50; "Led Astray," 100 times, $134,638.40; "Camille," 98 times, $22,400; "A Celebrated Case," 111 times, $105,450; "Rose Michel," 120 times $102,000; "The Banker's Daughter," 137 times, $129,250; total, $695,834.90—an average of $946 a performance. Good for A. M. P.

Two ladies took occasion to walk far enough away from their hotel in the Catskill Mountains to get lost. They were found at 3 a. m., sitting on a log and talking about the fall fashions.

ALONE IN LONDON.
On Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, "Alone in London" will be presented here by the Brooklyn Park Theatre Company. The Brooklyn Daily Union of Sept. 20th, says of the performance: "Alone in London, or, A Woman against the World,' is of the undiluted kind. I went to see it in New York last week. It is beautifully acted, and the play looms up well as a dramatic piece. But it was interesting to watch the packed audience rise to their feet and cheer several of the scenes. When the heroine was tied to a post in a sluice house, men and women wanted to kill the villain; when the floodgates were opened by him, and the water seemed to rush for the poor girl, an exclamation of horror rolled through the house, and when the rescuers appeared in the boat, everybody seemed wild with impatience, and women did cry "Hurry up." I watched the audience, I never saw a body of people so thoroughly aroused. Some of the faces looked as if their owners wanted to fly to the rescue of Annie Meadows, and when the hero finally reached her, and untied her, the cheers of delight from the top to the bottom of the house were deafening. It is, without exaggeration, the most effective scene of the kind I ever saw in over thirty years' experience. In Boston the reporter of the Traveller thought water was used, and wrote as follows in his paper the following day: "The scene was very realistic, more especially that of the neighborhood of Westminster bridge with the Houses of Parliament for a background, and the old Sluice House and the River Thames by moonlight—the latter beautifully worked up with real water—add vividness to the picture where the cold-blooded husband is endeavoring to drown his wife." Managers from everywhere are sending for a description of the mechanical working of the scene, and Col. Sinn has prudently had it patented.
Oct. 19th and 20th, Geo. C. Boniface in "The Streets of New York."
Oct. 22d and 23d, John T. Raymond.
Oct. 29th, Will Visscher in his humorous lecture, "Sixty Minutes in the War."

But she can't throw a fast without a mishap,
Because she isn't built that way.

Not wisely, but too well. "What's home rule, John," asked his wife at tea, "that the papers talk of so?" John looked as sad as he could be and groaned in utter misery, "I wish I didn't know."

A fashion writer says that dresses are to be full this year. We prefer them full. The idea of a dress empty is ridiculous in the extreme. We should like to know what satisfaction it would be to a young man to hold an empty dress on his lap.

NOTE.

In the fitting up of this luxurious palace, no money, or expense has been spared to make it the most perfect of its kind in the entire west.

Every idea of elegance and refinement has been materialized into an absolute certainty in the fitting up of this beautiful headquarters of the culsine art in Omaha.

No taste so fastidious that cannot be satisfied; no comfort that has not been considered.

It has been the ambition of the management to eclipse anything of the kind south of the Great Lakes and west of Chicago.

A magnificent dining hall for ladies and gentlemen (Brass fosh), where waiting waiters attend promptly and courteously all the desires of any one's taste; where the finest cooks obtainable, prepare the most delicate and tempting meals. All that any market affords is lavishly furnished here.

This is the only place in Omaha where every description of wild meats, game, fish, etc., is served and sold as well at wholesale as retail.

Higgins' is one of the features of the city. No visitors to Omaha should miss going through the elegantly arranged apartments. The only place in Omaha where twelve private dining rooms on the second floor invite the social and fashionable. A full series of any size can be accommodated and obtain the best in the land at the most reasonable prices. Here, as in no other place in the west that operates on a like scale, can be found elegance, quality, convience, comfort and cheapness, all displayed here in architecturul and decorative design.

ALICE HARRISON IN "HOT WATER."

The merry, laughing Alice Harrison and her Comedy Company will appear here next Friday and Saturday in the new musical comedy, "Hot Water," written expressly for Miss Harrison by Woolson Morse and Edward Holst. It is said to be one of the funniest skits yet presented to the public. This will be Miss Harrison's first appearance here in several years, and those who have been delighted by her inimitable acting and charming stage presence will, no doubt, accord her a hearty welcome.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Dec. 16 and 17—Salsbury's Troubadours in "Three of a Kind," and "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Dec. 21 and 22—The Carleton English Opera Co., from the Casino, New York, in "Nanon" and "Mikado."

Dec. 24—Emma Nevada in Grand Concert.

Dec. 25 and 26—Lizzie May Ulmer in "Dad's Girl."

Dec. 28 and 29—"A Tin Soldier."

Jan. 1 and 2—Thomas W. Keene.

THE musical numbers of "Nanon" are among the most tuneful of any of the recent comic operettas, and in themselves they deserve the success which was prophesied for them when the opera was produced in German a year ago last spring, and they justify the run of 100 nights which the opera has made at the New York Casino. As presented by the Carleton Opera Company at the Chestnut Street Theatre last night, "Nanon" was a success. The music is remarkably good, though Genee, the composer, has followed closely in the footsteps of Planquette in "The Chimes of Normandy." But the serenade, "Nanon, in Rapture I Come to Thee," which is the beginning, middle and end of the opera, is so pretty and charming as alone to give the opera strong original character, and the song of Nanon de L'Enclos, "Do unto others," is full of tune and grace. As Nanon Miss Louise Paullin displayed energy and careful study.

Mr. Carleton's beautiful baritone was heard to excellent advantage in the part of the Marquis D' Ambigue. His numbers were all loudly encored. Mr. Carleton seems worthy of a better fate than to be pulled across the stage and repeatedly kissed with the eternal refrain of Nanon to the audience, "Now isn't he too Sweet?" but as long as he sings his tribute to Nanon, Nanon and Anna so delightfully he can only delight his hearers.

The costumes were superb and gorgeous and well worth seeing in themselves.—Philadelphia Daily News.

The New York Herald says that Mr. Kyrle Bellew, Wallack's new leading man, is "the legitimate successor of Montague as a devastator of the ranks of the fair." Montague did it with his little bangs; Bellew relies upon his pretty Kyrle.

If a minister can't fill a church with his preaching, the next best thing he can do is to kiss some deacon's wife and get caught at it.

A young lady in Harlem, who recently married a foppish bachelor, remarked to a friend that she expected to change her residence, as she had recently taken a flat in an apartment house.

Broiled Oysters on Toast at Getty's.

A new merchants' exchange building in Memphis was opened with prayer, in the course of which one member said, "They deal in futures here." "Yes, I see," said the other, "and by George they might as well open a jackpot with prayer."

R. J. Saxe, opera house, agent, "Knox" and Stetson's Hats.

The time may come when politics will mean all that is noble and good: when a small boy will break an apple in two and give his little sister the biggest half, when a tramp will work and a stray dog won't bite; but the day will never dawn when a fly can tickle a drowsy man's nose without getting itself disliked.

Ladies will be interested in looking through the varied assortment of slippers to be found at Whitney's. They have every desirable style, from the easy and comfortable house slipper to the elegant and graceful opera slipper.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

JOHN T. RAYMOND.

This popular Comedian positively remains with us but one night, viz: Friday next. He will do an enormous business there being a great curiosity to see him in his famous success "Fresh, the American." The sale of seats will begin on Thursday morning, and an early application is advisable. Raymond is one of the most welcome actors that we have, and always draws largely.

Barnstormers report one meal a day, but will remain out till they "get left" on this.

'Tis said that Kate Forsythe, John McCullough's leading lady, will star next season.

Miss Helen Dingeon, we are pleased to state, is out of the doctor's hands, and has recovered her voice. She will, however, remain in San Francisco during the winter.

Carrie Swain, who is meeting with success in the Eastern country with her play, "Cad, the Tramp," is now preparing for an extended tour through the South and Western country.

Little Minnie Palmer's pretty face, graceful figure and nimble feet have carried this little actress straight to the hearts of the American public.—[New York Sunday Courier. It's all right, brother Ford, as far as her face is concerned in the matter, but when you talk of Minnie's feet going straight through our hearts you are carrying things altogether too far. There should be a limit somewhere, you know.

MME. RHEA.

In Rhea lies, we realize, much talent bright and new.

She leaves her rivals in the rear—now this is really true.

We've said, and here we reaffirm in most decided tones,

We would not recall just the fame that Rhea rightly owns.

That we admire the lady fair, we reassert to you,

Nor would we rearrange the plays that Rhea rangea through.

DRAMATIC GOSSIP.

Can an actor be a sound man when he appears in two pieces?

John F. Raymond, in "Fresh, the American," Friday, December 8th.

The banjo craze is breaking out among fashionable young New York ladies.

The closing of the base-ball season does not seem to have increased the attendance at our Sunday schools.

John T. Malon's, late with James O'Neill, has joined F. B. Warde's company. He takes the place of Henry Aveling.

M. B. Leavitt has two hundred and thirty-one people in his employ at the present time, not counting managers and agents.

A manager advertises for a leading walking gentleman. If he would station himself in any cross-road in the country he could be accomodated in ten minutes.

Sarony is said to have given Mrs. Langtry $5,000 for the privilege of photographing her. If he uses the old-fashioned instruments of torture for holding a victim's head steady, the price is none too high.

Notice—The finest imported and domestic cigars in the city, at Lyon's cigar stand in Millard Hotel.

Miss Kate Thayer, according to Australian exchanges, has decided to make Sidney her future home. She has lately given a very successful series of concerts in Adelaide, South Australia.

Dion Boucicault is writing a play, called "Don Quixote," in which Henry Irving will play the Don. The great adapter sails for New York, on Dec. 9th, to bring out his new play, "Boyne Water." Thereupon, it is asked which of his old plays is this new one?

Mlle. Litta's room at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa., was entered by a thief, a few days since, while the prima donna was dining, and a medallion embellished with diamonds and worth nearly a thousand dollars was stolen.

Henry L. Cleveland, the well known tenor of this city, formerly with the Litta Concert company, is singing with the Fay Templeton Opera company and expresses his determination to devote himself to light opera, in which he succeeds very well.

Mr. Henry Labouchere, the editor of London Truth, is announced to leave Liverpool on December 16th for this country, and hopes to eat his Christmas dinner with his wife and Mrs. Langtry.

Ben Butler and James E. Murdoch met at the annual dinner of the Boston Press Club last Saturday night and renewed old acquaintance. The late Mrs Butler and Mr. Murdoch were members of the same theatrical company years ago.

HOW TO BECOME AN ACTOR.

BY LOUIS HARRISON.

If you want a receipt for that popular mystery,
Known to the world as an actor of plays,
Take all the great men of theatrical history,
Rattle them over in various ways.
The voice of Booth, with sad physiognomy,
Legs of McCullough (the feminine rage),
Strains of a Barrett's wheezing astronomy,
Teeth of a Keene masticating the stage;
The science of middlemen versed in geography,
Smile of a Morrissey, gentle and sweet,
Pen of an ass-thete in autobiography,
Prices of Patti (ten dollars a seat).
The "My God!" of Thorne in a play of society,
Morals of Abbott in operas of piety;
Judgment of Emmett in brands of old Hennessey,
Shrieks of Joe Proctor in wild Jibbonalissy;
Davenport, Anderson, Bowers and Rhea,
Salvini and Ikeasi in Hamlet and Lear—
Take of these elements all that's theatrical,
Cast out the parts that you find are bombastical,
Set 'em to simmer, and take off the scum,
And an actor you'll find is re ady a um.

Some wag put a skunk on the stage in Leadville, recently, and the local paper says the performance was unusually strong. The perpetrator was not found. Why did they not put the detectives on the scent?

Ladies will be interested in looking through the varied assortment of Slippers to be found at Whitney's. They have every desirable style, from the easy and comfortable house slipper to the elegant and graceful opera slipper.

Lily asks, "What is the origin of the term 'honeymoon'?" Well, Lily, we will be totolally amalgamated if we know what the origin of the term was. What the word honeymoon may have to do with that period when the young bridal band and wife are getting acquainted with each other's home styles of meanness, we are free to state we do not at this moment exactly know. Think of waking in the dead hours of night during this blessed time, called by the poets and other cannibal savants the honeymoon, to find that your noble Adolphus, whose whole being seems to you, Lily, to be the very no plus ultra, the ultima thule and the pro bono publico of perfection—think of finding in that stilly hour, we say, when all nature is hushed, that Adolphus snores enough to crack the eternal granite foundations of the universe. There are places, no doubt, Lily, where you can find out by ascertaining what the origin of this word is, but at this moment the required information has escaped our mind.—[Laramie Boomerang.

For a fine Havana Cigar call at the Opera House Cigar Factory, first door east of Boyd's Opera House. Mr. W. F. Lorenzen is the sole manufacturer of the popular brands "Omaha Favorite," "Opera" and "Hard to Beat." Store open during and after te-night's performance.

A young lady composed of seal bonnet and sacque,
With lover piled into papa's coachman's hacque,
But of funds did they lacque,
So came sadly bacque,
And have since straggled hard in toeing the cracque.

For fine arts and musical instruments go to A. Hospe, Jr.

A lady had in her employ an excellent girl who had one fault. Her face was always in a smudge. Mrs. —— tried to tell her to wash her face without offending her, and at last resorted to strategy. "Do you know, Bridget," she remarked in a confidential manner, "it is said if you wash your face every day in hot soapy water it will make you beautiful?" "Will it?" answered the wiley Bridget. "Sure its a wonder ye niver tried it, ma'am!"

SOCIETY AND THE STAGE.—High toned society in Ohio professes to be shocked because the wife of ex-Governor Denison's worthless son has been reduced to the necessity of earning an honest living by appearing upon the stage at St. Louis. Because she is "a cultured lady, connected by blood and marriage with the greatest names in Ohio," there is a great deal of silly sentiment expressed about the "reproach to the memory of Ohio's dead war-Governor," in that his son's wife has become an actress. Why it is not more honorable for unfortunate Mrs. Denison to earn a living for herself and children on the stage than to depend on the charity and false family pride of her relatives for a support, we cannot see. Many a lady, the equal of Mrs. Denison in blood and culture, and in every noble, womanly attribute, is now earning money on the stage as honorably as any Governor of Ohio ever earned his salary. Instead of driving such women from the stage, we should try to elevate it by encouraging them to take part in a profession which "society" patronizes, and in which they can do much to elevate and ennoble womanhood.

NOV. 23d, THANKSGIVING WEEK.

A Desperate Man.

Mr. Anson Pond's new play, "A Desperate Man," comes to Miner's Newark Theatre the week beginning Nov. 23d. Mr. Pond will be remembered as the author of the highly successful military play, entitled "Her Atonement." The new play, "A Desperate Man," is not a military play but a play of to-day; scenes are laid in New York City and vicinity. The scenery is elaborate, one of them representing the Palisades and Hudson River, with New York City in the distance; the cast includes some of the best artists in the theatrical firmament, among them Mr. E. J. Henley and Miss Julie Arthur, who lately made such a phenomenal success in New York.

The plot of the play is as follows:

A Mr. Fay and his wife are lost at sea. Mr. Fay, who had accumulated a large wealth, leaves a will with his lawyer, Mr. Post, bequeathing all to his wife to the total exclusion of a brother, with whom he had quarreled in earlier years. As both were lost upon the same ship, the question arises which survived the other, if only a short period. In case the wife died first, the husband's brother would be heir-at-law, but on the other hand, if the husband died first the wife's sister, Miss Beckwith would inherit. There are three survivors of the wreck, two sailors and a passenger, Mr. Harper, who were picked up on a raft at sea. Mr. Fay, the brother and Mr. Post, the lawyer question the sailors and find out that Mr. Fay died first; but they conceal the fact, bribe the sailors to silence and represent it otherwise to the sister, Miss Beckwith. Mr. Harper, the passenger did not witness the death of either Mr. or Mrs. Fay, therefore his testimony was useless. Mr. Post has agreed to act in unison with the brother for a large pecuniary consideration. Mr. Harper, who has met Miss Beckwith falls in love with her, which angers Mr. Fay, who has planned to marry her, partly from love and also to make doubly sure of the fortune. Mr. Fay first bribes the sailors to go to sea again, and then goes to rid himself of Harper. He plans with Mr. Harper and then challenges him to a duel on the Palisades of the Hudson. Having himself in ambush, he awaits his adversary. As a man approaches he fires, but it proves to be one of the sailors who has returned to interview Mr. Harper, instead of Mr. Harper himself. Mr. Fay escapes, and the sailor dies without confessing his share in the deception to defraud Miss Beckwith. Mr. Fay has nearly proved his right to the inheritance when it is discovered that he is the man guilty of causing the sailor's death. He escapes and plots again to rid himself of Mr. Harper by boarding the sailing steamer of a company-mate of his, and by the planning of a temporary bridge over a chasm over which he knows Mr. Harper will soon pass, he is caught in his own trap, thereby ending all legal complication.

THE GRAND SALON.

Our Lady patrons will find the afternoon a pleasant one, by visiting the Grand Salon on the balcony floor, where the Stage Curtain is down between the acts.

(Editorial from the "New Yorker Staats-Zeitung.")

THE EVOLUTION OF A GREAT HOUSE.

All organic creation of nature belonging to the highest order have approached their perfection gradually, and the period of this development embraces about one-third of the life of the species. Only in exceptional cases is this rule violated. This formula of nature applies as well to the spiritual and moral development as it does to the physical. The poet says that it was by the means of work only that the gods succeeded, and Lessing established the aphorism that "talent" means "work and will." With these two elements—work and will—even the highest aims can be attained and the greatest difficulties overcome. He who attains an aim has conquered in this struggle for existence; he survives as the strongest and the fittest.

The observations of all intelligent persons have led them distinctly to notice that these truths apply to the development of art and the evolutions of all kinds of art industries, which have become particularly interesting for the reason that they have engaged the attention of such a large number of talented individuals. As soon as any great success has been achieved in one of these sub-divisions of Industrial life, the advantages and the gain that accrue attract competition, and necessarily intensify the struggle for existence.

As an application of an individual case, we can instance the situation of the young firm of Sohmer & Co. about fifteen years ago. Piano manufacturing already ranked high among the art industries of the country, both in regard to the quality of pianos made and the enormous amount of capital invested. To embark in an enterprise in this field called for great courage and confidence—courage in recognizing the difficulties that would be encountered, and confidence in the ability ultimately to achieve success. Indeed, Messrs. Sohmer & Co., by entering the list of competitors in the Universal exposition of 1876, in Philadelphia, where they at once won a place of honor among old established firms, demonstrated to the world that they were endowed with those necessary attributes of success.

Looking back at their history, we find that this was the only episode in their career that can be attributed to luck, and that the firm knew how to avail themselves of it, through increased activity and indefatigable work, is acknowledged at the present time both in Europe and in this country. The result was that they soon doubled and then trebled their production of finished instruments. In an unprecedented manner they disclose the ability to force recognition of their worth and the value of the article with which their name is connected so intimately.

In furtherance of the plan and the scope of their operations, and without being or appearing to be obtrusive, they understood how to utilize the public temper and where speech or the printing press did not suffice to enlarge the environment of their fame they had recourse to art, and necessarily sought the aid of the artist, himself. Who does not remember those humorous cartoons, attesting at the same time the earnest attention of the people in which Franz Liszt and, again, Bismarck were depicted as sitting before a Sohmer Piano?

What on these occasions the art of drawing and coloring accomplished as a well-earned tribute to merit, the mouthpiece of public opinion—the daily, as well as the periodical press—endorsed in numberless instances without the slightest hesitation. The Sohmers, one is almost prompted to say, are favorites of the press. They have never found it necessary to make use of apologetic puffs, as is usual in their branch of business, but, like cultured people, whenever they sent their card to the press it was favorably received, and to day the press returns its compliments to them.

The growth of this establishment, even in this progressive land, is almost without parallel. From making 150 instruments per year, as they did in the beginning, the firm now actually make and finish 2,000 pianos annually, and employ about 350 workmen all the year round. Their factory building is located in Astoria, its dimensions being 160 feet front, 200 feet deep, and six stories high. The lumber-yards have an area of 30,000 square feet, but this does not represent all the space devoted to their establishment, for on the corner of Fourteenth Street and Third Avenue, they occupy in addition to their splendid warerooms, a four-story edifice, in which can be found the polishers and tuners of the firm, who add the last finishing touches to the parlor grand, upright and concert grand pianos that are shipped by the firm to all points of the compass. Square pianos, which few people of musical taste now fancy, do not figure very largely in piano-making at this date.

As to the artistic value of these instruments, no weightier evidence can be adduced in their favor than that of the constantly increasing demand for them. No salesrooms in this line of business are so constantly crowded with purchasers, pianists, music teachers, and others interested in music, than are those of Sohmer & Co. With his natural suavity and pleasing manners, the senior member of the firm, Mr. Hugo Sohmer can be seen imparting information to both friends and strangers, and here also may be seen Mr. Joseph Ruder the technical superintendent, as well as Mr. Charles Fahr, who has charge of the finances and advertising and Mr. Georgs Reichman in charge of the warerooms, as chief salesman. To what extent this immense work has been subdivided by these four partners, whose efforts have attained such gratifying results, can hardly be comprehended by the layman. The music trade press has paid a great and worthy tribute to their restless energy, to their indefatigable thought, and activity, which are now universally recognized by all who come in contact with them.

In accordance with the rules adopted to perfect their relations with the outer world, the firm have also thoroughly adjusted their own internal organization. The four men who compose the firm represent an absolutely united body; united not by blind chance, but by the conscious feeling and the thorough knowledge of their high aims and purposes. It needs only a superficial observation to perceive that here exists a spirit of harmony seldom met elsewhere, in spheres where men are supposed to co-operate for a common result.

This is one of the reasons why the firm exercise such powerful influence upon their outside representatives, and through them upon the industry of the world at large, and the masses from whom the piano purchasers are drawn; and these very influences make their relations to their competitors a unique example of the result of the highest mercantile ethics applied particularly to a line of industry in which the competition is so acute.

Considering, as we have already stated, that the piano business at the time of the founding of the firm of Sohmer & Co. had already reached a highly flourishing state, making it exceedingly difficult for beginners to enter the field, the success of this house appears in contrast yet more brilliant, and places its members in the most favorable light. This light becomes the more intense, in view of the fact that since the establishment of the firm, a number of financial crises have swept over the land, throwing obstacles in the path of great enterprises, and crippling countless numbers of them. The labor troubles also, which in many cases ruined industry—and a few months ago with particular industry—must be taken into consideration. These disturbances did not affect the house of Sohmer & Co. The business tact and commercial knowledge of the members of the firm enable them successfully to encounter at any time, financial emergencies and workingmen's demands, the latter always being met by them in a spirit of conciliation, without which industry does not seem to be able to prosper.

Whoever carefully considers the remarkable career of this firm will understand how the house of Sohmer & Co. has reached its present pinnacle of fame.

THE TRIANGLE

by Fred and Hedda Breadhead

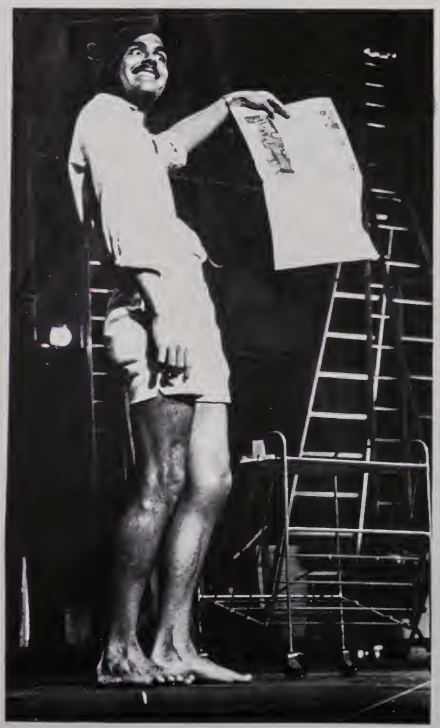
Contrary to popular belief, the first triangle was not discovered in ancient Babylon by explorer Lloyd Parks; instead, it was unearthed in New Jersey by Public Parks. The triangle turned out to be over 40,000 years old and was evidently used by Indians as a wheel. Other triangles, believed to date back to 1500 B.C., have been found in Europe and Asia and were used as primitive Zippo lighters. There is no further record of triangles until Grecian times when it was used as a party snack and became known as the "internal triangle." This is not to be confused with the cheap Roman copy the "eternal" triangle between Caesar, Cleopatra, and Rudolf Valentino. It reappeared briefly during the Renaissance when Leonardo Da Vinci invented it as a new wheel. Later, the triangle was used during the Spanish Inquisition as a means of extracting confessions from caretakers. Knowledge of the triangle was banned in the civilized world as part of Oliver Cromwell's Blue Laws. Finally, with the onset of the industrial revolution, the triangle came into its own when GM proposed putting a motor on it and using it as a wheel.

THE TRIANGLE CLUB

by Fred and Hedda Breadhead

The first triangle club was made of bronze and was used by the Sado-Macedonians in their wars with the Phonetians. The Sado-Macedonians were later conquered by the Romans who used the superior iron battle square. The triangle club is now merely a curiosity, interesting collectors of ancient weapons.

A Titter ran thro



by
Fred and Hedda Breadhead

This year's Triangle show, A Titter Ran Through The Audience , was adapted from the autobiography of Winston Churchill by Donald Ducko in 1938. The intermission fireworks (performed outside this year) were inspired by the article in Scientific American "The Nu-Softlenz", by Seymour Cleerly.

The curtain opens on Tyme, a small island in the Mediterranean. Our Hero, Putridites, has spent the last 32 months looking for his wife, Polident, who was seduced by Zeus (no pun intended) in the form of a lasagna dinner. Putridites has nearly given up hope when he bumps into his friend Stupidites, a Cretan by name, who should not have appeared until the third act. Stupidites goes into his closing speech, which at least gets him off stage. Unhampered, Putridites continues his search.

He arrives at the home of the Whopper, and a vicious battle ensues. Putridites emerges the victor, but only after using both hands. The thankful townspeople crown him Burger King. Overcome with joy, he breaks into song, asking that rhetorical question: "Ain't We Got Buns?" He learns that Zeus has turned Polident's skin into a day-glow yellow, intent on using her as a neon sign for his string of short-order restaurants. Putridites sets off on his search, leaving the townspeople singing "You'll Wonder Where's The Yellow Wench".

ough the audience

As Putridites pauses to rest on an island in the Hollywood Freeway, he accidentally saves a small bird from a passing semi. The little bird mentions having seen a woman as a neon light in front of Zeus's Burgers n' Juices (no pun intended). But the little bird tells Putridites that his own mate has died, singing "There's A Birdie Heaven At 7-11". Both of them are in tears and are clinging to each other when Stupidites, having broken free, runs on to the stage in a gunny sack and plunges headlong into the audience.

Putridites goes to insult the Orafice at Delphi, and finds himself at the mouth of the river Stux, where the boatman, President Harding, takes him across the river and into a Nether World. The President sings his harding out in "I'm Just A-Floatin' and A-Boatin' and A-," whereupon he falls into the river. Safely on the other side, Putridites meets the famous nightclub entertainer, E. Lesion Fields, who is engaged in entertaining a tribe of Welts by mixing apples with cranberries. When the Welts see a three-headed Gatorade crawl up on the riverbank, they arm themselves with snorkles and prepare to put up a fight. But they flee in terror when they discover that it is actually Stupidites who has climbed up from the orchestra pit with the remains of two cellos around his neck. Smelling a lunch truck, Stupidites runs through the scenery and off stage. Shrugging it off, Putridites and Fields sing "All's Well That Ends Welts," accompanied by an oboe, the only piece in the orchestra still functioning.

His search having been discovered, Putridites learns from Fields that his wife has been changed from yellow to puce by Zeus (no pun intended). He decides he must confront Zeus, and so he ventures to a Ramada Inn in Melpetius, California, where he has learned that Zeus is disguised as a plastic brick display in the lobby. Putridites arrives and, on his knees, passionately beseeches the display for news of his wife. Receiving no answer, he breaks into the song "Be A Good Brick".

The next day in court, testifying on his own behalf, he notices a brick seated in the third row. After paying the fine, he hurries over to the brick, which has now become a fire inspector. The fire inspector takes Putridites to Zeus while singing "I Can't Make Excuses For Zeus's Abuses".

They ascend Mount Olympus to the Laundromat of the Gods where sins are washed away and detergent is free. There he confronts Zeus, who is sitting upon a golden Maytag. Zeus looks down from his throne and says into the television camera, "Washing my tennis shoes is only one of Zeus's uses for 'Cold Water All'." He looks at the housewives around him and they dejectedly look down at Putridites. "What's the matter," he asks, "don't you get the pun?"

Putridites, in ill humor, cracks a number of pneumonia jokes. He explains that he has come for his wife. Zeus, amused, decides to give Putridites one last chance to find his mate (who is being held captive in a double load dryer). "All right," says Zeus. "Just answer this riddle, and your wife is yours: What goes on two light legs in the morning and on two enormous wheels right now?"

"Is it Man," suggests Putridites, "as he journeys throughout life?"

"No," screams Zeus. "It's Stupidites on a steam roller, and he's heading this way." They all run for cover as Stupidites breaks through the back wall and proceeds to demolish the set. The curtain closes as a terrified oboist runs across the stage, with Stupidites in hot pursuit.

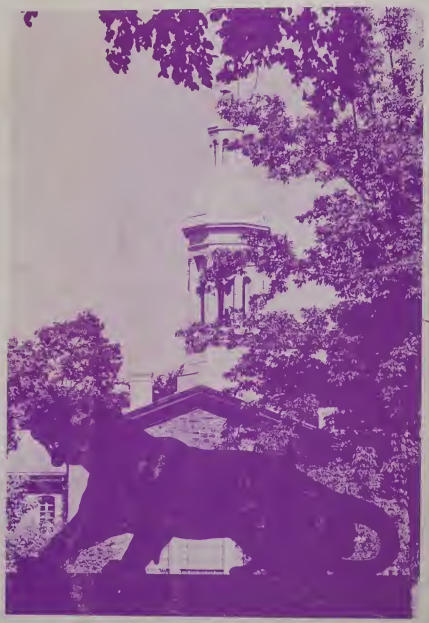
Concerned Alumni of Princeton



To us, a Princeton student is more than a mind and Princeton is more than a tool to be used for teaching and research.

We want students to have the chance to live Princeton—to take advantage of the traditions that no other school has, nor can ever have; traditions that once we lose, we can never have either.

Triangle is one of those traditions whose worth, we believe, can be measured by the enrichment it will bring to the education of the students you will see tonight. And Triangle will grow in value to these young men and women who will recall the pains and triumphs of "A Titter . . ."

Triangle is a tradition that is eighty-five years old. By recognizing Triangle's past, we don't want to return to those first shows—we just want to prepare ourselves for the great evening at Princeton that is on the way.

AN INFALLIBLE REMEDY.—"How are you coming on, old boy?" "I'm not coming on at all. I'm going on." "Hold up. I've got an awful headache and an awful taste in my mouth. Don't you know some remedy for the misery I'm suffering from this morning." "Yes, I know a good cure for it. Don't get drunk last night. Good bye."

A SURVEYOR'S GUESS.—Gus Snobberly, accompanied by Charlie Clamthopper, called on the Misses Bondclipper, of Fifth avenue. While waiting an in the parlor they observed the photographs of the young ladies in an album. "How much she two sistahs wesemble each other," "Yaas, I dah say they were twakan by the same photogwapan, don't yar know."

With the advent of the New Year down go our prices—another notch. We try to lead on popular prices and we do it. "Are you the tax collector of this ward?" he asked, as they rode together on the platform. "No." "Assessor?" "No." "Waterworks man?" "No." "Anything to do with the census?" "Nothing of the sort. Why do you ask?" "Why, I saw you coming out of a house on Sprout street the other day with two chairs, a broom, and an ottoman dying after you, and I said to myself that you were an official or an agent of some sort, and had unintentionally offended the woman." "No, I'm no official or agent," replied the man in a scornful voice. "I live there, and that woman is my wife. D'you understand?" "You bet!" was the sympathetic response, and they crept closer together and took snuff from the same box.

Since it was last seen here the piece has been improved by the introduction of new "business," funnier than anything laughed at in it before. All those who wish to laugh themselves hoarse will attend next week. Bear in mind our prices.

SATURDAY'S SIFTINGS.

At a school examination a clergyman was decanting on the necessity of growing up loyal and useful citizens.—In order to give emphasis to his remarks, he pointed to a large fig which decorated one side of the schoolroom, and said: "Here, what is that fine fig for?" An urchin, who evidently understood the condition of the room better than he did the speaker's rhetoric, exclaimed: "To hide the dirt, sir." The speaker wilted.

Now is the time to purchase cheaply household furniture. MASON is making tremendous reductions in the price of every article in his immense warerooms. If you see prices quoted in any part of this newspaper of furniture, carpets, oilcloths, bedding or bedding, bring it to us and we guarantee to give positive bridge referred to 20 per cent. less, and, moreover, on a credit of one month or more. MASON'S, Myrtle avenue, corner Bridge street.

"Does your baby kick when you try to put it to sleep?" asked one young married man of another. "No," was the reply. "Still do when I am asked to feed it."

There is no taste that cannot be gratified in its desire for parlor furniture at MASON'S, for there the styles are various, the workmanship good, and the upholstering materials for covering of the richest and best kind. Every attention paid to callers. Information cheerfully given, and all orders exactly and punctually filled. Our system of credits generous and payments accepted in small amounts. A cadaver of Dorwich at the present time would show that about 1cd persons out of every 10cs are suffering from a miserable cold in the head. Sneezy thig to catch, a code is.—Merwyn Cross Bulletin.

There is scarcely a question on the fact that MASON has the largest and best assortment of chamber furniture in Brooklyn. Now after new of walnut, mahogany, ash, cherry and maple suits are set up so that visitors may have the opportunity of thoroughly examining our goods and be convinced by more than verbal description as to their merit. We know our prices are much below the market rates, and we are certain that no honest person will find fault with the terms of credit under which we sell. MASON'S, Myrtle avenue, corner Bridge street.

A large shipment of sausages was made to Europe yesterday. Probably going over to be impenetrated by Pasteur.—Yonkers Statesman.

Our stores are proving their merit all over the city we hear nothing but commendation about them; their cooking, heating and economical qualities have won for them a place in the front rank, nor overlooking in the scientific laws of heat and its reflection can disturb. We confidently recommend them to you, are their price to be much lower than the old-fashioned stoves sold elsewhere. Credit given if desired at MASON'S, Myrtle avenue, Corner Bridge street.

"Pass for they always find gas when they bore for it?" asked Bobby. "Yes, Egbert; you may depend upon it that where there is a bore there is always gas."

Do not pass this notice without making a note of it. MASON'S are going to close out their large stock of carpets, and are going to close them at such prices as will cause them to move. The salesmen are not restricted as to prices, so there will be a bargain there for a few months. While these are here they are going off make sure of one or two. Every great example of punishment has in it some justice, but the suffering individual is compensated by the public good.

As the blessings of health and fortune have a beginning, so they must also find an end. Everything rises but to fall, and increases but to decay.

The enjoyments of this life are not equal to its evils, even in number; there is no joy which can be weighed against the smallest degree of grief.

Nothing is sillier than a silly laugh.

"The Romany Rye."—In the "Romany Rye" the playwright tells us that there are two brothers, Royston by name, who have made imprudent marriages. One married a handsome gypsy girl, who, for good cause, leaves him, carrying her child back with her to her gypsy tribe. This child afterwards becomes Jack Hearne, personification of the "Romany Rye." Mother and child are supposed to be dead, however, and the father marries again and leaves a son, Philip, heir to the estate. The other aged Royston, Jack and Philip's uncle, has secretly married some obscure creature, who dies and leaves an orphan behind her in the care of her grandfather, a dilettante bird fancier, whose shop is in that quarter of London known as Little Queer Street, St. Giles. This is the state of affairs when the curtain rises, and we learn shortly afterwards that Jack is in love with Gertie, that Philip has discovered that Gertie is, unknown to herself, the heir-in-law to her uncle; her father's estate, into possession of which he has come, and that he proposes to marry Gertie, to make good his title, that Jack is aware of how he (Jack) is, but, being fond of his gypsy life, does not propose to declare himself and claim his estate, unless Philip's rascality shall become too pronounced, and the story of the play tells of Philip pursuing Gertie in and out of all sorts of dramatic situations.

It is the production of George R. Sims, and its immense success is easily understood, for it possesses all the elements of popularity—plenty of movement, variety of detail and magnificent scenes. The play is of the scenic, romantic, spectacular order. The scenery and mechanisms are exact productions of those used at the Princess' Theatre, London. The stage effects produced in the play are certainly beyond anything yet seen in this city. Whether in detail of the Gypsy Encampment, the old bird shop in St. Giles (Craig Street), Hampton Race Course, Deck of the Saratoga, Altar of the Black Craft, changing to the river Thames, Wreck of the Saratoga &c., are that, for realism, grandeur and thrilling effects, have never before been seen on any stage.

The Lee Ave. Academy of Music is built of brick from foundation to dome, and covered with iron, the roof is of iron; the stage is encircled with four massive brick walls and has six exits from the same opening into vacant lots. The auditorium is furnished with the following exits: Five from the orchestra, within 15 feet of the street, the center exit being 17 feet wide, and two side-front exits 6 feet wide each, and two on the side. The Balcony has four exits, 6 feet wide each and within 20 feet of the street. The New Style Sealskin Garments introduced by C. C. Shayne, 103 Prince Street are very popular.

Skating Rinks Must Go.

The Hoboken Common Council last evening adopted an ordinance making skating rink licenses $250. No minors will be admitted after 5 p. m., and no persons but parents and guardians will be admitted during the day. No minors will be admitted during the night and no intoxicating liquors can be sold. Several Councilmen said that rinks are very detrimental to morals, and they wanted them abolished.

WE present to our friends the first number of our paper this evening, and we shall hereafter issue one at each of our performances. The success of the Centennial Dramatic Association is unprecedented in every respect, and we feel convinced that those who have from time to time witnessed our endeavors to please, will coincide in our opinion, when we state, that since February, 1876, we have given eight public performances, two public receptions (dismantle), one excursion, first June. We have also given twenty-six socials, at which our members entertained their friends.

We have some two hundred and fifty members, including our much esteemed, pains taking, honorary members, the Mozart Musical Union, whose untiring efforts and efficient aid have so largely contributed to establish our organization on the solid foundation it now occupies.

We must not neglect to mention our lady performing members, to whom the warmest thanks are due, for the progress they have made. With the single exception of Miss Alice Woodhull, none of them have had any experience on the stage, until during the last year in this society. None of our members belong to any other similar society, with one exception; and, in fact, it is purely an amateur organization. We shall study during the summer, for our next winter season, when we hope once more to meet our friends, and until then we bid them a kind adieu.

SUPPOSING that our friends would like to know how our organization is constituted, we would state, that we have about forty gentlemen and lady performers. The rest of the gentleman members, numbering over one hundred, attend the meetings and socialbes. All ladies are exempt from dues, etc; but on joining, are merely honorary members, until they are transferred to the active or performing roll, when they are entitled to the privileges of the other members, as to the drawing of tickets, etc. None are obliged to play unless they desire; but all can attend the socials and meetings, which occur every second and fourth Tuesday evening, at the residence of Mr. C. D. Evans, 158 Ross street, when recitations, vocal and instrumental music, dancing and other amusements are indulged in. We shall present next season several new faces, both ladies and gentlemen, who are now members, and who are preparing for their debuts, and whom, we are sure, our friends will appreciate. Some of our first citizens belong to our society, and have fully entered into the spirit of it, and we have no doubt that the two hundred and fifty odd members we now have will be increased to five hundred next season.

Centennial Rhyme.

In the early part of Seventy-six,
The Centennials started life,
And as the time rolled slowly on,
They entered in the strife.

Now C. D. Evans took the (h)elm,
As staunch as British oak;
But, as if to guard 'gainst accidents,
Called to his aid John Roake.

These two old "pilots," hand in hand,
At once searched for a crew,
To assist them navigate their craft,
As yet so young and new.

In steering clear of "mality" men,
They met with many stops;
But, finally, ahead they went,
Until they "struck" on Horps.

They then began to sing "All's well,"
After spreading out their trammel.
But, doubtless, little thought to make
Such a mighty haul as Bamel.

Nor did the fishers' luck end here,
For when they got their fish on,
They spied a "prize," set sail, gave chase,
And captured Robert Hibson.

'Tis useless to describe their cruise,
Or all their prizes run over;
But Falkner, Wilson, all joined in,
Including Captain Conover.

Now anyone who hopes to wreck
Our social floating palace,
Take my advice, don't try, you'll fail,
Yours, very truly, Dallas.

Mr. Snap's First Appearance.

Mr. Snap was quite a versatile genius. He had won high honors as dancer, skater, rower and marksman, was at great demand at church fairs and entertainments, could sing a good song, make a telling speech, always took the winning side at debating clubs. Thinking to open a new field for ambition he joined an Amateur Dramatic Association.

Undreamed of annoyances now beset him upon every side. Though fully persuaded in his own mind that Booth's reputation would have been nowhere, if Solon Snap had but adopted the stage as a profession, he was first cast for quite a subordinate character. Mr. Snap's primal impulse was to indignantly refuse it, but upon second thoughts, as his only important scene proved a thrilling love passage with a very pretty girl, he decided to accept it.

A yellow covered play book now became Mr. Snap's constant companion. At home, before breakfast in the morning and late into the quiet hours of night, on the ferry-boat, in horse-cars, and at his office it conscientiously made its appearance, and it is even whispered that it lay inside his hymn-book at church on Sunday.

Mrs. Snap, who always humored her husband's fancies, was now enlisted as assistant in numerous private rehearsals. After every meal, they rushed to their cosy parlor and the performance began. Observing that the first rule in the "Amateur's Assistant" was to "speak up," Mr. Snap pitched his voice to its highest key, and sonorously declaimed the most impassioned sentences. The next rule "stand still" was much more difficult to interpret, but, with the aid of the pier glass, Mr. Snap succeeded in mastering several becoming and suggestive attitudes. As he thoroughly acquired the lines his oratorical efforts became more and more forcible, and his enthusiasm unbounded. Imagine his chagrin, when he learned that his next door neighbors, were reporting that amiable Mr. and Mrs. Snap were in a constant state of warfare, and that the threats and reproaches, which found their way through the walls were absolutely heartrending.

At regular rehearsals with the company, Mr. Snap was decidedly more subdued, and carelessly rattled off his words, in imitation of "the stars," who never condescend to waste their talent at rehearsals.

As the time for the performance drew near that last rule in the "Amateur's Assistant" "Be correctly dressed," haunted Mr. Snap continually. Not being content with the views of the costumer of the society, he visited ten other establishments, and obtained from their proprietors ten different descriptions of the costume needed. This was extremely perplexing. Wig manufacturers differed as essentially as costumers, but all agreed as to one particular, Mr. Snap must sacrifice his luxurious mustache and whiskers, and wear an artistic "make-up" of their designing. This being practical information, Mr. Snap being a practical man acted upon it immediately. Upon leaving the tonsorial chair he met numerous acquaintances who returned his nods with a juggled expression. As he opened his front door, the dog began barking furiously, and the cat elevated her back, and rushed precipitately down stairs. Little Edith, his baby daughter, set up most heartrending screams, and when he essayed to pacify her, grew almost frantic, to get away from the naughty man, who called himself her papa. Mrs. Snap ridiculed him unmercifully until her laughter grew hysterical, and she burst into a flood of tears.

This occurred the morning of the performance. For a week beforehand, Mr. Snap had visited the newspaper offices, to get on the right side of the reporters, and had been so lavish in the distribution of his extra tickets to the press, that Mrs. Snap had none left for her innumerable aunts, cousins and sisters-in-law. A quarrel in the family was only one result of Mr. Snap's dramatic experience.

By a quarter before seven that noted worthy was completely attired for his part, though he was not to make his appearance, until the third act of the play. Nervous and agitated as he felt, one thought alone sustained him. Suppose Lester Wallack or some other noted manager was in the audience, as soon as the curtain fell would he not make his way behind the scenes, seize Snap by the hand, greet him as a newly discovered genius, and immediately offer him a thousand dollars a week to electrify the public at his theatre. With this glorious idea uppermost in his mind no wonder Mr. Snap was rather oblivious to stage business, and such petty details as standing still, giving the right cues, or addressing his speeches to the actors instead of the audience. Nevertheless his delivery was a masterpiece of oratory, he needed no aid from the prompter, and the assembly applauded most heartily—as he made his exit.

When all was over Mr. Snap did not feel particularly comfortable. No rich manager appeared, his fellow actors, the pretty girl in particular scolded him for spoiling their parts; his friends and neighbors congratulated him rather coolly, and his wife, who belonged to the new era, and was neither blind nor jealous mischievously laughed at him for making a fool of himself.

One solace remained. What would the newspapers say? They were not yet heard from. The next day every paper in the city was eagerly perused by Mr. Snap. Oh! blessed result of mediocrity, not one had considered him worthy of particular mention. To be criticised is to possess merit, to be let alone is death to dramatic inspiration. Only one drop of comfort remained. Some busybody who occasionally dabbled in dramatic critics.n for a third rate weekly published a letter literally tearing in tatters Mr. Snap's histrionic venture. Nearly two columns were devoted to his personal appearance, voice, manner, gestures, and delivery, and Mr. Snap was satisfied. To the ambitious notoriety is everything, and he felt that it was attained. This was Mr. Snap's first and last appearance on the amateur stage.

Mozart Musical Union.

We attended the concert given by this society, on the 12th of April last, at Irving Hall. The musical hall was crowded by a very large and fashionable audience, and we are pleased to say a very appreciable one. The programme was decidedly classical, and the selections made were admirable. We think the Overture to the "Merry Wives of Windsor" was exceedingly well executed, and we have requested them to repeat it at this performance. The audience evinced their approval of the society's splendid efforts by rapturously applauding at the close of each piece. Mr William Biele, as usual, conducted, and he had perfect command of the performers. Miss Alice Dowe and Mr Henry Hyman, of the Centennials, received a perfect ovation from the audience, and the lady was presented with an elegant stand of flowers. Miss Dowe's piano solo was excellently well rendered, and Mr. Hyman's fine bass voice was heard to great advantage.

The elegant furniture used on this occasion is from Joseph Huhn's Furniture and Upholstery Warehouse, No. 58 Court street, Brooklyn.

Wm. Buschmann, 327 Broome Street, New York, furnishes music for balls, picnics, parties, Weddings, etc.

When a rehearsal is called for 8 o'clock, don't think of attending till 9 or half-past, because the ladies' time is worth nothing, and it's much better to rehearse till midnight than otherwise.

When members come to meetings on a stormy night they are requested not to wipe their boots on the mat, but to walk straight in the room on the "crash," and if a vacant space is to be seen in the carpet it should be "gone for" at once.

Why is the "Centennial" like beer? Because "Hopps" is in it. We hope he will not feel mutt treated by this.

WEDDING DAYS.

Thoughts on that Eventful Period.

(From the London Truth.)

The wedding day may be the most eventful day in a woman's life, but it is not the happiest, though it is conventionally called so. Nor is it the man's. Both the chief parties to a wedding out rather awkward figures and play difficult parts on the day when they are made one in the presence of a great concourse of friends, neighbors and indifferent folks. The only brides who can really enjoy a wedding day are those who do not much care for their bridegrooms or who have struggled towards marriage under circumstances which convert their wedding day into splendid personal triumphs. In humbler life, when a girl marries a man who is her superior in station, she must experience a moment of exquisite delight when her union is consecrated amid a circle of envious friends. But to ordinary couples who love each other, and whose match is so well assorted in respect of age, station and fortune that it excites no wonder, the wedding day is certainly a tiresome one. The two young people are impatient to be united, and they glory in the day that is to make them man and wife; but all the formalities of nuptials seem to them most tedious. The bride expectant rises in the morning unrefreshed by a sleepless night and nervous in anticipation of the day's proceedings. A glance at her mirror shows her that she is not looking her best. Corrective speaking a man has no rights over his bride until the wedding is over, and consequently he has no business to kiss one before strangers, but at court weddings they settle the difficulty by a compromise and kiss their brides on the hand. Early the bustle reigns who can at such a wedding day. The worst case is the bridegroom is that his glum looks may work upon his bride's nerves and make her cry. There are brides who are said upon to sob in church as the consecrated seal is set on the bond. Others are better. Anything is better than the bridegroom puts a moist face against that which he is made to appear a moment after wiping off an incongruous cambric mixture of her with and tender hers. If she is not shining in the greatest admiration when she comes to the melting mood several times over in one day. Some tears are, of course, excusable, and one honest, unpremeditated outburst at the moment when the newly constant wife leaves the home where she has been so happy is but a proof of her good-heartedness, which the bridegroom should note as a glad augury, seeing that cold-hearted girls do not as a rule, make warmly attached wives. On the whole, however, let a wedding be untrifled with out levity, and as it is the bridegroom who strikes the key-note of the prevailing sentiment at a wedding, let him clothe his features in serenity

In a little family discussion the other day, the madam remarked somewhat tartly, "When I marry again—" "I suppose you will marry a fool," interrupted the husband. "Beg your pardon," she said, "I shall do nothing of the kind; I prefer a change." The lord and master wilted.

REJECTED HIS SUIT.

The Argonaut.

A brother-lover's tender maid,
To woo her were his designed,
And he sent her copies of gushing verse,
In fact, mash-notes times.

The first she read and read again,
But when they him sing brother,
"Sir, mash notes never marry maid,
Trips, please, at first another."

He knew that that such pas were vain,
But so he'd other said,
"Since you first brother me such distress,
I'll mash you when I'm dead."

He took to drink, to down his cares,
And then I ought no relief;
But daily grew more woe begone,
Yet never smaller grief.

At last his weary soul found rest,
His sorrows now are o'er;
No fickle maid now troubles him,
Pork reacher, he's no more.

The Mistake of a Mine Owner.

A man, now a prominent merchant of Virginia City, won at poker an undeveloped gravel claim near Nevada City, worth in the neighborhood of $200. His friends had the laugh on him for several days regarding his "investment," and asked him what proportion of the taxes he would pay in case they accepted the property as a gift. He finally got mad at their incessant guying, and told them they would see he was not such a fool as they took him for before he got through with that mine. He then wrote to some capitalist acquaintances that he had a claim worth a fabulous sum which he would sell for $2,000, being hard pressed financially. The bank was next visited, $500 worth of gold dust and nuggets bought, and the claim thoroughly "salted." When the intending purchasers arrived they prospected the the ground a little, and the panning-out was attended by big clean-ups. They paid the $2,000 the same day and got possession of the ground. Work was at once begun and they took out $8,000 inside of three weeks. The "salter" was so taken back that he did not smile for a month, and the parties to whom he confided his shrewdness at the time of its perspiration never meet him to this day but they ask him if he has another gravel mine to sell.—From the Nevada Transcript.

Judge Poland's Prize Cow.

A good story is told about Judge Poland, who for many years was representative in Congress from Vermont. The Judge is not a strict temperance man, and cannot make as good speeches upon water or milk as he does when offered something stronger. He was invited to make a speech in Maine, where the temperance laws are stringent. The chief committeeman knew that judge required a little inspiration, so he placed two mugs, supposed to be filled with milk, on the table behind which the judge stood to harangue the crowd. Shyly the committeeman intimated to the judge which mug he should drink from. The hint was understood, and the judge had not gotten far on his discourse before he became thirsty; he raised the goblet, quaffed it to the bottom, and set it down with the unctuous exclamation, "Ye gods, what a cow!"—Washington Letter to the Courier-Journal.

A PATHETIC ROMANCE.

Lovers Elope—The Woman Recaptured—The Law Invoked.

Thomas B. Wheeless is a young farmer of some means who resides near Greenville, Meriwether county, Ga. He has been, for a year or two past, quite devoted to Miss Womble, daughter of a well-to-do planter in the neighboring county of Upson. Wheeless avowed his passion, and found that it was reciprocated. There was but one natural course for him to pursue, and that was to marry the lady at once. He found an obstacle at once, however, in the refusal of her stern father, who, it seems, for some reason, cherished a hearty dislike to the successful suitor, for his daughter's love. Young Wheeless plead in vain. Young Miss Womble made an ineffectual effort to move parental determination with her smiles and tears. Her lover was forbidden the house, and the old home was to her like the castles of poetry, in which fair ladies languished under lock and key and sighed for their much abused knights. Young Wheeless had enough of the old time chivalry left in him to resolve that he would have the lady of his love in spite of all dangers and difficulties. He got her, too, in the genuine romantic way.

The dark, drizzling night, the gallant young farmer mounted his best horse, and rode twenty miles to the house of the woman he loved. He arrived about midnight. She knew of his coming, and a light in her window told him that all was well. The house had was wrapped in sleep. Two big dogs were the closest, but easy, but since the fall of the night they had been locked into the dairy, distance until they, too, had grown indifferent, a fluttering little heart quivered between hope and fear. She never knew which. But felt that he must come.

At last she heard a pebble fall on the roof, and, almost mad with joy, leaped up and prepared to meet her lover.

SHE TIED TWO QUILTS TOGETHER, and, fastening one end of this bungle-some rope to the bedstead, the second the other, gently raised the window, blew out the lamp, and swung out into the arms of her proud lover. Putting her on the horse behind him, like "Gertrude and Edna," they dashed through the darkness, and rode safely to his home in two days. Next morning they were duly married.

The news of the escapade of the Womble household soon the land of Wheeless, and the lover's brother, who was not in sympathy with the match, vowed that the runaways should not be left in peace. They had about sixteen miles away. In which they succeeded in locating the recaptured. The poor, afflicted husband, bereft of his wife, stood by and looked on like a helpless spectator of the scene, and a dozen young fellows volunteered to join the Wheeless in their expedition against the Wheeless. They left later in the afternoon armed with shotguns and revolvers, and mounted on the best horses in the county. They reached the happy home of the groom just as a party of friends had gathered to celebrate the wedding. One of the brothers of the bride took two men into the door with him and asked for Miss Womble. He was told that a lady who was once Miss Womble was in bed would see him. The bride came out and shrieked when she saw her angry brother.

HE SEIZED HER,

and in an instant was surrounded by his band. They were armed and in no furious that resistance would have been folly. They went off with the bride to the horror of Wheeless and his friends. As soon as they had gone the young husband determined to follow and recapture his wife. His friends gladly joined him. They armed themselves as well as their enemies and set out to the Womble mansion. It was almost daybreak when they reached there. At once they demanded entrance and the restoration of the bride. To their surprise they found only a few old ladies within, who, frightened almost to death, assured them that "the boys" had not returned. The party then encamped in front of the house and laid a formal seige. About ten o'clock they saw the Womble brothers and their father riding leisurely up the road towards the house. Wheeless angrily demanded his wife. He received as angry a reply and was told that she was put out of the reach of such scoundrels as he. Blood boiled on both sides and a desperate fight seemed to be the only possibility. There were fortunately some sober brains on both sides and they cooled the more heated disputants and dissuaded them from the [illegible]. THURSDAY APRIL 23.

AMUSEMENTS.

MISS. CONWAY'S.—Miss Clara Morris is playing Cora in ARTHUR 47 with wonderful success. Miss Morris burst upon New York as a dramatic meteor, astonishing the public with the brilliancy of her genius. Unlike a meteor, however, she has not with one flash of brilliancy passed out of sight, but in the theatrical firmament she has become a fixed planet, whose light is not of that steady and sustained calmness, but flashes and coruscates in a manner bewildering and fascinating to all who behold her. She stands to-day pre-eminently the emotional actress of the day, and in those occasional bursts of passion she seizes her audience and whirls them up out of their surroundings in the gust created by her own intensity.

SAMUELLS' NEW PARK THEATRE.—The Holman English Opera Bouffe Troupe are playing at this house. During the week the GRAND DUCHESSE, BOHEMIAN GIRL, SOMNAMBULA, and ORPHEE AUX ENFERS will be produced. These artists are famous in this repertoire, and should draw full houses. Next week Lydia Thompson and her famous troupe will appear for one week.

HOOLEY'S.—Scenation is the motto of the management of this house, and the trial and tribulations of a Herald correspondent in the interior of North Carolina is the study of Mr. J. R. Kilbourne in THE SWAMP ANGELS; OR, THE OUTLAWS OF NORTH CAROLINA. It is an interesting play, and was written for Mr. Kilbourne by Charles Foster.

OLYMPIC.—Ernest Byrne is the great attraction at Donnelly's this week. A female impersonator of the most unparalleled skill in make up. Cool Burgess and Gerue Byrne are also new additions to the company. The afterpiece is John F. Poole's burlesque, WAS SHE LED, OR DID SHE GO ASTRAY. It is a good programme and crowded houses are in order.

"BLESSED ARE THE PEACE MAKERS."—Perhaps the most aggravating and unpleasant thing gentlemen have to contend with now-a-days is that "ill fitting shirt," which has caused a war of words in many a household. But since Du Bois has discovered the remedy and produced a perfect fitting garment, peace reigns and the masses are satisfied. Our advice is, go Du Du Bois, 207 Fulton street, and purchase your Shirts and Gents' Furnishing Goods. After practical experience this is our verdict—and a just one.

Messrs. Hall Bros., the photographers, No. 111 Fulton st., have, by industry and skill, achieved a first-class reputation for the style of work they turn out of their establishment daily. They are bound to please, no matter how much trouble they may be subjected to. For the convenience of business men sittings by appointment will be made Sundays.

A BOY from the country was recently taken as a page into a gentleman's family. One afternoon, just before dark, after having been called up to the drawing-room, he came down into the kitchen, bawling immodestly. "What's the matter?" cried the cook.—"Why, sing it," said he, "there are twelve on 'em up there who couldn't light the gas, and they had for me to to do it."

WHAT NEXT.—Among the recent discoveries that have been made of late, none will so interest the ladies as Mr. Wade, for many years resident, Thomas Gill, 55 Atlantic avenue, formerly manager of the Surprise Fancy Dry Goods store, 302 Fulton avenue, and whom we are happy to learn, has succeeded in gaining his late suit against the Sheriff and others to the amount of $80,000, after eight years persecution of Wealth and Chicanery. He is now manufacturing and introducing the most wonderful cleansing article there has ever been known. It is none other than Wm. Johnson's Patent Improved Iowa Laundry Soap. It acts like magic on soiled garments of all kinds, with hot, cold or salt water, and does away with the washboard and the labor usually entered in washing. This improved soap will, we are satisfied, prove a great blessing to housekeepers, and too much credit cannot be given to this gentleman for his great discovery. The world cannot produce its equal. We have tested this soap ourselves, and cannot speak too highly of its merits, and therefore endorse Mr. Gill in all that he claims in this important matter. A visit to the factory was also made, and after a careful examination of the materials used by him, we are fully satisfied that his soap contains nothing that will injure or fade the most delicate fabric. We learn that this gentleman has just shipped a large order to England. This is the first American house that has ever been honored with an order for this article from Europe. Truly trade are being shipped to Newcastle.—Sunday Review.

MANNINGS EMPLOYMENT AGENCY.—This gentleman's new rooms have just been opened at No. 209 Fulton st, near Court, and surpass any other in New York or Brooklyn. Those who desire first-class help will find courteous attention and have their wants promptly attended to. Manning has the oldest and most reliable office in Brooklyn.

A FACT WORTH KNOWING.—That a Business Education, a complete course, time unlimited, can be had for $25, at Brewer's, 205 Fulton st., 22 years established. Special lessons in Penmanship, Shorthand, Telegraphing, German, etc.

Job C. Thompson gives notice to his friends that he will not move from 595 Fulton street as he first intended, but has re-leased his present premises. He has just purchased a fine lot of Spring Hats and Children's Goods.

Perhaps we had better enlighten some of our readers as to what EVER is going to keep in his new store, 304 Fulton street. For the ladies there will be a nice assortment of Laces, Ties, Jet and other Jewelry, Notions, Satins, of every shade, Plushes ditto, and the best assortment of Hosiery in the city. For the gentlemen, every conceivable style of Shirts, Neckwear, Collars and Cuffs, Hosiery, etc., all of which are to be sold at reasonable prices. The opening will be on Saturday evening, May 2.

Why can Duhrenmel sell French Cassimere Pants for $3, when others charge $16 and $18. —Conundrum.

Ladies, if you would have sweet breath use "Milk of Magnesia." It is an excellent dentrifice. You will find it in any first-class drug store.

The Spirit of the Times says: "A certain player in Connecticut is engaged in playing 80 games of chess by postal cards. He lives in the post office, or he should."

Mr. Wm. H. Langley, formerly owner of the sloop Addie, is having a centre-board schooner built at Fire Island. She is built solely for speed, and will measure eighty feet over all. She will belong to the Atlantic, Brooklyn and New York clubs.

We advise parties wishing such an article to visit Mr. Spear before buying elsewhere. Mr. Spear has also the largest assortment of all leather goods, such as valises, carpet bags, portmanteaus, ladies fancy bags and straps, all of the best leather, and in a first-class manner.

C. Mr. Regan, since he has dissolved all connection with the Court street store, is paying his sole attention to his old stand, 25 Myrtle avenue, corner of Adams street. Manufacturing his own goods he is enabled to sell at more moderate rates than others, who have to pay the manufacturers profits. He calls special attention to his Misses and Children's pearl colored Shoes (suitable for the children's anniversary), all got up in nobby styles.

Outlaw Hunting in Missouri.

We are constrained to advise my detectives who in future go forth to hunt for train-robbers, to remember that there is no more dangerous wild fowl than your outlaw, and to conform to the customs of the country. In the first place, let them not resolve as a preliminary that whenever they are attacked they are to fly. In the second place, let them, when in Southwestern Missouri, go armed, discarding the puny revolver for the more trustworthy shot-gun, well charged with buckshot and slugs. And in the third place, when they meet any one in the high-road, instead of promptly and fearlessly throwing down their weapons and presenting their throats to the knife, let them invariably get the drop on the native and ballast him with buckshot. If he is the man they are after, so much the better; if not, the chances are ten to one that it is a man who deserves to be shot for some other offence.—St. Louis Globe.

THE penalty of buying cheap clothes is the same as that of going to law: the certainty of losing your suit, and having to pay for it. The penalty of marrying, is a mother-in-law. The penalty of remaining single, is having no one to [illegible] you a button for you, as is abundantly [illegible] by the state of your shirts. The penalty of [illegible] shoes is a cold.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17.

AMUSEMENTS.

MRS. F. B. CONWAY's.—"Don't be talkin to me," says Mrs. Williams, and that's my say. We know how Barney Williams and his charming wife pleases us, and we don't want to see any better Irishman or woman, be like mane Florence, Collins or Riggs. Barney will make you laugh till your sides ache, then his wife steps in and renews the laughing and you are as weak as a mouse. Last week the houses were crowded every night. This week Charles Gayler's Irish comedy drama of CONNIE SOOGAH; OR, THE WEARING OF THE GREEN, is the bill and the Williams appear in the leading characters supported by the stock company of the theatre. Go early if you want good seats.

All the Military news of the week is published in the REVIEW every Sunday morning.

SAMUELS' NEW PARK THEATRE.—The Amaranthine and Wallackian favorite, Miss Fanny Foster, in her new play of LA SONNAMBULA is drawing good houses at the Park Theatre. The play is interesting and the sentiment good. New scenery, effects, etc., have been added by the liberal management, the music arranged by Emily is beautiful, and Miss Foster will have occasion to remember her Brooklyn friends when at the top of the profession in which she is so rapidly advancing. Next Week the Holman Opera Troupe will appear. Mr. Shaw, the popular treasurer, will be the recipient of a benefit shortly.

HOOLEY'S.—Mr. James J. McCloskey's play of "TIMOTHY MY DARLING!" is the feature at Hooley's, and Mr. James M. Ward, the popular young French comedian and Vocalist, is the star. Mr. J. Z. Little, Mrs. J. J. Prior, Miss Lizzie Campbell, and Adelaide Eaton support Mr. Ward, while in the Concert saloon business the Dewey Brothers appear in their specialties. The play is well known in Brooklyn, and has drawn immensely whenever produced.

OLYMPIC.—For the first time in three years the trio of Worrell sisters appear together in a performance, and at the very place of all others which should witness this reconciliation—the theatre of the best friend they ever knew. Jennie, Irene, and Sophie, all as lively and irresistibly charming as ever, have drawn the largest houses of the season, and the performance throughout is the best in the variety line we have had this season.

While the National credit is being questioned it becomes a matter of consequence how the funds of every man are to be expended. To get the full value of a greenback is the question. We know of no house that takes greater care or pleasure in rendering to its patrons the value of money invested than the well known Gents' Furnishing Goods House of Ithamar De Bois, 328 Fulton street. His stock is one of the best in the city, and he produces the most comfortable perfect fitting shirt that can be found. Don't forget his number, and the sign of the Golden Shirt.

MESSRS. Hall Bros., the photographers, No. 111 Fulton st., have, by industry and skill, achieved a first-class reputation for the style of work they turn out of their establishment daily. ...ling news of the week in the ...morning

MISS CLARA MORRIS.—It is with great pleasure we announce the first appearance in Mrs. Conway's beautiful theatre on Monday evening next, of America's greatest actress, Miss Clara Morris. This gifted young lady will appear in her own creation of Helot's heroine, Cora, in the great play of ARTICLE 47. The following article is from the Chicago Evening Journal:

"Miss Morris did not forge her way, inch by inch, like a ship out of the ice floe. She burst upon New York, a mighty power, the night she played Anne Sylvester. How many years she may have waited for the chance is another matter. Probably if she would show us the record of her childhood's heart we could read an intense longing there.

"The character of Cora, as drawn by Belot, is every way too small for the genius of Miss Morris. He was satisfied with a Parisian woman of the present Say. But Miss Morris, who once lived in the realm of the human heart, has given us instead, a grand historical personage. In trying to represent Cora, the individual, she has made the picture epochs and passions that lie back of all women of her class, and has as a consequence given us a pattern from which the centuries must copy. While you are watching her the person who appears upon the stage for the hour is she who lived two thousand years ago on the banks of the mysterious river that divides the Egyptian Desert from the trackless sands of Arabia. We behold in all her magnificence once again the glorious sorceress of the Nile. It is the 'star-eyed Egyptian' that ruled the world through Cæsar, who unfolds once more her wondrous beauty, her magic spell, her surging passion. She has wonderful natural endowments for this character. The word Egypt is written all over her form. Look at her low, square forehead, her shield-shaped face, pointed at the chin. Notice her magnificent eyes, set slightly oblique, and which she uses with marvelous power, sometimes with the lids open, sometimes half closed with the langnor of the tropics. See the high, square shoulders, which carry the head a little forward of the perpendicular. Mark well how her lithe, willowy form tapers downward with all the delicate lines of a Venus. You can find in the Etruscan vase. All this is Egypt. This is the painting, this is the statue that all the artists for eighteen years have been hacking Cleopatra, and surrounded by the rushes and floated on the silent waters of the Nile."

Outlaw Hunting in Missouri.

We are constrained to advise any detectives who in future go forth to hunt for train-robbers, to remember that there is no more dangerous wild fowl than your outlaw, and to conform to the customs of the country. In the first place, let them not resolve on a preliminary that whenever they are attacked they are to fly. In the second place, let them, when in Southwestern Missouri, go armed, discarding the puny revolver for the more trust worthy shot-gun, well charged with buckshot and slugs. And in the third place, when they meet any one in the high-road, instead of promptly and fearlessly throwing down their weapons and presenting their throats to the knife, let them invariably get the drop on the native and hullast him with buchshot. If he is the man they are after, so much the better; if not, the chances are ten to one that it is a man who deserves to be shot for some other offence.—St. Louis Globe.

Read "Paper People," or, "Who makes our Local Papers," in the REVIEW, Sunday, April 19.

A Complete Success.

Mr. Tremulous, a respectable, but timid merchant of Burlington, recently invented an electrical burglar alarm, which, when perfected, he applied to the headboard of his bed, fastened a connecting wire to the knob on the front door, and awaiting for a trial trip. The same night his oldest boy, who was out late as usual, came home at the solemn hour of midnight, and, finding that some one had carelessly fastened down the back window he was accustomed to patronize on his nocturnal excursions, went to the front door and turned the knob.

At the first touch the alarm crashed off, tore the bedclothes into fragments, ruptured old Tremulous's ears with its racket, broke the looking glass, soured all the milk in the cellar, and finally bored through the end of the house, ploughed a great furrow across the yard, and lumped into the cistern, where it growled and groaned and howled by turns all night. Mr. Tremulous has filled up the cistern, broken up the model of the alarm, and is so deaf that he cannot hear his mother-in-law when she talks about the smell of cigar smoke on the parlor curtains.

THE HONEYMOON.—First quarter, first year.—Husband (in the morning)—"My darling love! how did you pass the nocturnal hours? Were your dreams pleasant and refreshing? You look like a rose just kissed by the dew!"

Second quarter, second year.—Husband (in the morning)—"My love! how did you rest last night?" Were your dreams calm?"

Third quarter, third year.—Husband (in the morning): "Well! Mrs. H., I suppose you wrestled through last night pretty good, didn't you?"

Fourth quarter, fourth year.—Husband (in the morning):—"Hallos, old lady! look here! if you don't stop your infernal snoring, I'll get another bedfellow. I awoke last night and thought the Modocs were in the house; and there you laid snoring as if your hopes in this world and in the world to come depended upon the noise you made. Blamed if I don't get a divorce!"

If you want to know what happens Saturday night—Buy the REVIEW next Sunday morning.

THE LATEST TOY.—The latest thing in dolls is a young lady of tinted wax, who, when wound up and given a high chair at the table, reaches out her arms, seizes a bit of bread, and slowly puts it in her mouth. When she has done this a certain number of times, 'tis necessary to open her back, remove the food, and wind her up again. Would that human beings could be relieved of indigestion in this manner.

Why is it that the moment of popping the question is so terrible to the young fellow that they frequently cannot utter a word? Because, just then, they love the fair one beyond expression.

A coroemh, teasing Doctor Parr with an account of his petty ailments, complained that he could never go out without catching cold in the head. "No wonder," returned the doctor: "you always go out without anything in it."

When a naughty little boy breaks a window he should be punished, on the principle that peace and penalties go together.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. CONWAY'S.—CHARITY, the latest metropolitan success, has been brought out by Mrs. Conway, with all the scenery, dressing etc., so conspicuously a feature of her management, and we expect it will have a long run. The many warm friends and admirers of Miss Minnie Conway have at last the pleasure of witnessing her improvement in her profession since the appearance last season. As Ruth Tredgett she will earn new fame and add more to the already extended renown of the talented family name. See CHARITY and be happy.

NEW PARK THEATRE.—Lotta consulted to remain this week and play for the delectation of the crowded houses which have thronged the Park her wonderful impersonation of Little Nell, the Marchioness, a dramatization from Dickens' Curiosity Shop, in which she has been very successful. The sprightliness and vivacity of the little actress gains the heart of each and every one of her auditors, and her popularity is only limited by the feet and inches of the houses she appears in. Next week opera bouffe will occupy the Park, with Aimee in some of her celebrated characters.

HOOLEY'S.—Mr. Griffin is to be congratulated on his success in the management of this house. During the last two months he has succeeded in presenting great many and fresh attractions in the dramatic line, and he has been rewarded with good houses. For this week he offers a good bill. On Monday and Tuesday Mr. J. Z. Little as Bob Brierly, in the TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN, and on Wednesday and Thursday Mr. John A. Stevens takes the character. Friday and Saturday THE STRANGE OF NEW YORK will be played. Next week the dialect comedian, J. H. Bodworth, will appear for a weeks engagement in his new play of CUSPAR VERDER.

ACADEMY.—Miss Kellogg's company of English Opera occupy the boards Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Saturday matinee. On Thursday Wallace's MARITANA, the sweetest English operatic work ever published, is given. Friday, for the joint benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Seguin, the new Loudon version of FRA DIAVOLO; at the Saturday matinee MARITANA, and Saturday night for Mrs. Jennie Van Zandt's benefit, FAUST will be played. The attention of the members of the Faust Club is called to this fact, and Miss Van Zandt's kindness in the John Howard Payne memorial performance should be remembered on this the first opportunity.

OLYMPIC.—New attractions at this place; also Mlle Turnour, "the queen of the air," little Jennie Yemans, Mrs. Yemans and Lydia Yemans in her unique performances; the famous funny fellow, John Wild: Miss Jennie Wade, a fine young vocalist; Diamond and Ryan, two boys of the "tough set," and Billy Hart and Hugh Fay to top it off, make an evening at Donnelly's enjoyable. Poole's drama of the PADDOCK closes the performance each evening.

Messrs. Hall Brothers, Photographers, whose establishment is at No. 111 Fulton st., stand foremost among artists in their line in this city. Their prices are very moderate, and our citizens can procure first-class portraits at much lower rates than at any other studio.

Dupreme be a modern modern pronoun,
The manly found, his mouth is open.

This gentleman is none other than Dubois, who professes a Perfect Fitting Shirt, something so hard to find that when found gentlemen go no further. This explains why Dubois is so successful. To be sure of getting what you want in Gents' Furnishing Goods, and obtain exactly what is as represented, go to Dubois, 329 Fulton street, familiarly known by the sign of the Golden Shirt. His prices are in accordance with the times, and his styles unsurpassed.

Why can Duberneil sell French Cassimere Pants for $12, when others charge $16 and $18. Conundrum.

WHY GENTLEMEN PATRONIZE HOYT & TEALE. Because they always produce the very best styles in clothing at the very lowest prices. To secure an elegant fit, and goods that wear, go to 607 Fulton street, opposite Flatbush avenue.

In consequence of several unscrupulous parties putting up an imitation "Red Seal Ale," Messrs. Wickes & Co. being the sole proprietors of that celebrated brand, have issued a caution and trust that gentlemen purchasing the same should be particular and see that their name is on it as all others are base counterfeits. This ale is a pure extract of malt and hops, and the finest American ale in the market.

SOMETHING NEW IN BROOKLYN.—C. Smis, of 10 Broadway, N. Y., has opened a branch Hat, Cap, and Straw Goods house at No. 385 Fulton street, under the New Park Theatre. His store is a fine one, and in which he will do a retailing goods at esse prices. The best of it however is that his goods are of the very latest styles and of the best quality. This store is just what we have been wanting in Brooklyn, and our dealers in that line will have to look out for their laurels.

THE LEAP FROM LIFE.

The gymnast who jumped into eternity the other night, at Berry's Opera House, 34th street, New York, is reported to hive been known in the halls as the "Leaping Lunatic," and that the salary list of the manager as the recipient of $7.00 a week, for the exhibition of that "vaulting ambition" which finally "overleaped itself" with such fatal result. Seven dollars a week is small compensation for a "star" performer, especially for a "monarch of ethereal space. The slenderness of the salary suggests the possibility of suicide Poor Sylvester may have been tempted to abruptly close a life of such mad sport. The coroner's jury should have examined the ease from that stand-point. By the easy appliestion of an arithmetical principle, it will be seen that the unfortunate youth risked and lost his life in trying to earn the sum of one dollar and sixteen cents and six-teuths of a cent. Alone, he might have worried through on this revenue, but we rend that he kindly contributed to the wants of his mother. What a ghastly glympse this "accident" affords of the mockery of the "show business"!

The Chicago Post asks this conundrum: "Suppose, there are six hundred street cars in the city of Chicago, and each street car makes eight trips a day, and three ladies are compelled to stand up each trip, how many brutes are there in chicago."

A Boston gentleman who could not waltz, offered a young lady a $100 if she would let him hug her as much as the man did who had just waltzed her. It was a good offer, and the lady saw the money was object to him. So they put him out of the house so hard that his eyes were quite black.

BEAUTIES.—The new styles in boys suits for spring wear just opened by Messrs. Hoyt & Teale at 607 Fulton street, are elegant, and of very desirable texture. This house takes the lead in men's and boy's clothing in our city so every article sold by them is made under their own supervision, and warranted as represented.

JAMES M. SPEAR'S TRUNKS.—The oldest trunk manufacturer, and the most reliable in our estimation, is Mr. Jas M. Spear, corner of Johnson and Fulton, under Wyckoff's jewelry store. Mr Spear is the manufacturer of a new patent trunk, which for beauty, durability, and compactness far excels any made. We advise parties wishing such an article to visit Mr. Spear before buying elsewhere. Mr. Spear has also the largest assortment of all leather goods, such as valises, tourists' bags, portmanteaus, ladies fancy bags and straps, all made of the best leather, and in a first-class manner.

READY MADE OR TO ORDER.—Hoyt & Teale, clothiers have just opened an elegant selection of Ready-Made Men's and Boy's Clothing. Overcoats and gents goods for spring wear at lower prices than ever before offered. Go and see them before selecting your spring garments. Their store is 607 Fulton street.

PURE NATIVE WINES VS. THE OHIO LADIES' CRUSADE.
It is an indisputable fact that the country blessed with plenty of pure, cheap, light, Native Wines, has a temperate, sober population, free from all vicious excesses. To all real friends of temperance—in its true sense—we offer the well known wines of H. E. Pierce & Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, Isabella, Catawba, Sherry, Port, Claret, Hock, Rhine Wine, &c., &c., brought from Portugal, his same medicinal stocks, at far less prices. Their Catawbas, dry and sweet, the purest will keep on draught in any climate, as sold at 25 per gallon on families, with the full discounts to the trade. Their Sparkling Wines, Great Western and Clarke Blandies, are finer than any imported wines made in the true way (no gas infused), and possess the stimulating merits of being pure, frouty, cheaper, and have no unpleasant after effects. We also offer fine Catawba and North Carolina champagnes and Wines, together with our well known stock of imported Wines and Spirituous Liquors, at the lowest cash prices.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

HAVERLY.—"A Celebrated Case" is on at Haverly's.

PARK.—Nat Goodwin's "Hobbies" is the fun at the Park.

NOVELTY.—"My Partner" is over at the Novelty this week.

SMITH.—Mr. John P. Smith with his "Tourists in a Pullman Palace Car" are soon due at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre.

MATINEES.—There will be special matinees at all the regular theatres on Thursday, (Thanksgiving Day,) next week.

RIVERS.—The new French quadrille, "Polo," is now being taught by Mr. G. H. Rivers in all his academies. The figures are charming.

PALMER.—Mr. Bartley Campbell's most popular play, "My Partner," with Aldrich and Farnice and the regular company are presenting that startling drama at the Novelty Theatre.

MATHISON.—Bartley Campbell's new play, "Matrimony," which is said to be one of the best things of the season, will shortly be produced at Colonel William E. Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre.

NOVELTY.—For next week Messrs. Theall & Williams has secured Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Company in "A Celebrated Case," a play that ran for a whole season at the Union Square Theatre.

PALMER.—Mr. A. M. Palmer's Company are this week presenting "A Celebrated Case" at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. This is one of the plays that had a long run at the Union Square Theatre, and will never be worn out.

GOODWIN.—A week of real merriment is offered this week at the Park Theatre by Mr. Nat Goodwin and company in his famous play of "Hobbies." If you go you will be sure of a good laugh, for Goodwin is one of the best of mimics.

TOURISTS.—Next week the lively entertainment of "The Tourists in a Pullman Palace Car" will be at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. This lively band, under Mr. John P. Smith's management, has become one of the great things of the day.

ORPHANS.—The Ladies' Annual Fair for the Brooklyn Orphan Asylum, which took place at the Academy of Music last week, was a grand financial success. The ladies composing this society are the wealthiest of Brooklyn and are very hard workers in this cause, as the condition of the asylum and its inmates shows.

MITCHELL.—Next week the great favorite, Miss Maggie Mitchell, will be at the Brooklyn Park Theatre, and will appear in a varied bill, as follows: Monday night and Wednesday matinee, "Fanchon;" Tuesday and Thursday evenings, "Pearl of Savoy;" Wednesday evening and Saturday matinee, "Jorik;" Thursday and Saturday evenings, "Little Barefoot;" Friday night, "Jane Eyre."

Congress Spring.

Dr. Thomas, of the thousands who resort to Congress Spring during the "heated term," and quaff its waters, few know that it was discovered in 1792, by John Taylor Gilman, of Exeter, N. H.; then Member of Congress, and consequently Governor of New Hampshire. While gunning, he came upon the stream, issuing from a fissure in a rock. The singularity of its appearance attracted his attention, the water was drank, the mineral qualities discovered, and, being a Member of Congress, he gave it the name of Congress Spring.

"I don't see how there ever came to be so many words in the world!" exclaimed a girl who was studying her spelling lesson. "Why, sir," said her brother, "they come through folks quarrelling. Then, you know, one word always brings on another."

WITTICISMS.

Fences do not walk, but sometimes have a swinging gate.

THE "POLO."

The new French quadrille, "Polo,"—figures arranged by F. Paul, of Paris—was all the rage at Dieppe and other fashionable resorts in France during the past summer. The dance is full of life and extremely fascinating. Mr. C. H. Rivers is now teaching it at his Brooklyn Heights Academy and in all his branch schools.

Three things to love: courage, gentleness, and affection. Three things to admire: intellect, dignity, and politeness. Three things to hate: cruelty, arrogance, and ingratitude. Three things to delight in: beauty, frankness, and freedom. Three things to wish for: health, friends, and a contented spirit. Three things to like: cordiality, good humor, and cheerfulness. Three things to avoid: idleness, loquacity, and flippant jesting. Three things to cultivate: good books, good friends, and good humor. Three things to teach: truth, industry, and contentment. Three things to govern: temper, tongue and conduct. Three things to cherish: virtue, goodness, and wisdom.

HOME IS WHERE THERE'S ONE TO LOVE US.

Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart hath builded.
Home!—go watch the faithful dove,
Sailing 'neath the heaven above us;
Home is where there's one to love;
Home is where there's one to love us!

Home's not merely roof and room;
Home needs something to endear it;
Home is where the heart can bloom,
Where there's some kind fay to cheer it.
What is home with none to meet?
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet, and only sweet,
When there's one we love to meet us!

The Habit of Self-Control.

If there is one habit which, above all others, is deserving of cultivation, it is that of self-control. In fact it includes so much that is of valuable importance in life, that it may almost be said that, in proportion to its power, does the man obtain his manhood and the woman her womanhood. The ability to identify self with the highest parts of our nature, and to bring all the lower parts into subjection, or rather to draw them all upwards into harmony with the best that we know, is the one central power which supplies vitality to all the rest. How to develop this in the child may well absorb the energy of every parent; how to cultivate it in himself may well employ the wisdom and enthusiasm of every youth. Yet it is no mysterious or complicated path that leads to this goal. The habit of self-control is but the accumulation of continued acts of self-denial for a worthy object; it is but the repeated authority of the reason over the impulses, of the judgment over the inclinations, of the sense of duty over the desires. He who has acquired this habit, who can govern himself intelligently, without painful effort, and without fear of revolt from his appetites and passions, has within him the source of all real power and of all true happiness. The force and energy which he has put forth day by day, and hour by hour, is not exhausted, nor even diminished; on the contrary, it has increased by use, and has become stronger and keener by exercise; and, although it has already completed its work in the past, it is still his well-tried, true, and powerful weapon for future conflicts in higher regions.

About Authors.

The time and effort spent on various literary productions have differed with different authors.

Johnson said he calculated, when writing for a magazine, that if he wrote but one page a day he would at the end of ten years have written ten folio volumes. "When a man writes," says he, "from his own mind he writes rapidly. The greatest part of the writer's time is spent in reading. A man must turn over half a library to write one book."

Prescott said he composed many a chapter of "Ferdinand and Isabella" while galloping over the hills, or wandering among the obstant shades of his favorite walk in autumn.

Thirty and forty pages of print were an ordinary morning's work for Walter Scott. He once said to a friend: "When I get my paper before me it commonly runs off pretty easily." With so much facility did he write that he had a novel, a poem, and reviews for quarterlies on hand at the same time.

One of the largest and best of Byron's poems was written in ten sittings, and in two days another was completed.

In fourteen years Baxter wrote and published sixty volumes.

Pope says: "To take more pains and employ more time cannot fail to produce more complete pieces."

The first six books of the Æneid were written in seven years; the last six in four years. This poem was left unfinished, and at his death Virgil wished it destroyed; but Augustus placed it in the hands of Varius and Plautus, who corrected it and gave it to the world.

David Livingstone says: "Those who have never carried a book through the press can form no idea of the amount of toil it involves. The process has increased my respect for authors, and authoresses a thousand-fold. I think I would rather cross the African Continent again than undertake to write another book."

Aphorisms.

The man who lives for others must expect most of his pay in self-satisfaction.

Every man makes his own reputation; the world only puts on the stamp.

There is a great deal of modesty in this world which will go on at almost anything—provided it can be seen through a crack.

Silence is a hard opinion to beat.

Good breeding is a letter of credit all over the world.

Bigotry knows of but one way to reach heaven, while faith knows of a hundred.

It requires wisdom to be bold, and it requires honesty to be willing, to call things by their right names.

It is well to give heed to your doubts, for they are very often the dawnings of truth.

Men owe their resolution, and most of their success, to the opposition they meet with.

Building air-castles is a harmless business as long as you don't attempt to live in them.

The more virtuous a man is the most virtue does he see in others.

The divinity of charity consists in relieving a man's needs before they are forced upon us.

Charity is a first mortgage on every human being's possessions.

Opportunities are very sensitive things; if you slight them on their first visit, you seldom see them again.

College Boys as Waiters.

There were thirty-eight college waiters at the Glen House, White Mountains, during the summer, ten from Bates, five from Amherst, three from Harvard, and twenty from other colleges and schools. Some of them picked up from $50 to $70 in fees. One student made so good an impression that a rich old lady offered to pay his college bills for two years.

"Madame, your boy can't pass at half fare, he's too large," said the ticket-collector of a Highland train which had been long detained on the road by the snow. "He may be too large now," replied the matron; "but he was small enough when we started." The collector gave in.

FASHION NOTES.

Old gold stockings embroidered in peacock tints are esteemed rich.

Sealskins are shown both in dolmans and long, half-fitting sacques.

For the trimmings of ball dresses pretty mixtures of feathers and flowers are in preparation.

Tulle dresses embroidered with chenille, and others with extremely narrow ribbon, are in preparation.

For street wear and burlaeus nese cloth, cheviot, frieze and flannel serge continue to be the fashionable fabrics.

The Sarah Bernhardt neckties are scarfs of white Indian muslin edged with point Languedoc lace, or else they are point d'esprit net with lace edging.

The prevalence of close fitting cuirass waists require the nicest adjustment of all that is worn beneath them, and hence combination garments are more than ever in demand.

Gold and silver embroidery, which will be the rage next winter, will be mixed with white mother-of-pearl or iridescent spangles, and bead embroidery will be seen than heretofore.

Garnet has lost favor, but has transformed itself into dark fin de siècle, and under this name is much in vogue: very dark bottle green is also a favorite color; navy or dark blue is scarcely worn at all.

Woven feathers are among the pretty trimmings for wrappings for the present season. This trimming resembles fur in its delicacy, and lightness. It will be used in bands for the edge reverse, sleeves and neck.

The large collars adapted not only for cloaks, but also for dresses, are in great favor. They are almost the size of a cape, and are very often worn double, one for the other, and only differing about an inch in size.

The beaver bonnets in millinery are very popular. They are bent into any shape and come in black or ecru, the only two colors in which they are made. They bear much or little trimming, as the case may be.

Damasse or brocade dress goods will be worn in great numbers, will be trimmed with gimp, bordered with bands of satin embroidered with gold, mother-of-pearl, and spangles made in all shades of copper and steel.

Beaded cuirasses, are to replace pelerines, which only cover the shoulders, while the cuirass covers the whole bust. Small capes are made with hoods in all colors and joined to toilettes. Even black chenille pelerines have hoods.

The present fashions, though wholly transitional, contain the germs, as usual, of those of the coming winter. It is certain that short skirts will be much worn, even for evening, and that trains will be greatly diminished in length.

The Bernhardt hat is a Velasquez shaped black felt, with large brim, turned in various ways to be becoming to the face of the wearer, and the brim is passed with butterflies, buds and flowers. The painting is exquisitely done and the effect is very showy and handsome.

Faille has gone entirely out of fashion, and satin, brocades and damasse silks have taken its place for evening dresses. Plain velvet is much used for not only street and reception wear, but for evening costumes. For the latter purpose colored velvets take precedence of black.

The fancy fabrics most in vogue are brocades and brocatelles, with fine bright flowers on dark grounds. Colored plushes worked with beads are among the novelties. Colored plush and velvet are embroidered with beads in the colors of the flowers, and have a brilliant and peculiar effect.

While black wraps continue to be worn and called for more than any other, it is observable that seal brown has become very fashionable for dolmans, jackets and cloaks. Seal brown plush jackets and dolmans imitate seal skin to perfection, and seal brown cloth and beaver and chinchilla cloth wraps trimmed with seal brown plush, have all the richness of effect of a real seal fur trimmed garment.

One of the prettiest trimmings for wrappings for the coming season is of woven feathers; these are not the feather bands formerly used; the quill of each feather is taken out, and the plumes are made a light, fluffy, and deliciously warm trimming, which resembles fur in its extreme delicacy and lightness, and which is used, in bands, for the edge, revers, sleeves, and neck of wrappings.

Popular fashion is that of carriage, traveling, and water-proof wraps made of Scotch plaid; almost all of these wraps are furnished with hoods, and many of them are in the ungraceful shape of a very long gentleman's dressing-gown. Of the same plaids are likewise made large and convenient ruches, which are destined more and more to take the place of the ugly water-proof cloaks.

A flannel or lady's cloth dress has come to be a necessity in every woman's wardrobe. They are made short and simply, having only stitching of whatever color preferred and pretty buttons. The back of the skirt is straight and the front kilted or trimmed with an apron, or kilted or shirred with a slight drapery at the back. The bodice may be a plain deep basque or a round waist with a belt.

More Moral Maxims.

Many are the ways by which you can make a name that will go down to posterity; perhaps the best way of all is—to have an aim, and hit it off.

Never tell secrets to your quill pen; it may split on you.

Sweet are the uses of adversity. Perhaps so; but are they really so jolly sweet as the ditto of prosperity?

The very best art of book-keeping is—not to lend them.

Charity covers a multitude of sins; a charity bazaar covers a multitude of swindling.

Some extremely good women make too little of themselves when they wear eel-skin frocks.

When you are merry, sing psalms. This is quite right; only t- sing some kind of psalms is quite hymn-possible.

Never go out for a lark unless you have first made up your mind to catch it.

Poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright.

The Bernhardt Glove.

The Bernhardt Glove is the hit of the season in gauterie, and the advent of its fair namesake is all that is needed to make it a rage among the ladies. Mr. Charles T. Jones, of 1163 Broadway, New York, exhibits some splendid samples in kid, Suede, and Tyrol; and the little specimen card of colors which he publishes will be of great utility to purchasers. It is mailed on request; and gloves may safely be ordered by simply sending size and number of color desired. Note the address,

CHARLES T. JONES,
1163 Broadway, New York.

Whenever ladies imagine that they have the acme of bargains, the irrepressible house of Wechsler & Abraham announces a still more astonishing one. This week, as will be seen by advertisement on programme page, W. & A. announces stupendous bargains in brocaded and stripe silk velvets. Of course the ladies will crowd the store as usual.

MINSTRELS.—We will soon have a week of minstrels at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. The colored troupe will preside.

THEALL.—Messrs. Theall & Williams will continue to present during the season the leading attractions of the year.

MINSTRELS.—Although the election is over, the San Francisco Minstrels hold a nightly "Torchlight Parade" at their hall.

HARRIGAN.—Harrigan & Hart still stick to the "Mulligans" at the New York Comique. Now it's "The Mulligan Guards' Ball."

ROCHAT.—"Daniel Rochat," is proving another success for the Union Square Theatre manager, and a long run is predicted for it.

SINN.—Colonel Sinn's traveling company have made a big hit in California with "Golden Dame." Edeson and Shannon are the leading lights of the play.

HAVERLY.—Next week Messrs. Louis Aldrich and Chas. T. Parsloe will appear at the Brooklyn Theatre, in Harriet Campbell's most popular play, "My Partner," which will be given in elegant style.

DREW.—The second full dress reception of the pupils of Mr. C. H. Rivers will take place at his Academy on Monday, November 15, and be continued on the third Monday of each month during the season.

HAVERLY.—The attraction for this week at Mr. J. H. Haverly's New York Theatres are "Nora's Vow," at the Fifth Avenue; "My Partner," at Niblos'; and Rice's Surprise Party, in "Revels," at the Fourteenth street house.

HERNE.—The beautiful play, Herne's "Hearts of Oak," is this week offered by Messrs. Theall & Williams at the Novelty Theatre. It is one of those attractions that will always draw, and, once seen, will be kindly remembered.

GOODWIN.—Next week Mr. Nat Goodwin will be at Colonel Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre and will appear in his celebrated "Hobbies." This is a pleasant week at this house, as Mr. Goodwin is one of the funniest men of the day.

TOURISTS.—"The Tourists in a Pullman Car" will soon reappear at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. The last engagement here was one of the largest of the season. Their coming will be looked forward to with pleasure, for this jolly party make lots of fun.

OPERA.—The Soldene Opera Comique Company is this week making its first appearance in this country. The company is a large one, and is composed of many leading artists. They will appear in "Trial by Jury," "Chilperic," "Genevieve de Brabant," "The Naval Cadets," "La Fille du Madame Angot," and "Dame L'Archidec."

UNCLE.—This week Elmendorf & Co.'s "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company are presenting that popular play at the Brooklyn Athenæum, where they are drawing full houses. George F. McDonald, the famous Uncle Tom, is playing that part, Julia Sheldon is the Topsy, and Little Pearl as Eva, making in all a very attractive entertainment. Matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

WITTICISMS.

Parrot Talk—Poly-syllables.

The latest thing in boots—Stockings.

Adam was married, on his wedding Eve, of course.

A coolness has sprung up between night and morning.

"The times that tried men's soles." Pedestrian contests.

Little boys should be like pantomimes—seen but not heard.

One good turn—Is as much as you can expect from a cheap job.

A hanging isn't necessarily a burlesque because it's a take-off.

To succeed a young man must work, unless he succeeds to an estate.

A man frequently has to use flowery language to make his daily bread.

How many men there are who, like corn, turn white when they pop.

A South Hill debating club is wrestling with "Can a community exist without women?" We think it could exist for a while, but then it wouldn't know what was going on.

Jones: "I see Smith has taken to riding a bicycle. What on earth is he doing that for?" Robinson: "Oh, a very simple reason—to prevent Mrs. Smith riding with him."

You may step on a man's foot, and he'll forgive you; you may pull his hair, and he'll excuse you; but you're no friend of his if you step safe fruitlessly on his pet aversion's grain.

"If I have ever used any unkind words, Hannah," said Mr. Smiley to Mrs. Smiley, reflectively, "I take them all back." "Yes, I suppose you want to use them over again," was the not very soothing reply.

At a London banquet a lady recently handed around her baby to be kissed by the visitors at sixpence each, and a grim bachelor said that the receipts would have doubled if spanking could have been substituted.

Teacher: "What can't any of you tell me what i-a-m-e means? Now, if you saw a poor man coming out of the hospital who could hardly walk, you'd say he is—what?" Intelligent pupil (after a long pause): "Please, 'm, I know—Spry."

It is a mistake to say that some ladies prefer short men, while others prefer a man so tall that they must needs look up to him. This is, indeed, about the only question on which the universal feminine mind is agreed, for with singularly few exceptions women are in favor of Hy-men.

"What is the worst thing about riches?" asked the Sunday-school superintendent. And the new boy in the bad class under the gallery, who only came in last Sunday, stood up and said, "Their scarcity." And in his confusion the superintendent told the school to rise and sing, "Don't be weary, children."

"Well, old fellow, where have you been?" "Been round to one of my creditors—old Skinflint, and—what do you think? I had all the difficulty in the world to get him to take a little money!" "Oh, that's impossible. Why?" "Because he wanted a whole lot."

A would-be righteous man who wanted to advertise the sensitiveness of his religious nature had an inscription painted over the front door of his new house to this effect: "Let nothing enter here but what is good." A wag read it and, slyly: "Then I suppose the master of the house intends to go in at the back door."

Here is an extract from a boy's diary which some parents might read with profit: "Father and mother must be very sick to day, and I'm afraid they won't live very long. They have both been at home all day, and they have neither scolded each other nor boxed my ears once. This has never happened before, as to my knowledge, and I'm sure something awful is going to happen."

The audience, so far, has been very large, all leaving much pleased at this popular old play.

Artful Urchin.

"Do you want to kill the child?" exclaimed a gentleman, as he saw a boy tip the baby out of its carriage on the walk.

"No, not quite," replied the boy; "but if I can get him to hawl loud enough, mother will take care of him while I go and wade in the ditch with Johnny Bresee."

LOVE ON A (SHOE) STRING.

BY LYNN O. DOYLE.

"I declare—" hear the young man gasped,
The maiden was surprised
When she heard such words from his lips,
For she had half surmised
That he had come on wooing bent.
She, therefore, felt quite shocked
When he began to tell her how
His warehouse shelves were stocked.

"Ah! yes," she answered, "I am pleased
To know you're doing well—
That you are now on fortune's road,
And sharp as 'tacks' and 'awl.'
But, pardon me; why did you not
To ya your notice mail?
Perhaps he would have called on you
And purchased at retail."

"N-no," he stuttered; "o-can't you guess,
Idest of my heart?
Let both our loves be like my wares—
Joined never to p-part.
"Tis true I deal in boots and shoes—"
* * * * But never mind the rest,
For Miss Construction straightway laid
Her head on L. Leary breast.

ITEMS ABOUT WOMEN.

The Princesse de la Rocca, the neice of the poet Heine, has written a life of her uncle that it is well for her her uncle can not review, it is said.

Miss Kate Field arrives in America this month. She has been collecting further material in Paris for her new volume on Hachel, Ristori, Salvini, and Booker.

Miss Helen Gladstone, the younger daughter of the Prime Minister, is acting temporarily as private secretary to the vice-principal of Nuneham College

Nilsson receives in Europe a little larger stipend for a night of singing than Patti does, the former being paid two hundred guineas, and the latter two hundred pounds.

Lord Dundreary's daughter. Miss Eva Sothern, is preparing for the stage. She is blonde, beautiful, high-bred, and talented. She makes her debut as Mopu in "Shaughraun."

Annie Whitney, the sculptor of the statue of Sam Adams contributed by Massachusetts to the national pantheon in the Capitol, never touched a tool of her profession till she was thirty-eight years old.

Queen Victoria takes a lively interest in agriculture. Observing a new reaper and binder lately in use in a field by which she was driving, she stopped her horses, and went afoot into the field to see how it worked.

It is a noticeable fact that a large number of women of late have in our own time seen fit to marry men many years younger than themselves. Conspicuous among them being Marian Evans, Miss Thackeray, Rose Terry, Grace Greenwood, and Dina Mulock.

Nina Bonaicault, the youngest daughter of Agnes Robertson, is said to be predestined for an irresistible soubrette actress. She is receiving her education to that end in France and Germany, is small in stature, small-featured, has a net retroussé, and fine hazel eyes.

Queen Victoria has been in the habit of sending the sum of three pounds to every mother of triplets in her dominions. When Mrs. Thomas Collyer applied the second time for this gratuity, the queen had her informed that once was enough, and she had been paid once for all.

Miss Minnie Hauk has been spending her vacation in the south of France, Switzerland, and the Black Forest. She is now to sing through the principal Continental cities, after which she contemplates a season of concerts in London and the provinces, as other English towns are styled.

Mrs. Cora Schaller, the new contralto engaged for Mapleson, and whose husband is an employe of A. T. Stewart & Co., would be a fine dramatic ability, and charming personal appearance be a formidable rival to Miss Anna Louise Cary, if the amiability and generosity of Miss Cary did not always destroy any idea of rivalry.

English actresses are said to dress so faultlessly as to give lessons in fashion to the audience; Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Kendal, Mrs. Bancroft, Miss Gerard, and Miss Genevieve Ward exhibiting harmony of color and beauty of outline in their dresses to such perfection that great ladies send their maids to see them, and get ideas for their own wardrobes.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who in a recent address has spoken severely of the slavery of women to their dressmaker, dresses very richly herself, although not showily. She is statuesque in appearance, fair and pale, with dim blue eyes, and some one once called her an "arrangement in black and white." Although her frill face might be called plain, her profile is exquisite as a cameo cut on a gem.

The Empress of Austria introduced the fashion of wearing the tiny gold pig, it being considered good luck in Austria to run across a pig. A prettier charm or amulet has been worn of late in the shape of some symbol of taste or profession. an artist wearing a small gold palette, with rubies, emeralds, sapphires, and pearls for the paints, like one given Mlle. Jacquemart by M. Thiers some time since. Sara Bernhardt has worn thus a tiny gold mask, Madame Viardot a jeweled lyre, and Liese, the circus-rider, a golden whip. The latest caprice of this kin.i is the badge of the Order of the Golden Fleece, which is reputed to bring good fortune to the wearer.

Enrique's Proverbs.

1—"Answer not a fool according to his folly," but with due regard to his size and temper. 2—"A man who heareth false witness" bends neath a grievous burden. 3—"A just man faileth seven times," and justly curseth his neighbor for not sprinkling ashes on the precarious sidewalk. 4—"The scorner is an abomination to man," and deservedly snubbed by women. 5—"A wicked man hardeneth his face," which enables him to travel on his cheek. 6—"The discretion of a man deferreth his anger" and prevents him from addressing notes for his friends, or of skating on ice of half an inch thickness.

Never doubt the doctrine of evolution after contemplating the career of a water-boy on a train of cars. Four weeks after his appointment he will appear with a cap on his head three times larger than the conductor's, the top of which will be about as large as the locomotive's driving-wheel.

Money in your purse will credit you—wisdom in your head will adorn you—but both in your necessity will serve you.

Rose Ashleigh's Latest and Greatest Story

Just begun this week, in No. 2 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

It is a story of pervading interest, and bears the suggestive title of Fighting Her Way;

OR,
The Banished Child
BY ROSE ASHLEIGH,
OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Author of "The Widow's Wager," "His Other Wife," Etc., Etc.

The rare endowments of a cultured mind are visible in every page of the stories of Rose Ashleigh. Her diction is elegant, captivating, and forcible, and her graceful pen invests even the simplest scenes with picturesque beauty. Her characters are so artistically drawn and delicately contrasted, that they seem animated with the blood of life, and we soon learn to know them and speak of them as people whom we have really seen.

FASHION NOTES.

Perhaps the newest polonaise is that with the pointed apron front.

Cloth cuffs are square cornered, and are stitched all around and up the sides.

Heavy bands of otter fur or of brown feathers are used to trim rifle green cloths.

The full peasant skirt so popularly worn in New York is not seen among the importations.

The newest flounces are shirred half their length, and the lower half is pressed to form pleats.

Another caprice is to tack up slightly the inside seam of the sleeve, and add a pleating to fall toward the wrist.

When combining brocade with silk the third element visible is a trimming of beaded passementerie or fringe.

Black camel's-hair dresses trimmed with black plush are refined and stylish house dresses for ladies of quiet tastes.

Cuffs are very narrow, and those of thick fabrics such as velvet or plush appear to turn over from the inside of the sleeves.

The skirted polonaise with a seam across the hips is liked for cloth over-dresses, and may be made bouffant behind, or else pressed flatly in pleats like the surcout.

The plain round basque with two great box pleats behind is considered especially good style for rich fabrics such as brocaded satin de Lyon, plush or velvet.

Stiff, projecting, yet narrow cuffs are made of brocade, and these flare outward, and add to the width of the sleeve, instead of clinging to it as they formerly did.

Fine French cashmeres are always in favor with Parisian modistes, and are found as the principal parts of many costumes, with satin de Lyon or satin Surah for the accessories.

Red plush facings are also greatly used for contrast on black, and on the quaint brown cloths that are called Capucine brown, and are lighter than the coachman's drab shades of last season.

Small bullet-shaped buttons of crocheted silk are revived for the fronts and sleeves of basques, while much larger flat buttons are on the square pockets, and on the back to define the waist line.

Worth makes a rash bow of a whole width of soft Surah three fourths of a yard wide tied in two loops and two short ends finished with fringe, and places it on the left side just at the waist line.

Square-cornered aprons made of a whole breadth of double-width cashmere, Cheviot, or lady's cloth are very stylish with skirts that have three deep pleated flounces across the back breadths.

Pretty shades of seableuse, of rifle green, and of Marie Louise blue cashmere are made up in simple costumes, trimmed with two deep flounces that are half of the cashmere and half of the satin de Lyon.

For brightening black or dark wool dresses the French caprice is to use velvet collars and cuffs that are wrought with tinsel embroidery. This is effective on silk and satin dresses as well as on wool goods.

The Dauphin collar is the new fancy; for wearing with various dresses it is made of black velvet for the collar, with white lace gathered on its edge, and colored Surah fichu ends are attached to the front.

Fichus of fine white net are as popular as those of mull were during the summer. They have an applique trimming of moss-work in branching patterns for borders, or else they are trimmed with the Alecon lace.

For costumes plush or brocaded velvet with satin de Lyon forms the principal parts of the dress, and the third conspicuous part is the broad trimming of beads, of tinsel embroidery, or else the bands of fur or of feathers.

While basques and trimmed skirts prevail, the polonaise is by no means abandoned. The Pilgrim polonaise with plush collar and sleeve facings, and a wool cord knotted near the ends, worn with a cape and a hood, is the most popular.

Several tones of one color are seen in many costumes, but these are produced by the difference of lustre in the materials used rather than by selecting different shades, as the intention is to have the shades match perfectly instead of grading them.

Dresses that appear to be very simple because of their quiet coloring and unobtrusive style, are often found to be composed of three fabrics independent of the silk which is used for the lining and foundation, and which is not visible on the outside.

The combinations of green with brown introduced last year by Worth are again imported. There are seal brown cloth dresses with dark green plush collars and borders, or else brocaded velvet of mixed green and brown trims olive brown cloth.

There is nothing "patchy" in the new arrangements of two materials in a dress. As a rule one fabric is used for the upper part of the costume and another for the skirts, though this rule has its exceptions when plush, or brocaded borders, or drapery, are necessary on the lower skirt.

Pleated skirts of short wool dresses follow one of two extremes, viz., the pleats are either very wide box pleats that do not meet or touch at the edges, or else they are in the very fine side pleats called religieuse pleating. In either case they fall over a silk lining skirt, which is finished at the foot with a narrow balayeuse pleating, which is usually of satin de Lyon.

The modistes who remain in Paris later than the buyers of the large furnishing stores bring with them the freshest novelties. In their large rooms, filled with French costumes, a glance shows at once that colored costumes are much largely imported than at any previous season, and that above all others lustrous fabrics prevail—thus satin finished stuffs are preferred to plain gros grain, and glossy plush is more used than velvet.

A Wonderful Curiosity.

A prominent lawyer went home the other day to dinner, and found that his little boy had had his head clipped in accordance with prevailing style.

Affecting not to notice it, he began to speak of a wonderful curiosity on exhibition down town, in the shape of a living creature with a form something like that of a human being. Its head was as round as a pumpkin, its ears stuck out like oyster-shells on a cocoanut, its nose projected like a figure four on a trellis, what seemed to be its face, it walked upright, and its head was covered with a growth of bristles about one-sixteenth of an inch in length, and, for want of a better name, the creature had been called the "What is it?"

And placing his hand on the boy's head, the father said:

"Why, here it is now. Here's the very thing I've been talking about."

The boy replied, as he buttered a piece of bread:

"They've got a blamed sight worse-looking thing at home here."

"What kind of a thing is it?" said the father.

"It is the father of the 'What is it?'" retorted the lad.

The subject was dropped.

The following was recently sent to a schoolmistress: "Miss Jones,—can you allow our Henrietta Georgiana to come home and nurse Claudius Alfred while our Louise Annie Victoria goes to dancing school?"

The Bernhardt Glove.

The Bernhardt Glove is the hit of the season in gauterie, and the advent of its fair namesake is all that is needed to make it a rage among the ladies. Mr. Charles T. Jones, of 1163 Broadway, New York, exhibits some splendid samples in kid, Suede, and Tyrol; and the little specimen card of colors which he exhibits will be of great utility to purchasers. It is mailed on request: and gloves may safely be ordered by simply sending size and number of color desired. Note the address,

The rosebud opening to the morn,
While yet the dew hangs on the thorn,
Exhales less sweetness than it wont
To breathe from lips that SOZODONT
Has touched with a soft crimson glow
That shows the dazzling teeth of so.

Perfume of a Thousand Flowers.

Next to godliness be clean,
Even as the Scripture teaches men;
Fear not for the summer drought;
Fear rather for your tainted mouth.
The SOZODONT'S sweet fragrance try—
Once used you will not set it by;
Apply it freely to the gums,
Around the teeth where tartar comes.
'Twill give the teeth a pearly white
To greet the ever anxious sight;
'Twill give the breath at evening hours
The perfume of ten thousand flowers.

A GRATEFUL ODOR

Indicative of health and purity, is communicated to the mouth by the aromatic SOZODONT, which makes the teeth as white and as radiant as pol ished porcelain, and contains no ingredient that is not highly beneficial to both gums and teeth.

The Lyric and Dramatic professions are lond in their praises of SOZODONT.

THE

BROOKLYN, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1880.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

NOVELTY.—"False Friend" holds the boards at the Novelty.

PARK.—Herne's "Hearts of Oak" is now on at Colonel Sinn's Theatre.

HAVERLY.—The Bijou Opera Company are entertaining the patrons of Haverly's.

AMATEUR.—The season for the Brooklyn Amateur Associations, will soon begin. Some grand performances are spoken of.

MATINEES.—Extra matinees will be given at Haverly's and at the Park Theatre on Election Day.

ELECTION.—The Managers of the Brooklyn Theatres have arranged to read the election returns from the different stages on election night.

GOLDEN.—Reports from San Francisco announce a most flattering success of Shannon and Edeson in the "Golden Game." Full houses and favorable criticisms.

ADVERTISE.—The class of people who go to theatres are the live ones. Advertisers should think it over and see that their names and business be kept before that class of people.

NORDEN.—Milton Nobles has captured Swingers in the Ludvigh District with "Phenix." He will shortly open for four weeks at the Bush Street Theatre, San Francisco.

SOLDENE.—The famous Soldene Comique English Opera Company will be at Colonel Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre next week. Their last tour of the United States was a grand success.

PALMER.—Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Theatre Company are presenting the late New York success of "False Friend" at Theall & Williams' Novelty Theatre; it will also be given at both matinees.

HERNE.—Herne's "Hearts of Oak" is the engaging entertainment offered by Colonel Sinn this week at the Park Theatre. This play will be sure of pleasing all, as its reputation is of a very high character.

TROE.—Mr. E. E. Rice's Bijou Opera Company will give their delightful performance, "Bipotre Night" and "Charity Begins at Home," this week at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. This lively troupe never fails to bring out large audiences.

THEALL.—Messrs. Theall & Williams have engaged for next week the charming play, Herne's "Hearts of Oak." The Novelty will be sure to have over-crowded houses during the engagement; no look to your seats.

ATTRACTIONS.—The present attractions offered by the Brooklyn managers are worthy of the patronage they receive. Every week each of the managers give something new, and that the best the dramatic market affords.

FRIEND.—Manager Andrews announces next week, at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre, A. M. Palmer's "False Friend" Combination, who will give Edgar Fawcett's great work, "False Friend," in grand style. The company is an excellent one, and, in all, will warrant full houses.

Large Natures.

It belongs to every large nature, when it is under the immediate power of some strong and moving emotion, to suspect itself, and doubt the truth of its own impressions, conceptions of possibilities beyond its own horizon.

No man can lift himself above the world unless he takes hold of something higher than the world; he cannot lift himself out of himself unless he grasps something higher than himself.

A man with a heart can never refuse the kiss of a child. And a man without heart never gets a chance to refuse.

Head Clerks—Barbers' assistants.

WITTICISMS.

The youth who permits his sweetheart to rule him is a mile-guided young man.

Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast. This is the reason why they put a brass band on a dog's neck.

"Married—In Chillicothe, September 21, Herbert L. Rollingstone and Emma J. Moss." Thus does one familiar proverb receive a death blow.

"Will you settle that old account of yours this morning?" said a colonist. No, sir; you are mistaken in the man; I am not one of the old settlers."

"What must I do," asked a mean and conceited man of a friend who knew him well, "to get a picture of the one I love most?" "Sit for your own picture," was the reply.

"What is your father's occupation?" asked the teacher of the new scholar. "Dum!" "What does he do for a living?" "Oh! He bets on that election, I guess. Warm told him last night that's all he'd done for a month."

How good a fellow feels when, after rushing through a side street, upsetting a pea-nut stand, knocking down two small boys, stepping on a dog's left, and rebinding himself all over in a puddle, he finds that the street car he was hunting off isn't the one he wants!

A little three-year-old, who observed her grandfather writing a postal card, requested that she might be allowed to write a letter. Upon being asked if a postal card would'n answer her purpose, she replied, "Oh, no; I want papaer and 'velope; I don't want my letter to go larebended."

A young man dressed in the height of fashion, and with a poetic turn of mind, was driving along a country road, and upon gazing at the pond which skirted the highway, said: "Oh, how I would like to have my bread and in those cooling waters!" An Irishman, overhearing the exclamation, immediately replied: "Bedad, you might have it there and it would not stint."

On Sunday night we were sitting out in the moonlight, unusually silent, almost sad. Suddenly some one—a poetic-looking man with a gentle, loving face—said in a low tone: "Did you ever think of the beautiful lesson the stars teach us?" We gave a vague, appreciative murmur, but some soulless child said: "No; what is it?" "How to wink," he answered, with a sad, sweet voice."

A big, fat colored woman went to the Galveston Chief of Police and told him that her stepson had run away and she wanted to know where he was. "Is bodders me to know why he's run. He kind o' everything he needed to make him cumfable. I done all I could for him," she observed. "Has he any marks by which he may be recognized?" "Well, I don't reckon all de marks I made on him with a bed slat, while de ole man hel' his boddis' him, has faded out yet."

Mrs. M—— is beautiful, rich, and fashionable, but is unable to read. One day, while calling upon her friend, Mrs. B——, she perceived a richly bound copy of the Holy Bible; and smilingly she inquired if she might take it home and read it. Wondering much, Mrs. B—— assented; and one week later the book was returned. "Were you pleas with it?" asked Mrs. B——, dryly. The sweet, blue eyes of Mrs. M—— fairly sparkled with pleasure. "Oh, my dear friend, it is a charming novel. They got married at last."

The gas suddenly went out at a San Jose concert the other evening, and when it was relit a young lady indignantly accused a happy-looking man who sat on the next bench of kissing her in the darkness. The man tried to explain, but some of the lady's friends seized him and proceeded to fire him out with expedition. As they reached the door the victim managed to gasp out: "Me kiss a woman! Why, I'm just divorced." That settled it. He was apologized to, and the man of experience proudly resumed his seat.

FASHION NOTES.

Sleeves plain, narrow, and closely fitting the arm will be adopted.

Demi-trains are worn with carriage toilettes for ceremonious visits.

Occasionally a plush cloak is shown in brown or gray mottled shades.

Trains are confined to morning wrappers and dinner and evening dresses.

One of the newest caprices is that of adding a short pelerine cape to jackets.

A small soft muff to beg shape is made to match many of the richest cloaks.

The favorite colors are all shades of green, and admiral blue—a medium but vivid color.

At least two different materials often three, and sometimes more, are used for every dress.

For gods within the reach of people of smaller means the soft satins called satin merveilleux are shown.

Conchman's drab cloth or camel's-hair will be very stylish for an over-dress to be worn with a velvet velvet skirt.

There is a fancy, for military-looking mantles with double capes in front for young ladies, and even for school girls.

Satin will be combined with velvet, doubtless, but still more with plush, of the same color, but a different shade.

Above all else plush is the favorite trimming, especially for masculine-shaped jackets that merely require a collar, cuffs, and pockets.

For plain wraps the choice lies between the serviceable diagonal cloths with inside fleece, or else the loosely woven yet heavy cheviots.

Larger plaids are for mantles in the McGregor style, though these are often fanciful Madrace plaids instead of the Scottish Caledonias.

Among others—for all kinds of bonnets will be worn—there will be numerous small capotes, with puffed or shirred crowns, trimmed with gold-lace.

Mantle shapes or those with Dolman effects are considered more stylish but less useful than the jaunty coats, and are mostly chosen by older ladies.

There is a fancy for single-breasted jackets, and for those without the skirt piece sewed across the hips, yet many shirred waists with double-breasted fronts are worn.

The stately long cloaks of brocades, satin de Lyon, Rhadzeare, velvet, and plush are chosen for dressy wraps, and rival the richest fur Dolmans in their costliness.

The inexpensive striped velvets will be used by ladies of small means, while those who have more money will choose coats of plush, either plain, striped, ribbed, or brocaded.

Another novelty is a reversed cloth like empress cloth, with half an inch of long warm fleece on the inside; this is used for the long rich cloaks with plush or fur borders.

The monk's cloaks are also unique garments in favor with young ladies. They are loose and long, with gathered sleeves and a gathered hood, and sometimes little capes are added.

The elaborate passementeries that are banished from cloth wraps are seen in profusion, and these, with the heavy fringe, make the great cloaks something formidable in weight.

Hollotrope satins, embroidered with pearls, amber satin wrought with chenille and with cashmere beads, black with gold and jet, garnet velvet with pink roses of tiny cut beads, are shown.

An economical way of modernizing a black dress with worn basque is to use striped velvet and satin for a round basque, and leave the skirts of the costume in the designs worn last year.

Wool dresses left over from last year may be renovated by leaving the trimmed skirts as they now are, and using instead of the worn basque of one of the Persian brocades of mixed wool and silk.

A great deal of what is called silk velvet has all the silk thrown into the pile, while the foundation is cotton, or at most linen, and these goods are now used, just as the Broten and Languedoc laces are.

What is called the Jersey coat dispenses with collar, cuffs, and the double fronts, and is made to fit as closely as possible, even the pockets are without flaps, and are set underneath the fronts, with a diagonal opening bound on each edge.

The best modistes who have returned from Paris say that there is little change in the styles of winter dresses, and that the novelties exist in the fabrics, which are more various and also more extravagant than they have been for many years.

The beaded trimmings rival plush borders in popularity, and have even made their appearance on seal-skin cloaks, though they seem incongruous, as they conceal the beauty of the deep pile of the fur, and make the weight too great for comfort.

Satin embossed with velvet shows most delicate tints for evening dresses, especially in pearl and pale blue shades; the white brocades for wedding dresses show new designs of birds-of-paradise or large flowers, or else the whole design is outlined with pearls.

For dressy sacques for young ladies the coachman's drab shades are much used, though the novelty introduced by Fugat, who is the leading Parisian designer of cloaks, is for basket-work cloths combining as many colors as are found in the bourette cloths worn two years ago.

The most exclusive modistes commend the solid-colored wool goods, such as cashmere and camels hair, for entire costumes; and since a cloth suit has become the object of desire with so many, these closely twilled woolens may be bought most reasonably in pure wool and in good dark shades.

The furnishing stores import beaded satins in short lengths of from one and a half to five yards for combining with the rich velvets and plain satin de Lyon used for dressy toilettes. In these the beading is done by hand, and consists in covering the brocaded patterns woven in silks and velvets.

Seal brown or black diagonal cloths are chosen for serviceable plain cloaks, while the Cheviot checks, irregular plaids, or mixed surfaces are used for jaunty coats for general wear, and for the useful Ulsters that are by no means confined to traveling wraps, but serve often for shopping and instead of waterproof garments.

The cloths for autumn and winter wraps are made with figured or rough surfaces rather than with the smooth lustrous finish of broadcloth. They are of unusual thickness, yet soft and flexible; and as colored threads in Cheviot effects are introduced, it is more than ever necessary that they be pure wool, or else they will not be serviceable.

In place of the belted Ulster that was so generally unbecoming there are now various gracefully shaped long cloaks made of the English Cheviot cloths of quiet colors. The English driving cloak is an excellent "overall" wrap of this kind; it has a circular back fitted and shaped by seams, square sleeves in a lapse front, and a pointed hood. This is made of cloth of mixed colors.

The genuine Jersey webbing, of which Jersey waists are made, is made up into more expensive jackets for autumn wear, but there is no attempt to give the close Jersey effect to these garments. They are simply English double breasted jackets of dark blue, brown, black, or plum color, and are piped on the edges with satin of the same shade. Large pearl or metal buttons are their only trimming.

The Bernhardt Glove.

The Bernhardt Glove is the hit of the season in pantaria, and the advent of its fair namesake is all that is needed to make it a rage among the ladies. Mr. Charles T. Jones, of 1163 Broadway, New York, exhibits some splendid samples in kid, Suede, and Tyroi; and the little specimen card of colors which he publishes will be of great utility to purchasers. If is mailed on request: and gloves may safely be ordered by simply sending size and number of color desired. Note the address,

A Curious Sight.

Last week witnessed the great rush for the Satin de Lyons at $1 25, advertised by Wechsler & Abraham. The silk department was packed with eager purchasers, and the demonstration of delight and satisfaction of the lucky possessor of a dress was a rare treat to the disinterested beholder.

You can't afford to laugh, dear girls,
Unless your teeth are white as pearls—
Unless your mouth is pink and sweet,
And your breath like incense meet;
And you cannot supply this want,
But through the use of SOZODONT!

Diamonds at Hart's.

There is no need of hunting New York over in search of diamonds, for the stock and quality of these precious stones now on sale at Hart Bros., corner of Fulton and Johnson streets, cannot be surpassed.

"Magdalene Ferrat."

The above is the title of the latest publication by Peterson & Bros., of Philadelphia. This novel is by Emile Zola, translated from the French by John Stirling. It is a striking novel, and may be had at any bookstore for 75 cents.

It is handsomely mounted, and the cast includes Mr. James A. Herne, Mr. Frank E. Aiken, Mr. Harry Mainhall, Mr. William H. Crompton, Mr. W. M. Pratt, Mr. J. S. Andrews, Mr. William Lawrence, Mr. T. Matinees given on Tuesday, (Election Day,) Wednesday and Saturday.

Colonel Sinn will present next week the popular Soldene English Comique Opera Company, who were always favorites in this city. They will appear in some of their most pleasing operas.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

The Management of this house find opera one of the most popular attractions, and this week they give another novel performance, this time by E. Rice's Bijou Comic Opera Company, who gives an entertainment that pleases all. The company appears in a double bill, "The Spectre Knight" and "Charity Begins at Home," and includes among its members the names of Mr. William Herbert, Mr. Louis F. Pfau, Mr. J. J. Benitz, Mr. A. W. F. McCollin, Miss Genevieve Reynolds, Miss F. D. Hall, Miss Carrie Burton, Miss Annie Dayton, Miss Eugenie Maynard, Miss Ruby Thornton and Miss Ethel Kyle.

Matinees on Tuesday, (Election day,) Wednesday and Saturday.

The next attraction at this house will be Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Company in the late success from that house, entitled "False Friend," which will be produced in good style by that excellent company.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Company are this week presenting the excellent drama, "False Friend," at this popular house. The play was a big "go" in New York, and it will be given here in good style by the following artists: Messrs. Jos. Whiting, George F. De Vere, John Wilson, W. J. Le Moyne, Hart Conway, E. L. Davenport, Alfred Beech, Joseph A. Smith, Richard M. Stanley, the Misses Eleanor Carey, Kate Denin, Alice Brooks, Nellie Morant, Nellie Mortimer and Sam Lescelles.

Matinees given on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Messrs. Theall & Williams will have for their patrons' amusement Herne's "Hearts of Oak," which is pronounced by the public and press to be one of the neatest productions for years.

A Failure.

It is not true that the world is smooth. Therefore do not teach your boys that they will find it so. If you do, they will have to learn the contrary by bitter experience. Tell them frankly that the pathway of life to those who, such as faithfully perform themselves and their kind, is rough, and rugged, and thorny. Tell them they will not be disappointed. But inculcate with this correct information lessons of physical and moral courage. Instruct them that he who shrinks from the encounter is a coward, while he who bravely does his duty, under all circumstances, in spite of opposition—sometimes, it may be, in the face of denunciation and obloquy—is a true hero. He has a sufficient reward, and of that he is always certain, in the mere consciousness of doing right. That will always buoy him up and support him in his darkest hours.

"VERBUM SAT SAPIENTE."

BY LYNN C. DOYLE.

"Come, birdy, come!" the maiden sang,
And every voice was stilled;
The words, with meaning to me plain,
My very heart' chords thrilled.

I'd often longed to hear her sing
These words; but never dared
To be so self-conceited as
To think for me she cared.

But when I heard her carol forth
The notes with bird-like art,
The song' words found an answering vein
Deep in my throbbing heart.

Whan chance permitted me to speak
To her mild words of praise,
I told her that I'd been ensnared
By her sugrastive ways.

"Will thou, dear girl, make me thy choice?"
I hreaned. 'Twas of no use;
For, looking in my eyes, she said:
"I do not want a goose!"

WORDS OF WISDOM.

The king is the least independent man in his own dominions; the beggar the most so.

Whoever considers the weakness, both of himself and others, will not long want persuasives to forgiveness.

"He who has a long tongue" doesn't tear his mouth, but he who jumps breaks his legs," is a proverb of the Gascons.

Deceit is the false road to happiness; and all the joys we travel through to vice, like fairy banquets, vanish when we touch them.

No man can be brave who considers pain to be the greatest evil of life; nor temperate, who considers pleasure to be the highest good.

Merit has rarely risen of itself, but a pebble or a twig is often quite sufficient for it to spring from to the highest point. There is usually some baseness before there is any elevation.

There is many a wounded heart without a corresponding spirit. The ice may be broken into a thousand pieces; it is for still, but expose it to the beams of the sun of righteousness and then it will melt.

An infant, a gentle child, dying in its cradle, will live again in the better thoughts of those who loved it; and plays its part through them, in the redeeming actions of the world, though its body be burnt to ashes, or drowned in the deepest sea.

Hope is the ruddy morning ray of joy, recollection is its golden tinge; but the latter is won't to sink and the former and dimly shade of twilight; and the bright blue day, which the former promises, breaks indeed, but in another world, and with another sun.

Some feelings are untranslatable; no language has yet been found for them. They gleam upon us beautifully through the dim twilight of fancy, and yet when we bring them close to us, and hold them up to the light of reason, lose their beauty all at once, as glow worms, which gleam with such a spiritual light in the shadows of evening, when brought where the candles are lighted, are found to be worms like so many others.

Consumption of Paper.

The greatest quantity of paper is used in the United States, and the smallest quantity in Scandinavia. Italy's consumption is small, that of Russia is very much less as might have been expected from the condition of her people, form of government and state of manufactures. The quantities used per head of population in the principal countries are given in the exhibition as follows: United States, 30.8 lbs.; Germany, 13.2 lbs.; England, 11 lbs.; France, 7.59 lbs.; Austria-Hungary, 5.5 lbs.; Russia, 1.98 lbs.; Italy 3.08 lbs.; Scandinavia, 1.1 lbs.; Belgium, 11.22 lbs.; Switzerland, 12.86 lbs. The quantity used by Spaniards is not given, but as Italy's consumption is so small the industries at work in each country probably reduce the consumption in the former country to an unnoticeable quantity. China is not mentioned, but it is stated that 600,000,000 people use Chinese paper, 395,000,000 use European paper and 130,000,000 Arabian, 24,000,000 write on leaves, etc., and 293,000,000 are happy without any paper or writing material.

Go to strangers for charity, acquaintances for advice, and to relatives for nothing, and you will always have a supply.

A Boy's Essay on Statesmen.

Thar was a statesman. His coler was 16 and hat was 5. He went to a metin to orate. He said: "Ax me a question if you want to no." So when he was a sweein under his shirt a man hollered and he said: "Wot is tarif any way?" And the statesman he larfed kinder short, and he said: "I want no foolin around me. I am a bed man and carry a kane." So he gave his kane a twirl and laid it on the table. Then this awful man down among the spitons sed again: "How much is tarif a block anyway? An the statesman sed, real hot: "I am a free man and I won't be adjourned, so I demand the law." And then the law, dressed as a polisman, got the orful man by the back hold and took him to the lokup. An when in the lokup he did not ax any more tarif questions, but fot the cokroaches all night. An the statesman went home with his kane.

Settling It.

Recorder: "As far as the evidence goes, it seems you struck this man without the slightest provocation. What have you to say for yourself, Mr. Gilbooly?"

Gilbooly: "Your Honor, he didn't know I was behind him. He was talking about me, and I heard him say, 'That fellow, Gilbooly, is the biggest——' and before he could finish I just gave him a wipe. I know he meant to say, 'Gilbooly is the biggest fool on Galveston Island.'"

"But suppose he did not mean to say you were a fool?"

"Then let him swear he didn't and the lick shin't count."

Un-read Bibles.

An escaped convict from Sing Sing prison was recently arrested in New Jersey, charged with several burglaries. He confessed his guilt, and the catalogue of stolen property, which he furnished to an officer, included "a very large church Bible." If the man had come honestly by one Bible, and read it carefully, and lived up to its precepts, his present condition would have been far different.

Some people who marry for money, find out too late that the golden glitter is all moonshine.

Rose Ashleigh's Latest and Greatest Story

Will be commenced in No. 2 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

It is entitled

Fighting Her Way;

Or,

The Banished Child

BY ROSE ASHLEIGH,

OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Author of "The Widow's Wager," "His Other Wife," Etc.

It illustrates, in graceful and vigorous diction, the romantic career of a young girl who, through a strange combination of depressing circumstances finds herself in the great city. Thus thrown upon her own resources, deceived by officious friends, and persecuted by heartless foes, she is literally forced to

HOMELESS AND FRIENDLESS

BATTLE FOR LIFE.

The previous works of this gifted author were remarkable for their charming and distinctive style of phraseology. We perceive on every page of "THE BANISHED CHILD," the same beauty, purity, and originality of expression. The story abounds in and the plot is unique, fresh, and developed with that artistic grace for which ROSE ASHLEIGH is so justly renowned.

"FIGHTING HER WAY," can be read only in the

The improvements cost nearly $40,000, and it is pronounced to be the most perfect place of the kind in this country. A grand opening night will soon be given to the public.

DESERET.—The musical sensation of New York this season promises to be the production of Mr. Dudley Birch's Comic Opera of "Deseret," at Haverly's Fourteenth Street Theatre on October 11th, by the Dudley Birch Opera Company, under the management of Mr. Hart Jackson. Mr. Dudley Birch's success is too well known to the Brooklyn public to require any laudatory remarks. It is to be hoped that manager Andrews will find time to offer the opera to his patrons at an early date after the production in New York.

Ants that keep the world busy—Inf-ants.

One touch of humor makes the whole world grin.

If one stitch in time saves nine, how many will it take to save ten?

It is thought that a fashionable boarding-house furnishes the best anti-fat.

A man's slippers are made for comfort, and a woman's to show her colored stockings.

You never can persuade a man that a paper that has his name in it now and then isn't worth reading.

"Mamma," said little Eddie, "is it true that we are going to move into St. James' place in Brooklyn?" "Yes, darling," replied mamma. "And where is St. James going to?" inquired inquirer Eddie. Some children ask such funny questions.

Bright Little Girl: "The robbers can't steal my mamma's diamond ear-rings 'cause papa hid them." Visitor: "Where has he hid them?" Little girl: "Why, I heard him tell mamma he had put them up the spout; and he guessed they would stay there."

A little girl went timidly into a store at Belfaire, O., the other morning, and asked the clerk how many hoe-strings she could get for five cents. "How long did you want them?" he asked. "I want them to keep," was the answer, in a tone of slight surprise."

"My wife," remarked a prominent manufacturer, "never admired sealskins. She went once, and, seeing a friend at the opposite side of the room, nodded very politely, whereupon the auctioneer knocked down a patent cradle, and asked her where she wanted it delivered."

A correspondent of Portland, Oregon, furnishes this of the "Heathen Chinee." "John" had bought a watch at our jewelers, but as it ran too slow, he took it back saying: "Watches no good." "What is the matter with it?" asked the jeweler. "Oh," said John, "watches too much by-'n-by."

Elder Merriam (tired): "Do let's turn back, we are so far from home; thunder-storms are so frequent, too, and you know how frightened I am of lightning." Younger Ditto (not tired; wants to go further): "Come on, it's time enough now. You needn't be frightened of lightning; it won't touch you. You're not particularly attractive."

"Say, look here! I've got to have a new velvet shirt right off. Got to have it. The old thing is all worn out—actually threadbare down the front." Brute of a Husband: "Just the thing, my dear. All the rage. Fashion items says velvet shirts will be very much worn this season. Send paper the back of your dress and you're setting the style."

Physician (who has just examined an Irishman's lungs): "There seems to be some trouble here—pneumonia, or something of that sort; have you ever contracted cold?" Irishman: "Och, yes, sir!" Physician: "How long ago?" Irishman: "About eight years." Physician: "Did you feel sick?" Irishman: "Och, I did that!" Physician: "What was the matter?" Irishman: "I had a tooth pulled."

There was a bachelor over in Manchester, England, who had been disappointed and rejected by thirty different women. He died the other day, leaving his property to be divided equally among those who had jilted him. The reason for this bequest, which he stated in his will, was that he felt himself in their debt, for it was to their opportune refusals that he owed the peace which he enjoyed through life.

"Yes, your Honor," says the prisoner, "I admit that I broke into his house to rob it, but I did not intend to add violence to my crime." "You did not intend—of course you didn't. But if the witness who had heard you had called out 'whose there?' and ——" "Oh, of course, if he'd begun it I should have had to defend myself, and so would you if any man attacked you while you were peaceably going through his house."

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

NEXT WEEK.

MR. MAURICE GRAU'S FRENCH OPERA COMPANY.

Arrangements have been completed by which Mr. Maurice Grau's newly organized French Opera Company will play a week's engagement at this Theatre, commencing on MONDAY NEXT, October 11th, and produce, for the first time in this city, the great European musical sensation, "La Fille du Tambour Major." This charming Opera has proved a great success wherever it has been played, and has succeeded in drawing crowded houses at the Standard Theatre, New York, for three consecutive weeks. The press and public are unanimous in declaring this work, and the superb manner in which it is placed upon the stage by Mr. Grau, as one of the most perfect performances ever given. The same cast will be employed here as that which has proven so successful in our sister city.

"La Fille du Tambour Major" will be placed upon the stage in a superior manner, including the specially painted New York scenery, and costumes, properties and accessories, especially brought over from Paris by Mr. Grau. A force of over 100 persons will be employed, including a grand military band, on the stage. The programme for the ensuing week has been arranged as follows:

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, "La Fille du Tambour Major;" Thursday evening and Saturday matinee, "Les Cloches de Corneville" (The Chimes of Normandy); Friday, for the Benefit of Mlle. Mary Albert, "Girofle-Girofla," and Saturday night, "Le Petit Duc" (The Little Duke).

Notwithstanding the self-evident and great expense there is attached to the complete production, the Management have decided not to increase the prices of admission, but to maintain the regular prices of Haverly's Theatre.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

Mr. Dion Boucicault's beautiful play, "Led Astray," is presented in elegant style at Haverly's this week by Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Theatre Company, with Mr. Charles R. Thorne, Jr., as Count Rodolph Chandore, supported by Messrs. Owen Fawcett, Walden Ramsey, Joseph Whiting, W. J. Lemoyne, T. E. Morris, W. S. Quigley, Elliot, and the Misses Lillian Glover, Maud Harrison, E. J. Phillips, Nellie Morant, Sarah Cowell and Miss Florence White.

"Led Astray" will be given at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

For next week Mr. Andrews announces Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company, in "La Fille Du Tambour Major," "Cloches de Corneville, or Chimes of Normandy," "Girofle-Girofla," and "La Petit Duc."—(Little Duke.)

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

Mr. Lester Wallack appears this week in his great character of Hugh Chalcot, in the play of "Oure" The management have done everything to present this play in worthy style, and Mr. Wallack has the support of Mr. Harry Lacy, Mr. Geo. F. DeVere, Mr. J. R. Spackman, Mr. W. A. Paul, Mr. W. Davidge, Jr., Mr. E. D. Mortimer, Mr. S. C. Little, Kate Bartlett, Miss Adelaide Detchon, Madame Fonbl and Miss Collins.

"Ours" will be given at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The next attraction at this house will be Miss Ada Cavendish. As this lady is a great favorite in Brooklyn and an artist of a world-wide reputation, it would be well to secure your seats early.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

For this week Messrs. Theall & Williams introduce Jarrett & Rice's New Departure Combination in the popular musical comedy, "Fun on the Bristol, or A Night on Long Island Sound." The company is a good one and comprises John F. Sheridan, Richard Waldon, Frank Tannehill, Jr., Myron Calica, Henry Saville, Wm. Courtwright, William Hughes, Master Linden, the Misses Kate Castleton, Agnes Haltock and Marion Fiske.

Matinees as usual on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next Monday, October 11, Corinne Merry Makers in "The Magic Slipper." This pleasing entertainment will no doubt fill the house at every performance, for the company is an excellent one.

The Widow's Sagacity.

At a small country town in Connecticut there lately died a middle-aged man, leaving a widow of thirty-five. At the funeral, the deacon of the village alluded to the good qualities of the deceased, and among others his generosity. He said the deceased had loaned him some money once. Upon which, the weeping widow raised her head and inquired how much, and whether he had paid it back or not. The reader may imagine the annoying titter that ran through the crowd.

The Truth Frankly Spoken.

A bevy of children were telling what they got at school. The eldest got reading, spelling and ciphering.

"And what did you get, little one?" asked the father, to a rosy-cheeked little fellow who at the same time was driving a tenpenny nail into the door-panel.

"Me? I gets readin', spellin', and spankin'."

Ridicule.

Ridicule is like the summer shower on a pane of glass. It wets the surface, and that is all. You soon can wipe it dry, and the crystal will appear even brighter than before.

"AD NAUSEAM."

BY LYNE C. DOYLE.

'Tis folly to smoke something mild
In the shape of a small cigarette,
For often a cigar or pipe
Lends the body with painful regret.

In theatres, in parks, on the street
We notice the habit is growing,
For youngsters must smoke cigarettes
When homeward their girls they accompany.

No matter how much the vile habit
Is spoken of, written of, mooted,
The youngsters will puff in our eyes
Till the smoker, perchance, will get booted.

How we wish that some act might be passed
To insure us against certain death
At the hands of these cigarette fiends
Who nauseate us with their breath.

PARAGRAPHER'S NICHE.

Was the Merchant of Venice a merchant of venison?

Little boys shou'd be like pantomimes—seen but not heard.

History repeats itself, and so does a man that stammers.

"Who breaks, pays," but generally not over five cents on a dollar.

We are not surprised at kangaroo shoes. Years ago we saw alligators.

Every aerial loves to draw water, but all or them hate to hew wood like thunder.

Why wouldn't a through express train to Canada, called "The Embezzler's Express," pay?

We are all born white-headed, and when we get up to 80 or 90 per cent. in years old Time remonstrates us.

The cow that broke into a cemetery and ate the floral masonic emblems was probably looking for a "mizpah meal."

A New York barber has a parrot in his shop. Well, this is all right. A barber's shop is the place for Polls.

Apprehensions are felt of a failure in clams. Heavens! what a tearful thing the burning of a clam-bank must be.

A boy never begins to believe that life is reality until his father's clothes no longer fit him and his own are all worn out.

A new temperance society has been organized Motto—Only one horn a day. Let us call it the "Order of Unicorns."

Even the peanut-cruncher in the gallery has his mission, for without him the performance wouldn't amount to shucks.

All classes sing: "The Sweet-ly-and-By," rivalists, revengeful people, women on their way shopping, and maple-sugar manufacturers.

We cannot say what poor folks were made for, unless to give the rich opportunities to appease their conscience by the giving of alms.

When a man can sketch a broken pane of glass so that an observer will catch cold from it, he is in a fair way of becoming an artist.

The venerable Ecclesiastes knew something about "High, Low, Jack" when he spoke of being afraid of "that which was High."

If ever a man ought to get to Heaven it is the poor, inoffensive fellow who boards around, sleeping on unaired sheets, and eternally eating or struggling to eat old hens.

The loudest call ever received by a minister was given to Jonah by the whale. He stopped down and out in just three days, though, and the whale ejected him from the parsonage.

Self-Confidence.

There is no one element in a man's character that contributes more to his success in life than confidence in his own ability. A faint-hearted man is unstable, and will never excel. Faith in the endeavor to will and to execute is as important in a successful business career as is the keystone to the arch. A man possessed of a bold, daring, and resolute will may be modest in revealing his powers, but will be determined in performing what he conceives to be right. To men with this never-dying faith there is no such word as defeat, and, when obstacles present themselves in their path, it only results in their putting forth a greater effort to accomplish their purpose.

Creditors and poor relations never call at the right moment.

A CHARMING REALISTIC STORY.

A fresh and entrancingly interesting story was begun last week in No. 48 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY

It is entitled

ONE LOVE TOO MANY;

OR,

The Fugitive Bride.

BY F. W. CHAPPELL.

The author is a new contributor who commands a graceful and vigorous pen. The story is simple and life-like, and so artistically narrated that the reader becomes at once interested in the

ABLY DELINEATED CHARACTERS

The events throughout are so well described, that the intelligent reader knows not which to admire most—the quieter scenes, wherein the peculiarities of the characters are adroitly manifested, or the

that are pictured with such remarkable force and vividness that they seem little less than real.

We are confident that unanimous praise will be awarded the author, for

THE FUGITIVE BRIDE

is certainly a First-class Story. It can be read only in the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

FASHION NOTES.

The most charming bridal veils are of illusion.

Capucine brown is the new color for woolen costumes.

Shirring is the fashionable trimming for silk and satin mantles.

Gold and silver mull muslins have superseded the gold and silver net of last year.

In some cloaks the sleeves are turned up in capricious ways to display the plush lining.

Feather turbans will again be worn. Pheasant feathers are the most in favor for these hats.

The tints which promise to reign in ribbons for the fall are, if possible, still more curious than any heretofore seen.

In the list of beaded silk fabrics are Surahs of robust body and close texture in designs of leaves and flowers in cut jet.

In very gorgeous manufactures of velvet brocade the design is usually in large leaves of full-blown flowers framed in with beads.

For wedding dresses, there are passementeries of pearl beads, and pearls with opales-cent beads, which are held at $40 and upwards per yard.

That the reign of red, will continue through the autumn is sufficiently shown by the character of the costumes in which the professional beauties will appear at the fall races.

Dark shades of old-gold silk weave a beaded design in dark amber, and mock topaz, sapphire, amethyst, and emerald beads form the designs on Surahs of corresponding colors.

Among silks which are both elegant and novel are Surahs in which beads form the fanciful design, as well as some which frame in with beads a figure cut a-jour in velvet or satin.

The passementeries that have been opened are more gorgeous, if not more elegant, than the materials they are intended to decorate, while revealing the fact that the rage for color, glow, and glitter has not yet subsided.

The fichu with ruffles started by a knot of flowers or a bow on the right or left has short or long ends, according to fancy, is of mulle and Breton or fine Languedoc lace, and demands a large flower or a large bow with ends.

A novel hat has been worn by a lady of taste in London, and has a resemblance to a Neapolitan head-dress. It consists of a circular band of black velvet, upon which lies flat a long strip of cream-colored and scarlet satin, striped, and bordered with very narrow and delicately designed gold lace.

The Newport jacket is fitted as jauntily as a basque with bone behind and its double-breasted front; but the loose square sleeves are a new feature on such garments, and give the effect of a mantle because they are extended to the end of the wrap in the back.

Owing to the close dressing of the hair now in fashion, the character of all head ornaments is completely changed. It was easy to place almost any pretty "floral effect," as bunches of flowers are called, against a towering pile of puffs, but the flat style requires a different treatment.

New white laces for trimming lingerie are shown. The point fleurette is especially pretty for trimming mull fichus and collarettes. It is on the same fine-meshed net used for Languedoc and point d'esprit, but instead of the large figures of Languedoc, or the pin dots of point d'esprit, it has tiny detached flowers wrought upon it in rows, and is also finished with small points, or scallops.

For dresses for ordinary wear the favorite material will be light wool or cachemire de Finde combined with velvet to match, or Scotch plaids of not too conspicuous colors. The same plaids in bright colors will be used as lining for wrappers and house dresses made of plain material. This lining is turned over to serve as revers on the sleeves and in front of the dress, and is also used for large collars.

A tendency towards certain Italian styles has been commented upon as evincing itself—a felt hat threatening to appear of a peculiar pointed shape,such as is seen on shepherds in the Roman Campagna. The hat is a sort of thing that, hand it as you may, it is always lapsing and likely to be popular, for the reason, that it suits more faces, owing to its breadth of brim, than many simples.

The heart-shaped or V dress which is so much worn and promises to retain its vogue has brought into favor a peculiar collar, very deep, very long, trimmed,with a richly profuse trimming of Breton lace and tiny loops of white satin ribbon, and having a yachting collar-bow at the back, while the front has an immense bow of the same mulle also trimmed with ruffles of Breton lace and deep loops of the white satin ribbon. This collar is so dressy that it trims any dress. Its low shape displays the necklace and entirely disengages the throat, which, in itself, is a dress effect.

A color very much in vogue for full-dress autumn toilettes is what is calledin de Champagne. Silk gauze, satin, and brocade are made of this soft, charming color, which is mixed with ecru, not cream, white. This will also continue to grow in favor during the winter, and materials of this tint will be embroidered with gold. There are fleur damaskes, so called because this fabric is extremely soft and flexible; between ourselves, floss damask bears a close resemblance to brocaded Surah, but Surah has been so much worn during the last two months that it is really necessary to have a change, if not in the stuff itself, at least in its name.

The Bernhardt Glove.

The Bernhardt Glove is the hit of the season in gauntlets, and the manufacturer of the name sake is all that is needed to make it a rage among the ladies. Mr. Charles T. Jones, of 1163 Broadway, New York, exhibits some splendid samples in kid, Suede, and Tyrol; and the little specimen cut of colors which he publishes will be of great utility to purchasers. It is mailed on request; and gloves may safely be ordered by simply sending size and number of color desired. Note the address,
CHARLES T. JONES,
1163 Broadway, New York.

The Face.

How much there is in the human face! What a volume, nay, what a library, may be found there! All thoughts, all passions, all that can stir this mortal frame may be read in its expression. There is what may be designated as the h.me face, and which often differs much from the face that is seen in public or society. The real face is worn at home—the artificial abroad. There is not a single thing in any home, high or low, worth more than a bright, cheerful, sympathetic face. It soothes little irritations, it encourages the faint, it brightens men, and it throws light more precious than the light of day. The beauty of a face is in its expression. Whether it be Greek, Roman or Saxon, its power to attract or repel lies in the combined speech of its several features. A homely face may be most comely and winning from the high qualities of the soul are regnant there. A heart full of gracious sentiments and emotions will transform the plainest face into one of great loveliness.

Forgetfulness.

What a boon is the faculty for forgetfulness of little things! To-day's troubles look large, but a week hence they will be forgotten and buried out of sight. Says one writer: "If you would keep a book and daily put down the things that worry you, and see what becomes of them, it would be a benefit to you. You allow a thing to annoy you as you allow a fly to settle on you and disturb you, and it loses your temper—or rather get it—for when men are surcharged with temper they are said to have lost it—and you justify yourselves for being thrown off your balance by causes which you do not know of not. But if you could see what it was that threw you off your balance, and put it down in a little book, and follow out and ascertain what becomes of it, you would see what a fool you were in the matter. We cannot afford to wear ourselves out with petty worries."

The Post Office Department has ruled that a husband has no control over the correspondence of his wife. But this decision will not prevent a man from carrying his wife's letter around in his middle coat pocket three weeks before mailing it.

A Big Run

The anxiety of the ladies after things that suit their taste is fully developed at Huyler's, 370 Fulton street, where they await patiently their turn to be served either with a glass of his celebrated soda or a box of his delicious confections. At this store there is always a big run on these special goods.

CINDERELLA.—The grand spectacle of "Cinderella," by Barrett's European Combination, is on this week at the Brooklyn Park. Ladies should remember to take the little ones to the Wednesday and Saturday matinee, for the children throughout the country think there's nothing so good as "Cinderella."

PALMER.—Next week Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Theatre Company, with Chas. R. Thorne, Jr., and other members from that Theatre, will present the great play of "Led Astray," at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. The Management will put it on the stage equal to its presentation at the Union Square some years ago.

A new outgrowth is reported from the Tanner experiments at Coldwell & Wheeler's station, Nevada, undertook to refrain from speaking for forty days. The experiment runs as follows: "She began at 9 in the morning, and at 10½ her pulse was so feeble from exhaustion that the physicians feared she would die by noon. At 11 her heart beat but twenty-six a minute, and her respirations were hardly noticeable. Her friends here urged her to discontinue her terrible task, and told her some gossip about a neighbor. On hearing it she immediately rushed from the house, and going across the street, met a lady friend, and talked to 6½ last night, and is now fully restored."

WITTICISMS.

Ladies are now very busy Fall furnishing.

Lawyers are seldom consulted in regard to ladies' suits.

"I got my living by dying now," wrote home a boy to his mother.

When a reporter attends a trotting match he tries to write a racy account of it.

When the cook returned from the cemetery she said she had been to see where her mornlaid.

A circus never runs too long for spectators, but let a sermon run over forty minutes and a congregation can't sit still.

A boy never begins to believe that life is reality until his father's clothes no longer fit him and his own are all worn out.

Blossoms produce apples, apples give us cider, and cider produces blossoms. This one of Nature's many beautiful compensations.

The French shoes now worn are said to be very bad for the health of ladies, although they stand very high as heeling agents.

The driver of a poor harness worn horse was thus accosted the other day: "Hello, Bill! what's the matter with your horse—mothesten?"

The proper time for a girl to marry is after she has counted up her cash and found that she can support herself in case her husband turns politician.

Some vile traducer says that a month before marriage and a month after death men regard their wives as angels. Of the intervening time he has nothing to say.

It is time-honored custom in Quincy, Fla., to send a newly-married couple by firing a cannon. This is to remind those present that the battle of life is fairly begun.

"The more shirtee Melican man get washee, more long Kinaman makee," is the way an almond-eyed Philadelphia laundrymnn translates "Cleanliness is next to godliness."

"I am going to Alaska," said a gentlemen to his friend. "Indeed!" remarked the friend, "and does your wife approve of it?" "Don't know," replied the other, "but Alaska."

"Would I were a man!" exclaimed a strongminded woman in her husband's hearing. "Would you were," was his remark, "for then I would never have been united to you."

"I think, dear, the dew has commenced falling," he said in his softest accent. "Yes," she replied, "I've been hoping to hear a-dieu for some time." He did not call the next evening.

A widow's little child received a reward of merit at school, and ran eagerly to her mother, saying: "I held it up to the sky all the way home, that papa might see what a good girl I had been.

When you see a man take his hat off to you it is a sign that he respects you. But when he is seen divesting himself of his coat you can make up your mind that he intends shall respect him.

"A woman may have been originally one step in advance of man in evil-doing, but he very soon overtakes her, and has never since suffered himself to labor under a similar disadvantage".

Light-minded young thing, in a bathing suit: "Surely, Aunt Margaret, you're not going to wear your spectacles in the water." Aunt Margaret: "Indeed I am. Nothing shall induce me to take a second bathing."

A man who had sixty-five dollars stolen from him received a note with twenty-five dollars, saying: "I stoled your money, but have never since suffered himself to labor under a similar disadvantage. Sorrowfully mine, Jones."

A gentleman traveling on a Hudson River steamer one day at dinner was making away with a large pudding close by, when he was told by a servant that it was dessert. "It matters not to me," said he: "I would eat it if it were a wilderness."

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

"Fun on the Bristol, or a Night on the Sound, is on this week at Haverly's. The reputation already gained by Messrs. Jarrett & Rice's New Departure Combination in this amusing musical comedy is a sufficient guarantee that a night's fun is to be had by simply witnessing this novel entertainment. The company comprises Messrs. John F. Sheridan, Richard Waldon, Frank Tannehill, Jr., Myron Calice, Henry Saville, Wm. Courtwright, William Hoghes, Master Linden, the Misses Kate Castleton, Agnes Hallock and Marion Fiske.

Next week, Mr. A. M. Palmer's Union Square Theatre Company in Boucicault's great play, "Led Astray," with Mr. Charles R Thorne, Jr., and many of the originals in the cast.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

This week Jarrett's European Spectacular Combination, in "Cinderella," is the beautiful attraction offered at this house. In the company there are the Misses Morie Bates, Annie Shaffer, Miss Elma Delaro, Jennie Hughes, Little Katie Seymour, Ethel Delmont, Rose Courtland, Messrs. William H. Seymour, Ed. Connell, Mark Smith, James Vincent, William Loyd, Charles Bright, Leonerd Saville, Arthur German, George Topack, William Moore and other well known artists. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. These performances should be well patronized by the ladies and children, as it is a grand entertainment.

For the next week Col. Sinn has the pleasure of presenting Mr. Lester Wallack and an excellent company in the great play of "Ours," in which Mr. Wallack is so very popular in this city.

NOVELTY THEATRE

Miss Kate Clayton, the popular and successful actress, supported by Mr. Chas. A. Stevenson, and the Misses Margaret Gaun, Bollie Pike, Louisa Eldridge, Mary Wilson, Elaine Plymton, Alice Mansfield, Gertie Johnson, and the Messrs. Edward Arnott, R. B. Phillips, R. J. Dustan, M. L. Leffingwell, W. H. White, W. A. Graves, John T. Burke, J. S. Bradley, W. J. Lillendale, and C. T. George, hold the boards at the Novelty this week in the great play, the "Two Orphans," for which the Management have made emple preparations to present it in good style.

For next week, the new Departure Combination will present the musical comedy, "Fun on the Bristol, or a Night on the Sound."

Influence of Happiness.

It should never be forgotten that the happier a child is, the cleverer he will be. This is not only because, in a state of happiness, the mind is free and at liberty for the exercise of its faculties instead of spending its thoughts and energies in brooding over troubles, but also because the action of the brain is stronger when the frame is in a state of hilarity—the ideas are more clear, impressions of outward objects are more vivid, and the memory will not let them slip. This is reason enough for the mother to take some care that she is the cheerful guide and comforter of her child. If she is anxious or fatigued, she will exercise some control over herself, and speak cheerfully and try to enter freely into the subject of the moment, to meet the child's mind, in short, instead of making him sink for want of companionship.

Mrs. Hamilton lost a pair of superb solitaire ear-rings at Manhattan Beach some little time since, having thrust them into an envelope which she feared she had thrown away. But shortly afterward a lady who had wrapped her wet stockings in some envelopes that she found on the floor discovered the ear-rings, and returned them.

"WHY!"

By Lynn C. Doyle.

I strolled where the brooklet murmured
Along o'er its pebbly bed,
I listened to the song bird carol
As joy notes overhead.

The sunlight flecked thro' the leafage,
In slanting beams o'er the place
Where I lolled in the woodland grasses,
Casting shadows silvern my face.

The ripple of the coursing streamlet,
The songs of the birds in the trees
Induced me to indulge in musings
While lulled by the passing breeze.

I slept whilst the wild flowers' perfume
Was wafted by the breeze along,
Then I yelled out, "Fire! Help!! Murder!!
For something was certainly wrong.

'Twas all nice enough when the song bird
Lulled the writer to sweet repose,
But why did not he eat the beetle
Before it got up my nose?

Shopping.

What feminine amusement is so exhilarating for women as shopping? It does for them what hunting, fishing, or standing an exciting political convention does for the sterner sex. It does not make so much difference what is bought in the one case, or what is caught, shot, or nominated in the other. Excitement, exercise, and outlet for dormant energy are afforded, and what more is wanted? Another quarter of a yard of the material bought two or three days ago, or some buttons, a bit of ribbon or a little lace, is wanted. Then the discovery is made that the needles are all gone, the pins have given out, or hooks and eyes are a necessity. Day after day, some occasion is found for making a tour of the dry goods and millinery stores, and the trouble is overlooked in the pleasure of doing a little shopping. When penurious or frugal fathers are disposed to grumble at the constantly appearing bills for a long list of trifling items, they should remember the gratification which the purchaser has received and sign a check without murmur.

A Curious Habit

It is a curious habit of human nature to look at a men through the transparent medium of a dollar bill. If a rich man is rude, it is regarded as a quaint and laughable eccentricity; but if a poor man does or says the same thing, he is a boor, and we are disgusted beyond measure. We are ready to find any excuse for an act that has money behind it, and equally ready to find fault with any act that is backed by poverty. This gold-colored pigment which envious eyes secrete is not the peculiarity of a class, but the characteristic of all. From the sexton who shoves a bundle of harness rage into a back pew, and shows silk and velvet to the best seat, to the clergymen who smoothes the rough edges of life for wealth, all men doff their hats to a pocket-book. This is a pleasant reflection for the few, but to the rest it comes a little hard.

A Bad Dream.

A French fable for the use of Jeromy Diddlers.—Two friends lived close to each other, one of whom was in a constant state of impecuniosity. The latter got up in the middle of the night and rushed breathless into the house and bedroom of his more fortunate neighbor.

"I have had an awful dream," he said. "I fancied you were ruined and reduced to the last degree of want. I rose from bed under the impression of this nightmare, and I ran to my desk to get some money to take to you."

"How good of you!" said the friend.

"Yes," said the dreamer; "and you can imagine my annoyance on finding that I had not a sou in my drawer. It was completely empty. By-the-by, do you happen to have fifty louis in the house.

There are some people who are much depressed by disappointment, and can hardly be held accountable for their subsequent conduct. A young darkey, residing near Milledgeville, Ga., had set his heart upon attending the funeral of a friend, whose last place of abode was some twenty miles distant. He endeavored to borrow his father's mule, but the old man said that he "didn't believe in sich nonsense as gwine to funerals jis' to hab some fun wid de gals," and refused to lend the mule. As the young darkey could not attend the distant funeral, he decided to have one nearer home, and promptly prepared a corpse by shooting his father.

A CHARMING REALISTIC STORY.

A fresh and entraneingly interesting story is begun this week in No. 48 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY

It is entitled

ONE LOVE TOO MANY;

Or,

The Fugitive Bride.

BY F. W. CHAPPELL.

The author is a new contributor who commands a graceful and vigorous pen. The story is simple and lifelike, and so artistically narrated that the reader becomes at once interested in the

AELY DELINEATED CHARACTERS

The events throughout are so well described, that the intelligent reader knows not which to admire most—the quieter scenes, wherein the peculiarities of the characters are adroitly manifested, or the

that are pictured with such remarkable force and vividness that they seem little less than real.

We are confident that unanimous praise will be awarded the author, for

THE FUGITIVE BRIDE

is certainly a First-class Story. It can be read only in the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

FASHION NOTES.

The Languedoc laces still remain in favor.

Short suits will be worn altogether for the streets.

Carriage dresses may be either short or trained.

Serge or cloth will be used for autumn traveling dresses for mourning.

Small round capes of cloth, heavily beaded, are imported for early fall wear.

Plaids in broken linens, checks, and blocks are imported in soft warm cloths.

What is called seal-skin fringe is a new chenille fringe that is rich and effective.

White Spanish lace has all or silver threads, and is beautifully beaded with pearl and opal cut beads.

Vermicelli lace is also new, and is made by drawing cord-like threads through it in serpentine designs.

A kind of Chinese crape with incised figures in new for cravat bows and collarettes in white and creamy tints.

Gilt stitching and cashmere-colored tinsel-wrys are used to head rows of creamy lace on soft mull kerchiefs.

Many ruches of feathers and of passementerie, also very wide feather borders of black ostrich tips, are on the handsomest cloaks.

Valenciennes laces have large artistic designs made of mull muslin applied on Brussels net, with button-hole stitching on the edges.

Squares of netted jetted net will be worn in handkerchief shape around the neck in the place instead of the long scarf of black lace.

Black torchon laces have leaves of gilt threads, and the black Spanish laces have the large leaf designs entirely of gilt, that it is said will not tarnish.

Seal brown, pheasant brown with less red than seal, plum-color, and dark myrtle green are the tints preferred for cloth dresses that are all of one color.

The brocaded satins and brocaded velvets differ from those used last year in having large detached figures rather than the small matelassé effects then popular.

The large Directoire collars with notched revers and the full frills worn by Sara Bernhardt, with a tiny square bow over the left side of the neck, are stylish designs for satin and lace collars.

Laces are again used, especially on the quaint Directoire gowns, and on the Spanish scarfs instead of the thick pleatings of lace used last season, these laces are now most often gathered to form full frills.

The fashion of shirring is increasing in favor. The fronts of dresses, the tablurs, and the fronts of basques are entirely shirred. This fashion is particularly effective with satin, on account of its glossy lustre.

Among the new black laces for trimming outside garments gold threads are introduced in most effectively, and others have nauses of glittering tinsel—silver, gold, and copper red tints combined in most effective ways.

Lovely pointed collars entirely of jet beads, finished with jet fringe, are shown to wear with black dresses. Cashmere-colored beads mounted in the same way are also imported, and serve as a gay finish for simple dresses.

Heliotrope-color is abandoned, its success having been very ephemeral. For evening the preferred colors are dark, all the shades of invader and scabious taking the precedence of the olive and bronze tints hitherto too well known.

Black jet and jet embroidery seem destined never entirely to disappear from our feminine toilette; it is always worn more or less. Next winter it will be more, and corsages loaded with jet embroidery will be worn with all kinds of skirts.

Black is the color preferred for Spanish-looking wraps, and the materials are stately brocades or else plain lustrous stuffs, such as satin de Lyon or the reyped Sicilienne, trimmed, indeed, the plain satin is employed in its richest qualities.

The mixed homespun cloths with flecnel-like finish are used for the entire or partial combining them with other material; a piping of satin and a pleating at the foot of the same is used in bright colors when the dress is for a very young lady.

A new feature at Wechsler & Abraham's is the beautiful Upholstery Department. Ladies who have not seen that beautiful room have a surprise and treat in store. The great interest manifested in home decorations makes this Department particularly attractive.

Black Brussels net beaded with jet in foliage designs and in stripes, also in passementerie patterns, is largely imported for trimming black silk dresses, while for evening dresses the same designs are repeated on white net with white jet and iridescent opal beads.

New cravat bows are made of the gay Madras plaid Surah. Instead of a strap, a pearl pin holds the two large loops of the bow at the top, while below this is a sailor knot finished with two pointed handkerchief corners. This is worn with a round collarette made of three frills of the new Alencon lace that is tinted cream in color.

New veils of black net have dots as large as a pea wrought with gilt threads, while others have pea dots of chenille—black, red, white, or else oil gold. Red net with tiny dots is also shown for veils. Grenadine veils of dark color have chenille dots of the shade of the grenadine.

The dress cloaks imported from the best Parisian houses are of such great length that they will be most effective when worn with the long skirts of carriage toilettes, while for handsome short costumes are cloaks of equal elegance both in design and fabric, but of medium length; extending just below the knees.

Light-colored cloths are preferred for jackets, and these are made warm-looking by having dark, or plush, or velvet collars The shape of these wraps differs so little from those worn last year that it will be a matter of small expense to remodel last year's jackets, the only change needed being the collar, cuffs, and pockets of plush.

The fabrics manufactured for the coming winter surpass in magnificence any that have yet been seen. The samples of these show velvet brocades on a ground of satin. Fancy on a purple ground shaded branches of dark green velvet and raised figures. Nothing more elegant can be imagined. The same material is made with the designs varied indefinitely on all kinds of a foundation and of all shades, there is even white velvet on a white satin ground with delicate stitching.

Large collarettes and fichus of round, straight, and square shapes are shown, as well as those that are three-cornered, or pointed in regular Marie Antoinette fashion. A great deal of shirring is one of the new features of these articles for the neck, and this is done not only on white and creamy mull muslin, but on colored mull in heliotrope, pink, lilac, and pale blue shades. Some waite satin is also introduced, and ivory satin ribbons are used for the square and long-looped bows that adorn the collar. Still another novelty is silk muslin in dark changeable colors, which is shirred in scarfs and trimmed with lace

The single narrow baisyene flounce added at the foot of the skirt will remain a favorite finish for winter costumes. At present it is laid in small box pleats, instead of the fine knife-pleating used last year. It is made of the silk or satin used for the dress or for its trimming, and is a finger deep, cut straight across the goods; it is lined throughout with crinoline, or else wiggin of fine quality, with less stiffness than that used for facings. The silk is turned up half an inch on the wrong side, the box pleats are an inch wide, and the top of the flounce is sewed to the bottom of the skirt with a cording of silk, making a seam between the silk and the dress facing.

French Heels.

Ladies who go down the beach in bare feet bathing-suits are now encounter a new peril. Impudent but presumably interested young men follow along with a tape-line, and measure the length of the footprints in the sand, and get accurately the number of the precious number. A dreadfully-pretty young man went about the beach at Cape May wondering the deinty imprint of his sweetheart's little shoe, with its French heel set in the middle of the foot, and so near the toe that it was difficult to conceive that there was any space between them He had fondly measured these fairy-like foot-prints time and again, and every test had clearly proved the shoe to be not more than a 2 at most. This fond young man wasn't content to let well enough alone. He found his fairy on the way to the surf one morning in a bathing-dress which did not call for French heels, and he outrageously measured the sand prints as they were made by feet unadorned by the shoemaker's art. It was a severe strain upon the tape-line, but he succeeded finally in getting the measurement lengthwise and sidewise, and other ways not wise, and was most profoundly horrified. He went over the ground half-a-dozen times to assure himself of his mistake, and every time he found that he had the dimensions of fairy feet that could not possibly be numbered less than 6, and gave strong indications of a right to be called an 8 The poor young fellow was not prepared for the dreadful truth which thus fell upon him with crushing effect. Shocking events like this call loudly for the invention of a bathing-slipper with a heel somewhere down near the toe.

Wives should always sit up for their husbands instead of getting their servants to do so. It makes two hours' difference in their arrival.

PERFUME OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS.

Next to godliness be clean,
E'en as the Scripture teaches men;
Fear not for the summer drought,
Fear rather for your tainted mouth.
The SOZODONT'S sweet fragrance try—
Once used you will not set it by;
Apply it freely to the gums,
Around the teeth where tartar comes.
'Twill give the teeth a pearly white
To greet the ever saxeous sight;
'Twill give the breath at evening hours
The perfume of ten thousand flowers

A GRATEFUL ODOR

Indicative of health and purity, is communicated to the mouth by the aromatic SOZODONT, which makes the teeth as white and as radiant as polished porcelain, and contains no ingredient that is not highly beneficial to both gums and teeth. The Lyric and Dramatic professions are loud in their praises of SOZODONT.

CINDERELLA.—Next week Jarrett's operatic spectacle of "Cinderella, or The Little Glass Slipper," will be produced in fine style at the Brooklyn Park Theatre. This performance has been the greatest success of the season. At the matinees in Philadelphia at least 2,000 children witnessed it, and all—old and young—pronounced it a splendid thing.

PARK.—The week Mary Anderson is at Colonel Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre, and appears in the following: Monday, "Romeo and Juliet;" Tuesday, "Lady of Lyons;" Wednesday matinee, "Still Waters Run Deep," (by the Anderson Company); Wednesday evening, "Evadne;" Thursday, "Ingomar;" Friday, "Love;" Saturday matinee, "Hunchback;" Saturday evening, Miss Anderson as "Bianca," in "Fazio."

A bad heart is better than a pretty face, for age freshens rather than fades it. No persons are so much beloved or so "good looking" in the eyes of their friends, as those in whom the trails of benevolence and sympathy are active at all periods of life.

"The topaz," we are told, "is found in primative rocks in many parts of the world," but "topaz," is many parts of the world, are found without the "rocks."

Sir: "Aren't you coming to church with us this morning, Herbert?" Herbert: "No; an excursion train is just in, so I shall stroll about on the beach and look at the bruisers—the Sabbath-breakers, I mean."

An Ottawa young man did not agree with the married woman with whom he had fallen in love, but went boldly to her husband and asked him to accept money enough to compensation for the loss of his wife. The husband replied that $10 was about the figure, and the lover paid it, taking the woman away.

Two friends were dining at a Parisian restaurant, when Emile Beine, whose waiter would skin a customer as remorselessly as he would skin an eel, said to his friend: "Jules, view," said one. "I love to sit here and look at the boats." "Yes! Speak low or they will put the boats in the bill," respond his companion.

Philetus Landlady: "Then you [illegible] your mamma want the same rooms you had last year?" Young Lady: "Yes, Miss Jigsby, only it isn't mamma who is with me this time. A young mother, in despair of ever teaching her idle little girl, aged 4, her letters, and thinking that perhaps the child knew more than she would admit, said: "Now, Kate, I won't try to teach you to day; you shall be mother and teach me my letters." "Very family and truly be mother" said Kate. "Yes, my darling." "Let's begin, then," was the response. "You have been a very good girl today, and you may have a whole holiday, and Katie shut up the book and ran off laughing.

Mr. Ben Maginley, the popular comedian, supported by Messrs. Joseph Wheelock, Harry Eytinge, Frank Roberts, W. Henderson, W. B. Murray, A. W. Williams, George Wilson, the Misses Marion D'Arcy, Annie Ware and Stella Congdon, holds the boards at the Brooklyn this week, in the new comedy-drama of American life, by John Habberton, entitled "Deacon Crankett," in which Mr. Maginley appears as the Deacon—a character well suited to him. A very enjoyable performance is given.

For the coming week Mr. Andrews announces Jarrett & Rice's New Departure, "Fun on the Bristol," which will be presented in a manner equal to the "Tourists," and, as this play is on the same order, a good evening's fun is in store for all.

Next week Miss Kate Clarxton in the celebrated play of the "Two Orphans."

George Abrahams was extravagantly fond of cold cabbage, and one day, seeing that quite a plateful was left after dinner, asked his wife to save it for his salad at night. About midnight George came home, labouring under a stream of watery weather. Feeling hungry, and thinking of his favorite cabbage, he asked where it was. His wife replied, "In the pantry, on the second shelf." Down he went, found the cabbage, got out oil, mustard and vinegar, cut up the cabbage, dressed it, and ate it all. In the morning his wife noticed the plate of cabbage on the table, placed it out of day before, and turning to her "dear George," innocently asked why he did not eat the cabbage. "I did," he said. "How did you like it?" "Oh, not very well. It was tough and stringy." "But here is the cabbage now; where did you find any more?" "Why, on the second shelf, where you told me." The wife gave a quick look at the shelf, and then came a cry of agony. "Why, George, you've eaten twenty dollars' worth of lace collars and cuffs that I had put to starch! Stringy cabbage, indeed!"

Life has but little of perfect joy. If we stoop to gather a rose, behold the thorns wound us. If we gather fruit, fair and lovely it may be to the eye, yet it may turn to bitterness and ashes upon our thirsty lips. And so let us not despise even the simplest of our pleasures and comforts. There is not a plant growing on our broad, beautiful land but has its use.

"SELF-CONVICTED."

BY LYNN C. DOYLE.

"You horrid fellow! Why! how did you dare
To kiss me in that fashion—disarrange my hair?
You took undue advantage, no one being present,
And kissed me—oh, how rude! (but oh, how pleasant)

"I told you once before it wasn't nice,
And yet, not satisfied, you kissed me twice;
Now, don't do so again, for ma will hear you,
And she'll come in and find me sorry you.

"Why don't I move away? Quite easy that to answer;
I'm not so timid—tho' a female—understand, sir!
You would not think me brave if I retreated,
So here I shall remain, tho' but to be defeated.

"My face is flushed, I know—the sir is smiling!
But why do you persist in this vain wishing?
You must not kiss again! I beg—implore!
And ma may hear—I'll go and close the door."

ITEMS ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Legge is an old lady now living at Martha's Vineyard, who, as a native of St. Helena, remembers going to the school-room door to see Napoleon as he went on his way to Longwood. Mrs. Legge's daughter married one of the crew of an American whaler, who brought his wife and her mother to live at the Vineyard.

A recent novelist has somewhere complained that life does not appear to last as he as jolly in 1885 as it was in 1866. Probably there were a good many people in 1866 to whom it appeared that life in '66 was not as jolly as in 1865, and the process might also, in all probability, be continued backward to the year 14 of the world.

She was really charming, and seemed greatly to enjoy the ball-room, so much, until her pearly teeth struck a couple of shot, then her countenance changed and she said: "It's too mean to have those nasty shot in the birds." "Why," said he, "they are good for the digestion." "Yes, that may be, but I don't want to die just that way.

A girl who seems to be undecided which to choose suitors to is the Chicago Tribune. "I adore Augustus' beauty and dash; I admire Harry's wit and keenness; while in the silent chambers of my heart I sit in hamiltonian ebo reverence before the shrine of Charles' sublime manhood, his pure and noble principles and his grand intellect." She would better marry Augustus. The other men seem to have sense.

History gives an account of bow, many hundred of years ago, ladies devoted several hours to the arrangement of their hair. One can easily imagine, while gazing upon the portraits of court ladies and queens and seeing their elaborate coiffures, how much time could be given to the art. And yet ladies of the present day in order to have the services of certain hairdressers, will often have their hair dressed a whole day and night before they are ready to appear at a reception or ball, and many of them are known to sit bolstered up in bed, with head resting against the head-board of the bedstead, afraid to move or hardly to breathe for fear a lock or hair-pin might be disarranged.

The saddest story told yet about the mania for wearing birds in a female criminal's gist living in Philadelphia has been obliged to go into retirement to avoid seeing bonnets on which the head of one bird, the body of another and the tail of a third are put together, and are all decorated with beads. She says: "If my minister were to mount the pulpit in Indian war paint, I assure you it would look no more ridiculous to me than to see my neighbor in a front pew display on her head my favorite birds carolinensis with blue glass bangles on its wings. I received a lovesome shock which caused me a week's sickness, by the association of one bonnet of two birds which I knew were each other's natural enemies."

The hardworked expressman who handle so many trunks during the busy fall days might be glad to know the secret of two wealthy young ladies who traveled in Europe. With the aid of a single shawl-strap they evidenced all their baggage during a five months' tour into the head parcel, and always at table d'hote or in traveling, were particularly well dressed and presentable. Exactly how it was done it would take a lady to describe, but it was done, and the fact that the tour of Europe can be made by a lady, always well dressed, with the aid of only one shawl strap and a light hand bag, is worth knowing.

LOOK OUT FOR THE
NEW YORK WEEKLY

A DASHING STORY.

The admirers of "The Young Swordsman of Palmyra," "The Masked Detective," and "The Hebrew Hero," now have the opportunity of perusing the opening installment of another graphic and vigorous story from the same facile pen. It is entitled

GIPSY BLAIR;
Or,
THE WESTERN DETECTIVE.

By JUDSON R. TAYLOR,
Author of "THE INDIAN DETECTIVE," Etc., Etc.

The action is brisk and exciting, and described with such force and favor that the scenes become impressed upon the memory like the incidents of a startling and well-acted drama. The characters are skillfully drawn, and the leading ones are constantly engaged in a series of events so startling that the reader's attention is captivated, and he becomes entirely unconscious of everything but the dramatic exploits so graphically delineated.

Boys! look out for

"Gipsy Blair,"

IN THE

NEW YORK WEEKLY

now ready. It is one of Judson R. Taylor's best stories, and is full of spirited incidents.

FASHION NOTES.

Full trains are confined to full-dress receptions.

White silk evening toilettes are embroidered in silver.

The sleeves of house dresses are often puffed or plaited.

There are more short costumes and fewer trained dresses.

White undressed kid gloves that reach to the elbow are now worn by brides.

Demi trains are used for afternoon dresses at home, and for carriage wear.

Evening corsages are either Pompadour or heart-shape, both front and back.

Embroidered satins are imported by the yard to combine with plain satin de Lyon or silk.

Velvet ties, a new trimming, in velvet embroidered in open work, and when worn over white satin has a fine effect.

Cream white satin, threaded with golden threads to represent Marshal Neil roses and partly blown buds, are imported.

Jet galloon, fringe mixed with chenille, passementerie, beaded edges, and drop ornaments will all be worn again this winter.

Short dresses continue to be popular for the street and for all young girls; they bid fair to continue in fashion for some time to come.

Rouge Adrianople is the old Turkey-red color of years past, and is used for costumes, plain and figured, in yellow, black and blue.

Cotton Sicilienne is a very popular material, being almost as soft and glossy as silk. It is shown in all the new colors, plain and figured.

Fancy pocket handkerchiefs are a rage this season, and a lady's wardrobe is scarcely complete without a handkerchief to match each toilette.

There are quantities of finest jet trimmings, and there are fringes and fauchons of belted silk that are very effective on black bonnets for fall and winter.

A rich dress imported for the coming winter has a lavender-colored silk for the skirt, and is not trimmed, while the front is covered with gathered flounces of lavender gauze edged with white lace.

The handkerchief dresses will be worn in thick weather during the autumn and winter. Plain cloth dresses, especially those of plum-color, dark blue, and garnet brown, will be stylish also.

The picturesque dressing adopted by the bridesmaids at June weddings will be somewhat modified for the more stately autumn weddings, though some fanciful features will be retained.

The Madras plaids described for dress goods are shown in Surah handkerchiefs, in velvets, plush, and ribbon. The same gay plaids are most quantity blended, and are decidedly unique.

The event of the season will be the grand opening display of fashionable novelties by Weichelt & Ackerman next Tuesday, September 28. This house always make a grand display. This season they expect to combine every previous effort.

The new coats which ladies will wear in the intermediate season are not different in their general form from those which have preceded them; all are close-fitting, high and close out on the shoulder, and either double or single-breasted, as may be preferred.

It must not be supposed that the enormous variety of printed or brocaded, striped or plaid goods, which has been fabricated, has entirely taken the place of plain goods. The latter are never seen without the former, but in most instances they represent the principal part of the toilette.

The coiffure of the hair is not so low and flat as it was last winter. To be more exact, we should add that there is no longer any uniformity in the coiffure. On this point, too, fashion relapses into itself from time to time, and grows more and more individual, and consequently variety.

There is a tendency toward making sleeves much wider at the wrist than the coat sleeves now worn; for instance, there are the new Oriental sleeves, nearly half a yard wide, with the seam inside the arm turned back to the bend of the arm, and displaying the inside lining of bright red or yellow Surah.

Smoothly fitted dresses will be made entirely of one material, either plain satin, brocade, or velvet, and their style will depend upon their fine fit, artistic color, and rich material. Black velvet dresses, also those of black satin, made in this way, will have the merest edging of jet or of gilt embroidery, on tulle for trimming.

Very little jewelry is worn by bridesmaids; the pendant or brooch, small earrings, dog collar necklace, and slender bracelets, are of the least obtrusive designs, and are usually either pearls, turquoles, or pink coral. Black satin slippers are worn by bridesmaids, and indeed are adopted with many light full-dress toilettes.

Bonnets will be chosen with regard to the dress with which they are to be worn. Brides who limit themselves to two bonnets select a white bonnet for dress occasions, and a black bonnet with jet and gilt embroidery and rich plumage to wear with various suits. A round hat of furry beaver, or else a small plush bonnet, is preferred to wear with cloth traveling dresses.

Scarcely any face trimming is found inside French bonnets, as a fleecy plush lining is more becoming. This lining is often in contrast with the outside of the bonnet. Strings are on all bonnets, and the fancy for a "border" finish is so great that honnet strings of satin Surah have a wide border of plush across the end. Plush strings are lined with Surah.

French manufacturers have given variety to the embroidery or handkerchief patterns so popular during the summer for gingham dresses, and have introduced them for autumn and winter. They have woven the finest wool and silk mixtures into squares, like handkerchiefs, with the centre plain or in small checks, while the border is of the gayest Madras plaids.

Small bonnets and large round hats are displayed for autumn and winter. The bonnets are small capote shapes, with the front slightly rolled backward or projecting on top, yet very close on the sides. The crowns are stiff, and of medium size, with or without a curtain band. These, as well as most round hats, will be worn quite far back on the head, and are trimmed with strings.

Satin of rich quality is now most often chosen for wedding dresses, with softer satin de Lyon, or the still more pliable satin merveilleux for drapery. Brocaded satin and velvet brocades of creamy whiteness are used when combinations are liked in the wedding toilette: but plain satin is the traditional fabric for wedding dresses, and is therefore preferred this season, when lustrous fabrics are the first choice.

The principal feature of new French millinery goods is the plush pile and fur-like finish given them. This is seen not only on the bonnets themselves, but on the fabrics for trimming. The unusual cold of the last winter in Paris is said to have suggested to manufacturers the propriety of introducing fleecy, warm-looking goods of all kinds, and the same cause has brought thick feathers into use, almost to the exclusion of artificial flowers.

Lavender, mauve, pearl-color, and the pink-ish-lilac tints are again revived for ceremonious toilettes, and are now especially liked as the principal evening dress—next after the wedding dress—in a bride's outfit; these shades have always been the first choice for the dress in which a mother accompanies her daughter to the altar. The brocaded satins in these shades have single large-detached flowers; there are also velvet flowers raised upon a lustrous satin surface.

Woolen goods, with a border for trimming woven along the selvedge, is another novelty imported for autumn and winter dress. These borders are three to five inches wide, and may be of the same color as the body of the goods, or in contrast, and are shown in Madras stripes and in rich gobelin tapestry designs, as well as simple brocaded patterns. The purple shades—plum, evegut, pruet, prune, and aubergine—are having very decided in such goods there is also bronze, bottle green, old red, and the various shades from peacock blue to the invisible blue-black.

Crushed.

A dashing young fellow was recently very attentive to a young lady who secretly did not favor his attentions, and who is blessed with an observing little brother of only a few summers' growth. The lady's amateur was visiting her a few days ago, when the little chap broke into their presence and, mounting the dashing young man's knee, said: "Haven't you got a fine room?" "O yes," proudly replied the dashing young fellow, whose vanity was evidently touched by the remark. Seeing, as he thought, in the circumstances an opportunity to make a favorable impression on the sister, he gave his moustache an extra twist, and reiterated his reply with emphasis: "O, yes, a very fine room." "I thought so," said the young hopeful, unsmilingly. "What made you think so?" said the young lady's admirer, rather curiously for him, and quite fully aroused. "Because," was the crushing reply, "Sister Mag said your room was better than your company."

He appeared to be almost gone. Rolling his eyes toward the partner of his bosom, he gasped, "Bury me 'neath the weeping willow, and plant a single white rose above my head." "Oh, it's no use," she snapped out. "Your nose would scorch the roots!" He got well.

If we would have powerful minds, we must think; if we would have faithful hearts, we must love; if we would have strong muscles, we must labor. These include all that is valuable in life.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,

That's to say, his teeth are neat,

And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be a sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, whet he or che thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

HAVERLY'S.—Rice's "New Evangeline" is at Haverly's.

PARK.—Miss Agnes Leonard is at Col. Sinn's this week.

NOVELTY.—Miss Maude Granger is the star at the Novelty.

WALLACK.—Mr. Lester Wallack is booked for a week at Colonel Sinn's. He will appear in his late success.

JEFFERSON.—Joseph Jefferson and his company are at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia. Mr. Jefferson's company is one of the best on the road.

UNIQUE.—Next week Anthony & Ellis' "Uncle Tom" Combination will present that popular play at the Novelty Theatre, with Miss Kate Partington as Topsy.

GRANGER.—Miss Maude Granger and a select company are presenting "Two Nights in Rome," at the Novelty this week. Miss Granger has made a hit in this play.

DALY.—Mr. Augustin Daly will open his theatre on Tuesday, 21st inst., with the new play entitled "Our First Families," written for his company by Edgar Fawcett.

SEASON.—The prospects for the theatrical season in this city are very encouraging to the managers, who have made great outlays to give the people the best entertainments of the day.

EVANGELINE.—This week Rice's Extravaganza Combination is presenting the "New Evangeline" at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. This popular company's seven Monday that fish week was last season.

LEONARD.—This week Colonel Sinn introduces, for the first time in this city, the well known English actress, Miss Agnes Leonard, who appears in the American drama entitled "Woman's Faith."

HAVERLY.—At Haverly's Fifth Avenue Theatre "The Tourists" are filling the last week; Fanny Davenport will follow; while the Haverly's English Opera Burlesque Company are doing well at the Fourteenth street house.

MAGNLEY.—Next week Mr. Benjamin Magnley, supported by a select company, will be at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre in the new comedy-drama, by John Habberton, author of Helen's Babies, entitled "Deacon Crankett." See the Deacon and laugh.

ANDERSON.—Miss Mary Anderson, the distinguished tragedienne of this country, will be at Col. Sinn's next week, where she will present "Romeo and Juliet," "Lady of Lyons," "Still Waters Run Deep," "Evadna," "Ingomar," "Love," "Hunchback," and "Pasio."

GOLDEN GAME.—Col. Sinn's "Golden Game" Combination is in Pittsburg this week, it will be in Washington, Sept. 20, at the National Theatre, and the following week in Baltimore, where George R. Edson is a big favorite. Success attend this enterprise, which throws credit on Brooklyn.

Politeness.

Very many parents who are polite and polished in their manners toward the world at large are perfect hoors inside the home circle. Who wonder if like cause and effect are the same? If a man should accidentally brush against another in the street, an apology would be sure to follow; but how often think is of offering an excuse to the little people whose rights are constantly being violated by their careless elders. If a stranger offer the slightest service, he is gratefully thanked; but who ever remembers to thus reward the little tireless feet that are traveling all day long up-stairs and down on countless errands for somebody? It would be policy for parents to treat their children politely for the sake of obtaining more cheerful obedience, if for no other reason.

WITTICISMS.

A man who has brains is under obligation to employ them.

There is nothing that will take the starch out of greatness like a diverse suit or a sensational breach of promise case.

A New Orleans minister described Heaven as an eternal picnic, and there is hardly a young man left in the church.

If your coat, as you say, shows a good development in the way of lumps, by all means make him a professional base ball player.

Old lady: "Ah, you bad boy, draggin' your little brother along like that; supposin' you was to kill him! Bad boy: "Don't care; got another indoors."

A male's head does not contain a brain cap ble of culture and refined rearing, but it is wonderful to what an extent the other end of the form can be reared.

It is useless for physicians to argue against short-breved dresses. The Constitution of the United States says: "The right to bear arms shall not be interfered with."

Miss Anna Dickinson says that some audiences are stone, others sponge, while a few resemble champagne, tea, cognac, or coffee. We'll take champagne in ours.

"I am inclined to believe," said a fop to a lady who had refused to sing, "you are fishing for compliments." "Oh, no," replied she, "I never fish in so shallow a stream."

Chicago has a natatorium on the lake shore where the females bathe. A St. Louis paper says the women are so homely that fish work five within three miles of the shore."

An Irishman who had jumped into the water to save a man from drowning, on receiving sixpence from the person as a reward for his services, looked first at the sixpence and then at him, and at last exclaimed. "I'm over-paid for the job."

A prominent Congressman took his daughter to task the other evening because she permitted her lover to stay a while after ten o'clock. "Le, pa," she said, "we were only holding a little extra session."

A native of the Emerald Isle was asked the other day how he could tell a man was drunk. "Faix," answered Pat, "I'd never be after saying a man was drunk at all, until I saw him try to light his pipe at a pump."

Are you aware that you breathe eighteen times a minute, and three thousand cubic feet, or about three hundred and seventy-five hogsheads of air per hour! Jimmy! what a horrible question to propound to a person who has been eating onions!

An Irishman was accused for stealing a handkerchief from a fellow traveler, but the owner, finding it, apologized to Pat, and said it was a mistake. "Arrah, my jewel," retorted Pat, "if it was a two-sided mistaker; you took me for a thief, and I took you for a gentleman."

"But you know, pa," said the farmer's daughter, when he spoke to her about the dishonesty of his neighbor's son, "you know, pa, that you want me to marry a man of culture." "So do I, my dear, so do I; and there's no better culture in the country than agriculture."

"I wish you would keep your mouth shut" exclaimed Hollemout, the dentist, suddenly losing patience with his patient's predilection to talk. "I wish I could," said the latter, suiting the action to the word. And then Hollemout thought him the best kind as to open it again long enough for him (Hollemout) to get his fingers out. You never do know how to please some men.

"Which," asks "Robin Adair," "is it proper to say: 'I met she and her mother,' or 'I met her and her mother'?" This is a very difficult question to answer. When we were young our scheme always was to have her give the old lady the slip somehow about two blocks before the appointed place was reached, so that we never met the mother, and it still looks as if that plan would be the most satisfactory.

The attraction for the week commencing Monday, September 27, will be

KATE CLAXTON,
in the
"TWO ORPHANS."

The St. John Sun of a recent date has the following: "As early as half-past seven o'clock last evening a large crowd of people had gathered at the doors of the Mechanics' Institute seeking admission to witness the performance of the "Two Orphans" by Kate Claxton's Combination. At eight o'clock, before the curtin was rung up, every seat in the gallery and parquette was filled, and when the piece opened there was not standing room in the building.

It has not been the good fortune of a St. John audience to witness such a performance for a number of years, and it is simply a question of taste if they ever did. From the first to the last the company held the wrapt attention of the immence audience, and at times the applause was deafening. Particularly in the last act was this the case where Pierre Frochard (Mr. Chas. A. Stevenson) defies his brother Jacques in his defence of the Two Orphans. At this point the enthusiasm of the audience knew no bounds, and the performers were compelled to await the cessation of the storm of applause. From beginning to end there was not the slightest hitch, and prompting was entirely unknow. Every actress and actor filled their parts so well that it would be impossible to particularize.

NOVELTY THEATRE

"Two Nights in Rome" is what is being rendered at the Novelty this week. The star is Miss Maude Granger, and the play is a good one. As Miss Granger is a great favorite at this house, seats should be looked after early. She is supported by the Messrs Harry Crisp, Charles Stanley, George Chephin, George S. Robinson, M. J. Jordan, George De Vere, J. W. Thorpe, Harry B Bull, M. B. Curtis, John Morgan, the Misses Laura Don, Katie Gilbert, Adelaide Thornton, and Genevieve Mills.

For the next bill Messrs. Theall & Williams will present to their patrons the Anthony & Ellis' "Uncle Tom" Combination, and, as Miss Kate Partington will assume the part of Topsy, full houses may be expected. This Company have won many praises for their fine performances.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

The management give for the first time this season, a week of burlesque, and, as it is by Rice's Extravaganza Combination, it will be sure to be of interest. As the "New Evangeline" will be rendered the attraction will be greater, for with such artists as Miss Jarbeau, Miss Lonie Searle, Mr. Geo. K. Fortescue, Miss Rose Dena, Miss Jennie Calef, Mr. Ed. Chapman, Mr. Chas. Groves, Mr. J. W. Ransone, Mr. Max Figman, Mr. Harry Hunter, Miss Pauline Hall, Mr. Geo. A. Schiller, Miss Annie Summerville, Jessie Calef, Ella Winner, Mr. R. M. Morse, Mr. Horace Frail, Miss Gertie Geery, Miss Mahde Turner, Nora Sigerman and some thirty others, an enjoyable performance is assured.

The next on the bill at this house will be Meade & Maginley's Combination, in the new comedy-drama of American life, entitled "Deacon Crankett."

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

This week Colonel Sinn presents, for the first time in this city, Miss Agnes Leonard, an English actress who, in the beautiful American drama, "Woman's Faith," for which he has made ample arrangements to render the play in good style. Miss Leonard has the support of Mr. Frank Weston, Mr. Edwin Varrey, Mr. T. C. Nichols, Mr. Oliver Wren, Mr. Ralph Delmore, Mr. Chas J. Fyffee, Mr. W. H. Hamilton, Mr. G. T Ulmer, Mr. E. C. Coyle, Lizzie May Ulmer and Mrs. J. W Benzone. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week the Colonel will present Miss Mary Anderson in the following plays: Monday, "Romeo and Juliet;" Tuesday, "Lady of Lyons;" Wednesday matinee, "Still Waters Run Deep;" Wednesday evening, "Evadne;" Thursday, "Ingomer;" Friday, "Love;" Saturday matinee, "Hunchback;" Saturday evening, "Pazio."

Satisfied.

She (bewitchingly): "Oh, I'm so glad you're going to see me to my carriage, Mr. Brown." He (flattered): "Indeed; and may I ask why?" She: "Oh, because the girls are so jealous, and I want to prove that I do not monopolize all the good-looking men." Brown satisfied, but not so happy as he expected to be.

Enjoy the present, whatever it may be, and be not solicitous for the future; for if you take your foot from the present standing and thrust it forward to hasten on events, you are in a restless condition; it is like refusing to quench your thirst by fearing you will want to drink next day. If to-morrow you should want, your sorrow would come time enough, though you do not hasten it; let your trouble tarry till its own day comes. Enjoy the blessings of today, and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly, for this day is ours.

An hour's industry will do more to beget cheerfulness, surprees evil humors, and retrieve your affairs, than a month's moaning.

To easiest way of making a tidy is to embroider or paint pretty designs on three strips of satin ribbon, and to fasten them together by sprays or clusters of flowers.

If you cannot embroider, you can do "cross stitch," if you have an eye for color. All that is required is bright silk and sufficient knowledge of the seamstress' art to push a needle in and out of a hand of woolen cloth. The stitches are taken haphazard and the ground is nearly covered.

Dr. Tanner says he got his idea of the life-sustaining qualities of water from observing the exhilerating effect of the soup at a church oyster supper in Michigan. After attending several such gatherings in different parts of the country he arrived at the conclusion that the master of gratifying the inner men is governed a good deal by imagination.

LOOK OUT FOR THE
NEW YORK WEEKLY

A DASHING STORY.

The admirers of "THE YOUNG SWORDSMAN OF PALMYRA," "THE MASKED DETECTIVE," and "THE HEBREW HERO," will next week have the opportunity of perusing the opening installment of another graphic and vigorous story from the same facile pen. It is entitled

GIPSY BLAIR;

OR,

THE WESTERN DETECTIVE.

By JUDSON R. TAYLOR,

Author of "THE INDIAN DETECTIVE," Etc., Etc.

The action is brisk and exciting, and described with such force and favor that the scenes become impressed upon the memory like the incidents of a startling and well-acted drama. The characters are skillfully drawn, and the leading ones are constantly engaged in a series of events so startling that the reader's attention is captivated, and he becomes entirely unconscious of everything but the dramatic exploits so graphically delineated.

Boys! look out for

"Gipsy Blair,"

IN THE

NEW YORK WEEKLY

now ready. It is one of JUDSON R. TAYLOR'S best stories, and is full of spirited incidents.

FASHION NOTES.

Gloves are longer and longer.

Plush will supersede felt for ladies' bonnets.

Red is the leading color for new fall goods.

Borders will be used on winter dresses.

Frosted silver balls are chosen for ear-rings.

Undressed kid and Saxony gloves are most worn.

A parasol of peacock's feathers is the latest novelty.

A cord with tassels is considered more stylish than a belt with woolen dresses.

Ten active hand-loom and checked wool are sold to make a traveling dress.

Borders in designs of Gobelin tapestry are woven in new dress goods for trimming.

Diamond ear-rings have covers of enameled gold to conceal them when worn in the daytime.

The richest silks imported are heavily twilled and lustrous, and are called Surah Duchesse.

Skirts of French dresses are fuller than they have been made at any time since short skirts were revived.

The corsages of new dresses are made with as few seams as possible, and are therefore of the simplest shapes.

The cloth dresses are shown in prune shades, with heliotrope Surah, silk, or satin of lighter shades for trimming.

At present gloves with four buttons are the shortest that are worn. For the evening the gloves should reach above the elbow.

Plush is used for collars and cuffs of misses' jackets, and for the small walking coats worn by children of two or three years of age.

For the winter, light cloth or plain cashmere will be combined with plain velvet, more frequently perhaps than with striped velvet.

For later in the season, cloth dresses are combined with striped velvet or plush, and there are velvet costumes of new and elegant designs.

Carriage cloaks are also shown made of India shawls, trimmed with fringes and passementeries that display every shade of the rich India embroidery of the shawl.

Surah is far from having had its day. Among materials in preparation for the winter, brocaded Surah, of one shade with two or more different colors, figures in the first rank.

The satin employed for draperies is very soft, and is called Surah satin, though its lustrous surface requires close observation to conceal the twills that are the special feature of Surah silks.

The earliest importations of French dresses are made up of short dresses for day wear, with very long trained skirts for calls, while the medium demi-train does not appear in the first invoices.

The first importations of French dresses for misses and small girls are cloth, cashmere, and handcrafted suits for general wear, with elaborately shirred satin, velvet, and plush draperies for their best dresses.

The Jersey jacket worn during the summer has given suggestions for some of the new features of cloth and camel's hair costumes, and in some suits the Jersey webbing, like stocking net, is used for the clinging waists or polonaise of such dresses.

English jackets of light colored cloths, with large plush collars, cuffs, and pockets, will be the first wraps worn when the cool days come. The large buttons, and the pretty linings of heliotrope, old gold, pink, pale blue, or cardinal Surah, are marked features of these jaunty jackets.

Fancy articles of jewelry which will be worn in the winter are belt buckles of all kinds, in the shape of bows, sharp-pointed lances, horseshoes, sword-belt plaques. For ornamenting bonnets there are palm leaves, wheat ears, and sprays with a bird or butterfly, all of gilt metal.

Shirred satin from the plastrons the whole length of the dress are the marked feature of the satin and velvet princesse dresses imported for very small girls. They come in pale blue, lavender, and cream colors, and have the deep collar plush or the shirred ruffle edged with white embroidery.

Very handsome dresses for the demi-season are shown of black Surah satin, trimmed with many pleatings of the same, much jet embroidered in bead, jet fringe, with facings and ballyseine flounces of heliotrope Surah. The moschoir costumes of medium weight of wool are for autumn wear, and are made in most houffatty les.

Black dresses are more than ever in fashion, and some of them will be of exceptional richness. Such, among others, are dresses of black crape or black tulle embroidered with gold, amber, and iridescent beads. These beads have a dazzling effect, heightened by the sombre background. The foundation of such dresses is always of black satin.

Very rich fabrics that give the greatest appearance of warmth are used, such as the polka-dotted velveted, brocaded velvet with large detached figures, and plush, with cloth for plainer costumes; the warmest colors also appear in abundance, especially in the accessories that form trimmings, though many beautiful costumes are shown in two tones of the same color, especially when heliotrope or other purples are employed. The dull copper reds are very stylish as an illumination for black; heliotrope and lavender are also effectively used with black.

When Girls Laugh.

As to laughing, says Mr Lehoncheve, how seldom, except on the stage, do we hear a really musical laugh. Some girls make dreadful grimaces when they laugh. A little education in the art would not make their laughter artificial, and they would surely enjoy it all the more if they could realize that they might indulge in mirth without making themselves look so very ugly as is occasionally the case. It runs in families sometimes to distort the countenance in laughter. I know a family who laugh a great deal. Their eyes always shut up when they do so, and it is the funniest thing when one dines with them and something amusing is said, to look round the table and see exactly the same distortion on every face. There is not an eye left in the family. Three sisters whom I know show quite half an inch of pale pink gum when they laugh. In their presence, like Wendell Holmes, one "never dast pretend he is funny as one can," for fear of seing this appalling triple of gums. A little training in childhood would make their laughter a pleasant thing to look at, for they have all pretty little square teeth, very white and even. "A good laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market," and I am sure a pretty one is worth a thousand.

A Mosquito Preventive.

A clergyman, on his way home to Baltimore from camp meeting, was detailing some incidents of camp life. Among others was one of an old couple who had supplied themselves with a bottle of pennyroyal oil, with which to keep off the mosquitoes. They extinguished their light and retired, forgetting the antidote. The mosquitoes were very bad, and after standing it as long as they could, the old lady got up, and, getting a well-filled ink-bottle instead of the oil, gave the old gentleman a thorough inbrisating with the liquid, face, hands and feet; she then annointed herself in a like manner. They again assayed to court the drowsy god, but could only get an occasional nap. Finally the old lady got up and struck a light. Giving a glance at the bed she had just left, she beheld to her horror a colored "pusson," as she supposed, stretched in the place of her spouse. She quietly got the poker and nearly beat the old fellow's brains out before discovering her mistake. Later on in the night we discovered the couple to be on board the boat with us, he with his head nearly as big as a hale of hay, and she caring for him with the greatest solicitude.

"Ah," said a skeptical collegian to an old Quaker, "I suppose you are one of those fanatics who believe the Bible?" Said the old man, "I do believe the Bible. Do you believe it?" "No; I can have no proof of its truth." "Thee, inquired the old man, "does thee believe in France?" "Yes, for though I have not seen it, I have seen those who have. Besides, there is pleaty of corroborative proof that such a country does exist." "Then thee will not believe anything thee nor others has not seen?" "No." "Did thee ever see thy own mother?" "No." "Ever see a man who did see them?" "No." "Does thee believe thee has any?" This last question put an end to the discussion.

The timid woman who sees a hurricane in every cloud no bigger than a man's hand, goes about greeting every male passenger with the query, "Be ye the captain?" At last Providence directs her to the right man. "Oh, captain, is there going to be a storm:" "I guess so," says the wicked captain, "looks kind of black over there." "Oh, captain, is there—is there any fear?" "Lots, ma'am," says the captain, winking to his subordinates; "lots of fear, but not a bit of danger." "Oh!"

The future is always fairy-land to the young. Life is like a beautiful and winding lane, on either side bright flowers, and beautiful butterflies, and tempting fruits, which we scarcely pause to admire and to taste, so eager are we to hasten to an opening which we imagine will be more beautiful still. But by degrees, as we advance, the trees grow bleak, and flowers and butterflies fall, the fruits disappear, and we find we have arrived to reach a desert waste.

The winds are responsible for many an unlucky blow.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results. It is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

WITTICISMS.

The man who never smelled powder is the fellow who never held his nose close to a woman's cheek.

"Mamma," said little Henry, putting his arm around his mother's neck and laying his cheek against hers, "will God wipe the tears away from my eyes, if I can't find you when I get into the New Jerusalem?"

"Will you have some strawberries?" asked a young lady of a guest. "Yes, madam, yes; I eat sixty-seven with enthusiasm." "Do you? Well, we haven't anything but cream and sugar for 'em this evening," said the matter-of-fact hostess.

"Where does God live, mamma?" she asked one evening, after saying her prayers. "He lives in heaven, my dear, in the celestial city, whose streets are paved with gold." "Oh, yes, I know that, mamma," she said, with great solemnity, "but what's his number?"

"Henrietta," said a landlady to her new girl, "when there's bad news, particularly private reflections, always let the boarders know it before dinner. It may seem strange to you, Henrietta, but such things make a great difference in the eating in the course of a year."

A Cockney inquired at the post office the other day for a letter for "Henery Hogden." He was told there was none. "Look 'ere," he replied, a little angry; "you've brazenined a 'ole letter for my name. It don't commence with a hatich; it begins with a 'on. Look in the 'ole that's got the 'o's."

A minister at a colored wedding who wished to be humorous, said: "On such occasions it is customery to kiss the bride, but on this occasion we will omit it." To which suggest remark the bridegroom pertinently replied: "On such occasions it is customary to pay the minister ten dollars, but in this case we will omit it."

A country boy, coming to school in the city for the first time, was asked by the teacher where South America was situated. He scratched his head and said: "Down in father's 'taty field." The teacher thereupon corrected him by telling where it was. He looked up with a bored face and exclaimed: "What yer asked me for ef yer knew yerself."

"I would announce to the congregation that probably by mistake, there was left at the meeting house this morning a small cotton umbrella, much damaged by time and tear, and of an exceedingly pale blue color: in the place whereof was taken a very large black silk umbrella of great beauty. Blunders of this sort, my brethren, are getting a little too common."

From Life.—A country paper prints this from real life: "Mother wants you to let her take your last calendar pattern, and be so kind as to fill this cup with yeast, and is your clock right and what time is it? and a little meal in this pan, and won't you write down your recipe for muffins? and please not let your fowls roost on our fence any more, 'cause dad says he'll shoot 'em."

A Russian nobleman lay on his deathbed. One of his curious fancies was to have his wife dress herself in her wedding dress and stand by his bedside. It was a very natural bit of sentiment, and in the course of an hour the beautiful woman stood by his side arrayed in the garments of twenty years ago. "Ah," he sighed, "you look so beautiful in that dress that I hoped when the angel came he might take a fancy to you and carry you off instead of me."

She was a little girl who was not fond of her arithmetic. She took it into her head to read the Bible, and beginning with the account of the creation, she got along very well for a while, but suddenly threw the book down, saying: "There, I don't want to read any more of it." "Why, what's the matter," asked her mamma. "Because they had to study arithmetic there," was the reply. "Just hear this: And the Lord commanded them to multiply on the face of the earth." And there was no more Bible for her.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

Romance and romantic is the order this week at Theall & Williams' Novelty Theatre, as Miss Annie Pixley and her excellent Company are presenting the beautiful American play of "M'Liss, or Child of the Sierras." This drama has been one of the successes of the season, and Miss Pixley has become famous for her fine acting. She is supported by Messrs. J. E. McDonough, Robert Fulford, W. T. Johnson, Frank Kilday, Benj. G. Rogers, Murray Woods, Harry Murphy, Thomas Coleman, Chas. Martin, Rob Hays, James Roache, Miss Marion and Miss Alice Gray.

Next week the Management will present Mr. John T. Raymond in Mark Twain's popular play, "Col. Sellers," (there's millions in it). Millions have witnessed it and and are always glad to see Mr. Raymond in it again, for it is different from the ordinary run of plays; his Col. Sellers is John T. Raymond and John T. Raymond is Col. Sellers. See him, and you will never forget his "tumipse" or vigie water."

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

Opera burlesque is the order this week at Colonel Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre, and by the charming Colville Company, who are always at the head of that line of amusement. Among this large company is Miss Ema Roncah, Miss Kate Everleigh, Miss Ella Chapman, Mr. Roland Reed, Mr. Ed. Chapman, Mr. A. W Maflin and several others. They will appear on Monday and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday matinee in "The Magic Slipper," Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Saturday matinee, (ill treated) "Il Trovatore," Friday evening, benefit of Miss Ema Roncah, "Oxygen, or Gas in Burlesque Metre," and first act of "Il Trovatore."

For next week Colonel Sinn will give his patrons a change, as he will present Tony Pastor and his great Variety Troupe, containing the leading lights of that lively profession. As Tony Pastor comes here seldom, it will be well to secure your seats early.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

For the first time in some years we have the charming little actress, Miss Lotta, who appears at Haverly's Theatre in "The Little Detective," which will be presented all the week, except at the matinee, when she will present "Musette, or Little Bright Eyes." Lotta has always been a welcomed guest in this city. She has the support of the following well-known artists: Messrs. F. A. Anderson, C. Bainbridge, W. Wallis, Ed. Marble, Fred. Percy, H. B. Bradley, C. W. Parker, P. Cook, G. White, Mrs. Boniface, Miss Julia Hanchett and Miss Luin Jordan.

Miss Lotta and her Company will remain all next week and will present "Zip; or, Point Lynde Light."

Miss Annie Pixley and Company will follow Lotta in the beautiful American romantic drama of "M'Liss, or Child of the Sierras," for which the Management are getting up elegant scenery of that wonderful section.

Weddings.

"It is a solemn thing in matrimony—a very solemn thing—when the minister comes into the chancery with his surplice on, and goes through the ceremony of making them man and wife. It ought to be husband and wife, for it isn't every husband that turns out to be a man. I declare I never shall forget when Paul put the nuptial ring on my finger and said 'with my goods I thee endow.' He used to keep a dry goods store then, and I thought he was going to give me all there was in it. I was young and simple, and didn't know till after ward that it meant one calico gown a year. It is a lovely sight to see young people 'blighting the trough,' as the song says, and coming up to consume their vows." Isn't that poetical and sublime!"

"Married Life."

The Gilbert Dramatic Association gave its sixth and closing performance of this season on Thursday evening, April 22nd, at the Academy of Music, on which occasion Mr. John B. Buckstone's comedy of "Married Life" was played in a manner that would have done credit to professionals. The audience was one of the largest and most fashionable that has ever been seen in the Academy. Mr. John W. Noble and the Misses Julia W. Reid and Edith Kingdon carried off the honors of the evening. The stage was arranged very handsomely under the management of Mr. Norman Campbell. The orchestra under the direction of Mr. Geo. W. Whitworth, gave some very fine selections. A reception held in the Assembly Rooms, was attended by the members and a few invited guests, who enjoyed the dancing until a late hour. Most of the ladies appeared in full dress. This Association has met with grand success for its first season, and intend in future to give all its performances at the Academy of Music.

Subjects for Thought.

The rays of happiness, like those of light, are colorless when unbroken.

Anger and jealousy can no more bear to lose sight of their objects than love.

Return equity and justice for evil done to you, and pay goodness by goodness.

He is not only idle who does nothing, but he is idle who might be better employed.

It is a good thing to hope; but he who does nothing but hope is in a very helpless way.

The great thing in the voyage of life is not what we take on, but what we throw overboard.

We are all bunters in the field of life. Some of us bring down our game; but most of us end in a wild goose chase.

If all men were to bring their misfortunes together in one place, most would be glad to take his own home again, rather than take a portion out of the common stock.

What You Do, Do Well.—If a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth while to do it well. Yet the world is full of work badly done and half done. There is always bad policy to do work in a poor, half-hearted and slovenly fashion.

Death is the wish of some, the relief of many, and the end of all. It sets the slave at liberty, carries the banished man home, and places all men on the same level, insomuch, that life itself would be a punishment without it.

A kind heart is better than a pretty face, for age freshens rather than fades it. No person are so much beloved, or so "good-looking" in the eyes of their friends, as those in whom the traits of benevolence and sympathy are active at all periods of life.

The greatest man is he who chooses right with the most invincible resolution; who resists the surest temptation from within and without; who bears the heaviest burden cheerfully; who is calmest in storms and more fearless under menaces and frowns.

Many of the blessings universally desired are frequently wanted, because most men, when they should labor, content themselves to complain; and rather linger in a state in which they cannot be at rest than improve their condition by vigor and resolution.

Never abandon your hopes. Hope is better than enjoyment. Hope is often the cause as well as the effort of youth. It is certainly a very pleasing and healthy passion. A hopeless person is deserted by himself; and he who forsakes himself is soon forsaken by friend and fortune.

Envy is an everlasting tenant in the breast of many a man. If another succeeds better than he does, he lays his misfortune to some one else, and attributes the success of his rival in trade to sheer luck. The truth is, a man shapes his own destiny, and places himself where he belongs.

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, or happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined, abominable to the good, insulting to those with whom we associate, degrading to the mind, unprofitable, needless, and injurious to society.

Cheerfulness.—It is a great misfortune to have a fretful disposition. It takes the fragrance out of one's life, and leaves only weeds where a cheerful disposition would cause flowers to grow. The habit of fretting is one that grows rapidly unless it be sternly repressed; and the best way to overcome it is to try always to look on the cheerful side of things.

Too Particular.—"What do you call that?" indignantly asked a customer at a cheap restaurant, pointing at an object that he had discovered in his plate of hash. "Why ireland with stewy-button attached, sir" said the waiter, blandly. "Well, do you consider that a proper thing for a man to find in his hash?" asked the customer, in wrath. "Good heavens, sir!" cried the waiter, "would you expect to find a sea dollar silk umbrella in a fifteen cent plate of hash."

Exciting Action & Startling Mystery.
One of the most fascinating, vigorous, and thrilling stories ever written is just commenced in
No. 26 of the New York Weekly, under the title of
FRITZ,
THE GERMAN DETECTIVE.
BY TONY PASTOR.
Author of "TOM AND JERRY," etc., etc.
So charmingly is this powerful story narrated, and so graphic are the stirring incidents, that the reader becomes inspired with the ardor which animates the trained detective, and in imagination follows every clew, weighs every circumstance bearing upon the case. In the opening chapter the author vividly pictures
A Strange and Startling Crime.
The events immediately following this dramatic incident are so at variance with all logical deductions, that we behold
A BEWILDERED DETECTIVE,
one moment ready to attest to the innocence of the maiden he has determined to protect, and the next instant implicitly believing himself to be A Clever Woman's Dupe.
It would be unfair to the author to give even a brief outline of the ingenious and mystifying plot which connects the numerous spirited incidents of this entrancing story. The reader is certain to pronounce it one of the best sensational stories ever written. Therefore at once avail yourself of the opportunity to enter the mazes of mystery and witness the strange exploits of

FASHION NOTES.

Very dark satin foulards are used for the street.

Purple and yellow flowers are also used together.

At the flower stores purple and yellow flowers are seen in great abundance.

The black-dotted satin is pretty for the basques of young ladies' evening dresses.

The claws of hawks form a striking feature in the trimmings upon some bonnets.

The tartrick and the cockade capes are seen on some of the new spring costumes.

The new shade in brown is exactly the color of old copper, and will be extensively used this season.

While the basque and trimmed skirt are the prevailing style, a great many polonaises are also used.

Japanese young girls gild their lips, a custom which has been overlooked in the rage for Japanese fashions.

For basques the surplice effects are very much used, and quite rival the Directoire styles in popularity.

Jewelry of California manufacture, made from quartz and mineral ores, mounted in solid gold, is new and odd.

Colored laces are conspicuous among the laces now this spring. Turkey red and yellow are the favorite colors.

White challis, white mohair, camel's hair, and Chudidah cloths are also used for summer dresses for the country.

Vests are not as much worn as they have lately been, but are sometimes seen with the shirred fronts of dresses.

Fewer flowers are seen than at any former season, the corsage bouquet being sufficient for most elaborate dresses.

The gold and silver laces follow closely the patterns of the Mechlin and torchon laces, and are neither pretty nor becoming.

Tassel fringes made of feathers are the new trimmings for front and side breadths of fat petticoats worn with court trains.

A stately dress of black China crape and satin has the basque and apron painted by hand to represent roses and foliage.

White silk fans covered with frills of white lace or muslin are made up in Japanese shapes, and are considered exceedingly pretty.

Another novelty is "tiger spotted" pongee—a genuine India pongee of ecru shades, with velvet raised spots of dark red or brown.

A novelty is the twilled silk, or rather foulard, of solid colors suitable for costumes, such as ganzes, pheasant brown, dark blue, and violet.

The favorite purple flowers are the heliotrope, lilacs, asters, and pansies, the latter being of mammoth size, many of them as large as a rose.

A great deal of beaded embroidery is used, sometimes the entire basque and apron being of white satin wrought with pearls, or black satin with jet.

There are also polka-dotted lavender and heliotrope silks of tain light quality that make pretty dresses when trimmed with creamy Langudoc lace.

Among the yellow flowers are artemisias, marigolds, sunflowers, and roses, buttercups were so much used last summer that they are not in favor now.

The plain colored French buntings that were so fashionable last summer are becoming the popular costumes for afternoons at home and at the watering place resorts.

Squares of silk India mull stamped on the edge with a vine of colored flowers and finished with a plaiting of Languedoc lace, are among the new-cut designs for neck wear.

The peacock blue shades in which much green enters are becoming to brunettes, especially when combined with figured cashmeres that have a great deal of old gold and red in them.

Heliotrope and creamy yellow are the shades seen in the richest toilettes. The fabrics are plain satin and brocades in large detached figures, both in brocaded satin and in Chambery gauze.

Little butterfly head-dresses of terry velvet softened by lace, are the prettiest things for ladies who do not want to indulge in elaborate hair-dressing, but wish to look pretty nevertheless.

Lace is employed in profusion, more especially the Languedoc and Breton laces, that are not expensive, yet are effective for pleated flounces, and in the barbes now used for draping the corsage.

Brocades, satin de Lyon, and foulards were used for the demi-trained carriage dresses shown at the spring openings, while plainer woolen fabrics were employed for short dresses to be worn in the street.

Cashmeres in the new heliotrope shades, in which a grey tinge prevails, are also made up in conjunction with summer foulards; indeed, this latter fabric rivals the brilliant red satin for illuminating dresses.

Summer silks are not entirely superseded by the foulards and pongees, but the grisaille effects, and those of black striped with white, are given up for grayer colors, and for the loosely woven Louisine silks.

Many of the new parasols are heavily embroidered with the Persian colors, intermixed with gold and silver threads over their entire surface, while others have a wide band of these colors, and others still a vine of flowers and foliage.

The short full skirts which the dressmakers are trying to persuade women to wear, with coats, are anything but pretty, and are only becoming to extremely slender persons. They are very warm and heavy even when untrimmed.

The princess robe still obtains, and especially with ladies of fine figure, but the basque waist in more frequent, and the drapery of the skirt is more pronounce in effect than is generally seen in confections that carry out the distinctive idea in the princesse gown.

Evening dresses for young ladies are of satin de Lyons or satin sublime, draped with damask grenadine, in cream-white and Isabella tint, trimmed with rich beaded fringe, and relieved by several narrow plaitings of amaranth red satin at the foot of the skirt.

Early in the season as it is for parasols, many new styles are shown in the large establishments. Among the handsomest are those in solid colors, on one side of which is a bunch of hand painted flowers. Ladies having a talent for painting buy the plain parasols and paint a bunch of their favorite flowers thereon.

Handsome carriage dresses are combinations of satin de Lyons in cauchman's drab or pearl-gray, and satin brocade of the ball pattern in black and Amaranth red. Silk-wrought Hamburg embroidery on lace, laid over red satin, enters into the composition of these costumes, and forms the revers appliances which finish the casaquin.

Cashmere embroidered robes are among the latest imported novelties, being elaborate hand or machine embroideries of grays, drabs, old gold and ivory, white, or a solid colored ground. Plaitings of cloth form the overdress to any plain colored skirt taste may suggest; sapphire blue, violet or satin forming an admirable contrast.

A Sad Death.

Last night a minister was summoned to the bedside of a dying man. The man who by gradually obeying the great summons stepped and groaned. The minister moved to the bedside and held the hand of the victim. The wife with grief, sank to the floor.

"My friend," said the minister, "you are a man whose prosperous condition in this life has allowed you much time for devotional exercises. Your dear little children, your wife informs me, are visiting relatives. They will not see their father die. How many children have you?"

"Thirteen," gasped the dying man.

"I had no idea that you had so many. Poor little ones. Your poor wife looks as though she will die. Judging from your number of children, I should think that you had been married more than once. How many wives has the good Lord granted you?"

"Fifteen," groaned the man.

"Surely not so many," said the minister. "Think of this matter seriously. How many times have you been married?"

"Fourteen," and the victim fell back exhausted.

"Are you willing to die?" asked the minister, after a pause.

"Move three up, six down and eight to the left."

"Are you prepared to shore the glorious territory of Abraham's bosom?"

"Move ten up."

"Have you made your peace with your Saviour?"

"Simplest thing in the world—move nine down."

"Take your mind from the confused arithmetic of the world and place it on heaven's holy algebra. Are you willing to stand before the great throne?"

"Three."

"Can you go fearlessly?"

"Eleven."

"After life's desperate struggle, what have you accomplished?"

"Fourteen, fifteen, fourteen," and the man was dead.

WITTICISMS.

The man who never smelled powder is the fellow who never held his nose close to a woman's cheek.

"Mamma," said little Henry, putting his arm around his mother's neck and laying his cheek against hers, "will God wipe the tears away from my eyes, if I can't find you when I get into the New Jerusalem?"

"Will you have some strawberries?" asked a young lady of a guest. "Yes, madam, yes; I eat strawberries with enthusiasm. "Do you? Well, we haven't anything but cream and sug ar for 'em this evening," said the matter-of-fact hostess.

"Where does God live, mamma?" she asked one evening, after saying her prayers. "He lives in heaven, my dear, in the celestial city, whose streets are paved with gold." "Oh, yes, I know that, mamma," she said, with great solemnity, "but what's his number?"

"Henrietta," said a landlady to her new girl, "when there's bad news, particularly private sufficiters, always let the boarders know it before dinner. It may seem strange to you, Henrietta, but such things make a great difference in the eating in the course of a year."

A Cockney inquired at the post office the other day for a letter for "Henery Higgins." He was told there was none. "Look 'ere," he replied, a little angry, "you've examined a wide letter for 'Iggins. He don't correspond with a hartist; he begins with a no. Look in the 'ole that's got the box."

A minister at a colored wedding who wished to be humorous, said: "On such occasions it is customary to kiss the bride, but on the occasion we will omit it." To which ingenium remark the brid groom pertinently replied: "On such occasions it is customary to pay the minister ten dollars, but in this case we will omit it."

A country boy, coming to school in the city for the first time, was asked by the teacher where South America was situated. He scratched his head and said: "Down in father's 'tato field." The teacher thereupon corrected him by telling where it was. He looked up with a broad grin and explained: "What yer asked me for ef yer knew yerself."

"I would announce to the congregation that probably by mistake, there was left at the meeting house this morning a small cotton umbrella, much damag-d by time and tear, and o! an exceedingly pale blue color; in the place whereof was taken a very large black silk umbrella of great beauty. Blunders of this sort, my brethren, are getting a little too common."

From Life.—A country paper prints this from real life: "Mother wants you to let her take your patchwork pattern, and be so kind as to fill this cup with yeast, and is your clock right and what time is it? and a little more in this pan, and won't you write down your recipe for muffins and please not let your cows roost on our fence any more, 'cause dad says he'll shoot 'em."

A Russian nobleman lay on his deathbed. One of his curious fancies was to have his wife array herself in her wedding dress and stand by his bedside. It was a very natural bit of sentiment, and in the course of an hour the beautiful woman stood by his side arrayed in the garments of twenty years ago. "Ah," he sighed, "you look so beautiful in that dress that I hoped when the angel came he might let a fancy to you and carry you off instead of me."

She was a little girl who was not fond of her arithmetic. She took it into her head to read the Bible, and beginning with the account of the creation, she got along very well for a while, but suddenly threw the book down, saying, "There, I don't want to read any more of it." "Why, what's the matter," asked her mamma. "Because they had to study arithmetic there," was the reply. "Just hear this: And the Lord commanded them to multiply on the face of the earth." And there was no more Bible for her.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

Opera burlesque is the order this week at Colonel Sinn's Brooklyn Park Theatre, and by the charming Colville Company, who are always at the head of that line of entertainment. Among this large company is Miss Emc Rosoan, Miss Kate Everleigh, Miss Ella Chapman, Mr. Roland Reed, Mr. Ed. Chapman, Mr. A. W Mellin and several others. They will appear on Monday and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday matinee in "The Magic Slipper," Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Saturday matinee, (ill treated) "Il Trovatore," Friday evening, benefit of Miss Rosean, "Oxygen, or Gas in Burlesque Metre," and first act of "Il Trovatore."

For next week Colonel Sinn will give his patrons a change, as he will present Tony Pastor and his great Variety Tronpe, containing the leading lights of that lively profession. As Tony Pastor comes here seldom, it will be well to secure your seats early.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

For the first time in some years we have the charming little actress, Miss Lotta, who appears at Haverly's Theatre in "The Little Detective," which will be the attraction this week, except at the Saturday matinee, when she will present "Musette, or Little Bright Eyes." Lotta has always been a welcomed guest in this city. She has the support of the following well-known artists: Messrs. F. A. Anderson, C. Bainbridge, W. H. Wallis, Ed. Marble, Fred. Percy, H. B. Bradley, C. Parker, E. Cook, G. White, Mrs. Boniface, Miss Julia Hanchett and Miss Luln Jordan.

Miss Lotta and her Company will remain all next week and will present "Zip; or, Point Lynde Light."

Miss Annie Fixley and Company will follow Lotta in the beautiful American romantic drama of "M'Liss, or Child of the Sierras," for which the Management are getting up elegant scenery of that wonderful section.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

Romance and romantic is the order this week at Theall & Williams' Novelty Theatre, as Miss Annie Fixley and her excellent Company are presenting the beautiful American play of "M'Liss, or Child of the Sierras." This drama has been one of the successes of the season, and Miss Fixley has become famous for her fine acting. She is supported by Messrs. J. E. McDonough, Robert Fulford, Wm. T. Johnson, Frank Kilday, Benj. G. Rogers, Murray Woods, Harry Murphy, Thomas Colman, Chas. Martin, Rob Hays, James Rosche, Miss Marion and Miss Alice Grey.

Next week the Management will present Mr. John T. Raymond in Mark Twain's popular play, "Col. Sellers," (there's millions in it). Millions have witnessed it and and are always glad to see Mr. Raymond in it again, for it is different from the ordinary run of plays; his Col. Sellers in John T. Raymond and John T. Raymond is Col. Sellers. See him, and you will never forget his "turnips" or "eye water."

Weddings.

"It is a solemn thing in matrimony—a very solemn thing—when the minister comes into the chancery with his surplice on, and goes through the ceremony of making them man and wife. It ought to be husband and wife, for it isn't every husband that turns out to be a man. I declare I never shall forget when Paul put the nuptial ring on my finger and said 'with my goods I thee endow.' He used to keep a dry goods store then, and I thought he was going to give me all there was in it. It was young and simple, and didn't know till after word that it meant one calico gown a year. It is a lovely sight to see young people 'blighting the trough,' as the song says, and coming up to consume their vows." Isn't that poetical and sublime!"

"Married Life"

The Gilbert Dramatic Association gave its sixth and closing performance of this season on Thursday evening, April 22nd, at the Academy of Music, on which occasion Mr. John R. Beckstone's comedy of "Married Life" was played in a manner that would have done credit to professionals. The audience was one of the largest and most fashionable that has ever been seen in the Academy. Mr. John W. Noble and the Misses Julia W. Reid and Edith Kingdon carried off the honors of the evening. The stage was arranged very handsomely under the management of Mr. Norman Campbell. The orchestra under the direction of Mr. Geo. W. Whitworth, gave some very fine selections. A reception, held in the Assembly Rooms, was attended by the members and a few invited guests, who enjoyed the dancing until a late hour. Most of the ladies appeared in full dress. This Association has met with great success for its first season, and intend in future to give all its performances at the Academy of Music.

Subjects for Thought.

The rays of happiness, like those of light, are colorless when unbroken.

Anger and jealousy can no more bear to lose sight of their objects than love.

Return equity and justice for evil done to you, and pay goodness by goodness.

He is not only idle who does nothing, but he is idle who might be better employed.

It is a good thing to hope: but he who does nothing but hope is in a very helpless way.

The great thing in the voyage of life is not what we take on, but what we throw overboard.

We are all hunters in the field of life. Some of us bring down our game; but most of us only bring home chaff.

If all men were to bring their misfortunes together into one place, most would be glad to take his own home again, rather than take a portion out of the common stock.

What You Do, Do Well.—If a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth while to do it well. Yet the world is full of work half done, and half done. It is always bad policy to do work in a hurry, and unskilfully and slovenly fashion.

Death is the wish of some, the relief of many, and the end of all. It sets the slave at liberty, carries the banished man home, and places all men on the same level, inasmuch that life itself would be a punishment without it.

A kind heart is better than a pretty face, for age freshens rather than fades it. No person is so much beloved, or so "good-looking" in the eyes of their friends, as those in whom the traits of benevolence and sympathy are active at all periods of life.

The greatest man is he who chooses right with the most invincible resolution, who resists the sorest temptation from within and without; who hears the heaviest burden cheerfully: who is calmest in storms and more fearless under menaces and frowns.

Many of the blessings universally desired are frequently wanted, because most men, when they should labor, content themselves to complain; and rather linger in a state in which they could best relish improves their condition by vigor and resolution.

Never abandon your hopes. Hope is better than enjoyment. Hope is often the cause as well as the effect of youth. It is certainly a very pleasing and healthy passion. A hopeless person is deserted by himself; and he who forsakes himself is soon forsaken by friend and fortune.

Envy is an everlasting tenant in the breast of many a man. If another succeeds better than he does, he lays his misfortune to some one else, and attributes the success of his rival in trade to sheer luck. The truth is, a man shapes his own destiny, and places himself where he belongs.

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, or happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined, abominable to the good, insulting to those with whom we associate, degrading to the mind, unprofitable, needless, and injurious to society.

Cheerfulness.—It is a great misfortune to have a fretful disposition. It takes the fragrance out of one's life, and leaves only weeds where a cheerful disposition would cause flowers to bloom. The habit of fretting is one that grows rapidly unless it be sternly repressed, and the best way to overcome it is to try always to look on the cheerful side of things.

Too Particular.—"What do you call that?" indignantly asked a customer at a cheap restaurant, pointing at an object that he had discovered to his plate of hash. "Why'stisband with sleeve button attached, sir," said the waiter, briskly. "Well, do you consider that a proper thing for a man to find in his hash?" asked the customer, in wrath. "Good heavens sir!" cried the waiter, "would you expect to find a tea dollar silk umbrella in a fifteen cent plate of hash."

Exciting Action & Startling Mystery.

One of the most fascinating, vigorous, and thrilling stories ever written is just commenced in
No 26 of the New York Weekly,
under the title of
FRITZ,
THE GERMAN DETECTIVE.
BY TONY PASTOR.
Author of "TOM AND JERRY," etc., etc.

So charmingly is this powerful story narrated, and so graphic are the stirring incidents, that the reader becomes inspired with the ardor which animates the trained detective, and in imagination follows every clew, weighs every circumstance bearing upon the case. In the opening chapter the author vividly pictures

A STRANGE AND STARTLING CRIME.

The events immediately following this dramatic incident are so at variance with all logical deductions, that we behold

A BEWILDERED DETECTIVE.

one moment ready to attest to the innocence of the maiden he has determined to protect, and the next instant implicity believing himself to be

A Clever Woman's Dupe.

It would be unfair to the author to give even a brief outline of the ingenious and mystifying plot which connects the numerous spirited incidents of this entracing story. The reader is certain to pronounce it one of the best sensational stories ever written. Therefore at once avail yourself of the opportunity to enter the mazes of mystery and witness the strange exploits of

FASHION NOTES.

Very dark satin foulards are used for the street.

Purple and yellow flowers are also used together.

At the flower stores purple and yellow flowers are seen in great abundance.

Polka-dotted satin is pretty for the basques of young ladies' evening dresses.

The claws of hawks form a striking feature in the trimmings upon some bonnets.

The Carrick and the coachman's capes are seen on some of the new spring costumes.

The new shade in brown is exactly the color of old copper, and will be extensively used this season.

While the basque and trimmed skirt are the prevailing style, a great many polonaises are also used.

Japanese young girls gild their lips, a custom which has been overlooked in the rage for Japanese fashions.

For basques the surplice effects are very much used, and quite rival the Directoire styles in popularity.

Jewelry of California manufacture, made from quartz and mineral ores, mounted in solid gold, is new and odd.

Colored laces are conspicuous among the laces for this spring. Ecru, Turkey red and yellow are the favorite colors.

White challis, white mohair, camel's-hair and Canadian cloths are also used for summer dresses for the country.

Vests are not as much worn as they have lately been, but are sometimes seen with the shirred fronts of dresses.

Fewer flowers are seen than at any former season, the corsage bouquet being sufficient for the most elaborate dresses.

The gold and silver laces follow closely the patterns of the Medicis and torchon laces, and are neither pretty nor becoming.

Tassel fringes made of feathers are the new trimmings for front and side breadths of flat petticoats worn with court trains.

A stately dress of black China crape and satin has the basque and apron painted by hand and represent roses and foliage.

White silk fans covered with frills of white lace or muslin are made up in Japanese shapes, and are considered exceedingly pretty.

Another novelty is "tiger spotted" pongee—a genuine India pongee of ecru shades, with velvet spots of dark red or brown.

A novelty is the twilled silk, or rather foulard, of solid colors suitable for costumes, such as garnet, pheasant brown, dark blue, and violet.

The favorite surplice flowers are the heliotrope, lilacs, asters, and pansies, the latter being of mammoth size, many of them as large as roses.

A great deal of beaded embroidery is used, sometimes the entire basque and apron being of white satin wrought with pearls, or black satin with jet.

There are also polka-dotted lavender and heliotrope silks of thin light quality that make pretty dresses when trimmed with creamy Languedoc lace.

Among the yellow flowers are artemisias, marigolds, sunflowers, and roses, buttercups were so much used last summer that they are not in favor now.

The plain colored French buntings that were so fashionable last summer are becoming the popular costumes for afternoons at home and at the watering place resorts.

Some of silk India mull, stamped on the edge with a vine of colored flowers and finished with a pinking of Languedoc lace, are among the newest designs for neck wear.

The peacock blue shades in which much green enters are becoming to brunettes, especially when combined with figured cashmeres that have a great deal of old gold and red in them.

Heliotrope and creamy yellow are the shades seen in the richest toilettes. The fabrics are plain satin and brocades in large detached figures, both in brocaded satin and in Chambery gauze.

Little butterfly head-dresses of terry velvet, softened by lace, are the prettiest things for ladies who do not want to indulge in elaborate hair-dressing, but wish to look pretty nevertheless.

Lace is employed in profusion, more especially the Languedoc and Breton laces, that are not expensive, yet are effective for pleated flounces, and in the barbes now used for draping the corsage.

Brocades, satin de Lyon, and foulards were used for the demi-trained carriage dresses shown at the spring openings, while plaines woolen fabrics were employed for short dresses to be worn in the street.

Cashmeres in the new heliotrope shades, in which a gray tinge prevails, are also made up in conjunction with summer foulards; indeed, this latter fabric rivals the brilliant red satin for illuminating dresses.

Summer silks are not entirely superseded by the foulards and pongees, but the grisellie effects, and those of black striped with white, are given up for graver colors, and for the loosely woven Louisine silks.

Many of the new parasols are heavily embroidered with the Persian colors, intermixed with gold and silver threads over their entire surface, while others have a wide band of these colors, and others still a vine of flowers and foliage.

The short full skirts which the dressmakers are trying to persuade women to wear, with coats, are anything but pretty, and are only becoming to extremely slender persons. They are very warm and heavy even when untrimmed.

The primrose robe still obtains, and especially with ladies of the figure, but the basque waist in more frequent, and the drapery of the skirt is more pronounce in effect than is generally seen in confections that carry out the distinctive idea in the princesse gown.

Evening dresses for young ladies are of satin de Lyons or satin sublime, draped with damask grenadine, in cream-white and Isabella tint, trimmed with rich beaded fringe, and relieved by several narrow pleadings of amaranth red satin at the foot of the skirt.

Early in the season as it is for parasols, many new styles are shown in the large establishments. Among the handsomest are those in solid colors, one side of which is a bunch of hand painted flowers. Ladies having a talent for painting buy the plain parasols and paint a bunch of their favorite flowers thereon.

Handsome carriage dresses are combinations of satin de Lyons in coachman's drab or pearl gray, and satin brocade of the ball pattern in black and Amaranth red. Silk-wrought Hamburg embroidery on lace, laid over red satin, enters into the composition of these costumes, and forms the revers appliances which finish the casaquin.

Cashmere embroidered robes are among the latest imported novelties, being elaborate hand in hand embroideries of grays, drabs, old gold and ivory, white, or a solid colored ground. These robes form the overdress to any plain colored skirt taste may suggest; sapphire blue, violet or satin forming an admirable contrast.

A Sad Death.

Last night a minister was summoned to the bedside of a dying man. The man who lay gradually ebbing the grave and passed and granted. The minister moved to the bedside and held the hand of the victim. The wife wild with grief, sank to the floor.

"My friend," said the minister, "you are a man whose prosperous continue in this life has allowed you much time for devotional exercises. Your dear little children, your wife informs me, are visiting relatives. They will not see their father die. How many children have you?"

"Thirteen," gasped the dying man.

"I had no idea that you had so many. Poor little ones. Your poor wife looks as though she will die. Judging from your number of children, I should think that you had been married more than once. How many wives has the good Lord granted you?"

"Fifteen," groaned the man.

"Surely not so many," said the minister. "Think of this matter seriously. How many times have you been married?"

"Fourteen," and the victim fell back exhausted.

"Are you willing to die?" asked the minister, after a pause.

"Move three np, six down and eight to the left."

"Are you prepared to share the glorious territory of Abraham's bosom?"

"More ten up,"

"Have you made your peace with your Saviour?"

"Simplest thing in the world—move nine down."

"Take your mind from the confused arithmetic of the world and place it on heaven's holy algebra. Are you willing to stand before the great throne?"

"Three."

"Can you go fearlessly?"

"Eleven."

"After life's desperate struggle, what have you accomplished?"

"Thirteen, fifteen, fourteen," and the man was dead.

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat,
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

"Well, doctor," inquired an anxious Troy husband, "and what do you think is the matter with my wife?" "Oh, nothing serious; probably a little humor of the blood." "No, that can't be, doctor, that can't be; she's been out of humor for ten days past."

WITTICISMS.

A hard kase—A Dutch cheese.

Second Sights—A pair of spectacles.

The beginning and end of a chicken's life—hatched.

When are gloves insulable? When they are kept on hand.

The difference between a sailor and a showman is that one likes a light-house while the other doesn't.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed a lady in a witness box, "how should I know anything about anything I don't know anything about!"

"I don't like that cat; it's got splinters in its feet," was the excuse of a four year-old for throwing a kitten away.

"Oh, yes, they have ribs enough," she replied, as she laid down a corset, "but they don't feel like a man's arm, and you don't look for 'em on Sunday nights."

Didn't I tell you to call me six o'clock this morning? Why did you disobey me, Joseph?" "If you please, sir, I was afraid you wouldn't like it. You were asleep."

When a young man, who earns his living by opening oysters and clams, is asked by his sweetheart's father what his business is, he says: "I am a conchologist, sir."

A young lady complained to her escort at the hotel that she had lost a fan and silver chain attached which he had given her. "Good gracious!" exclaimed the gentleman to a friend, "she has lost her presents of mind!"

A little girl was asked by her mother, on her return from church, how she liked the preacher. "Didn't like him at all," was the reply. "Why?" asked her mother. "Cause he preached till he made me sweepy, and then hollored so loud he wouldn't let me go to sleep.

A nervous Chicago man had a tooth pulled the other day, and as he came bounding out of the dentist's chair into a room where half a dozen other patients sat, he inspired them with terror by anxiously howling: "Am I all here? Will some one please take a census of me?"

A Lewiston pauper, living at the city almshouse, says an exchange, recently offered up the following prayer: "Oh Lord! bless the boss of this house; be with him daily, and with all his'n; but especially, O Lord! we ask thee to make different arrangements in that cook-room."

A widower, when showing a friend the cemetery urn in which reposed the mortal remains of his departed wife, let it fall. It broke and scattered the ashes over the carpet. He rang for a servant, and when she appeared said to her: "Jane, sweep up your mistress."

In the sweet, balmy, delicious happiness of love's first young dream, a youth will potently listen on cracking waistcoats for his girl, but on picking out the goodies as well. Two years after marriage he will not even let her have the nut-cracker until he is through. Girls, get married.

"Oh, my life, my love, my sweety, may Heaven's angels whisper golden words as they kiss your rosy cheeks!" wrote a lover to his sweetheart only six months ago; and now he wishes the angels would whisper to him how his breach of promise suit is likely to end, as his lawyer frankly says he can't tell.

When a woman gets a red spot on the end of her nose, the world charitably remarks that her blood is out of order, but just let that red spot appear on a man's nose, and every one will declare that they smell whiskey as soon as they get within twenty feet of him. "Jest generally true in both cases."

Little Frankie was undergoing the disagreeable operation of having his hair combed by his mother, and he grumbled at the maneuver. "Why, Frankie," said mamma, "you ought not to make such a fuss. I don't fuss and cry when my hair is combed." "Yes," replied the youthful party, "but your hair ain't hitched to your head."

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

For this week the Management of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre have the popular star, Miss Fanny Davenport, supported by her own excellent Company. Miss Davenport is quite n favorite in this city. She will appear during the week in the following well-known plays: Monday and Tuesday evenings and Saturday matinee, "The New Leah;" Wednesday matinee, "Divorce;" Wednesday and Thursday nights, "Cymbeline;" Friday night, "As You Like It;" and on Saturday night, (a double bill,) "Oliver Twist" and "London Assurance."

Next week will be one of joy to all the theatre-going people, for Mr. Denman Thompson (Uncle Josh) and Company will be at this house, appearing in the most popular play of the season, "Joshua Whitcomb," which Mr. Thompson has made famous all over this country. This will be his last appearance in this city for some years.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

This week at the Park Theatre is one of excellence, for Mr. John T. Raymond is the star; and as he has not been here for some years he will be all the more attractive, as he has always been a favorite. On this occasion he will give something new, appearing as Jehabed Crane in George F. Rowe's new comedy-drama, "Wolfert's Roost," on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, and for the remainder of the week he will assume his great character of Col. Sellers, which made his name a household word all over the land, for the millions say it.

The next attraction will be the eminent tragedian, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, who will present, for the first time here, his new and successful play, "Yorick's Love," which gives unqualified praise to his great powers as an actor. Mr. Barrett will appear during the week as Richelieu, Shylock, and David Garrick.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

For this week's attraction Messrs. Theall & Williams have the pleasure of introducing to their patrons the great actor, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, whose reputation as an actor is not surpassed in this country; and as his engagement is limited for one week, we hope none who love to see an actor act will miss the golden opportunity of hearing him. He will appear on Monday and Wednesday evenings and Saturday matinee in "Hamlet;" Tuesday and Thursday evenings, "Richelieu;" Wednesday matinee, "David Garrick;" Friday and Saturday evenings, "Merchant of Venice," and "David Garrick."

After Mr. Barrett there will be a week of fun, as Gus Williams will make his bow in "Our German Senator," which has carried Gus through the season as one of the lucky traveling stars. See him and get an idea of what a German can do in the Senate.

A Beautiful Sentiment.

Sorrow sobers us and makes the mind genial. And in sorrow we love and trust our friends more tenderly, and the dead become dearer to us. And just as the stars shine out in the night so there are blessed faces that look at us in our grief, though before their features were fading from our recollection. Suffering! Let no man dread it too much, because it is better for him, and will help to make him sure of being immortal. It is not in the bright happy days, but only in the solemn night, that other worlds are to be seen shining in the long, long distance. And it is in sorrow—the night of the soul—that we see the farthest, and know ourselves natives of infinity and sons and daughters of the Most High.

"What!" said an ancient Dutchman of a Mohawk Valley, when asked to contribute to a new lightning rod for the church, "von dink de Lord dunder his own house down!"

Subjects for Thought.

Better to think and not say than say and not think.

Make not thy friend too cheap to thee, nor thyself to thy friend.

The wisest of men is he who has the most complaisance for others.

Poverty is in want of much, but avarice demands everything it has not.

It is right to be contented with what we have, never with what we are.

Every man throws on to his surroundings the sunshine or the shadow that exists in his own soul.

It is unfair to say that a man does good deeds only for effect, merely because he does them with effect.

You may judge pretty well as to a woman's secret vice, by observing what she condemns most fiercely in others.

A man must have great self-control to do what is right, but he can do what is wrong by just letting himself alone.

An act by which we make one friend and one enemy is a losing game, because revenge is a much stronger principle than gratitude.

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will see the defect when the weaving of a lifetime is unrolled.

Do not be discouraged, though the brightest flowers may not always bloom in your pathway; though the sun, which, but short time ago shone with brilliancy upon you may now be obscured by dark clouds, still do not be discouraged.

Real Strength of Mind.—No man possesses real strength of mind, after having heard all that others have to say, resolve, and firmly resolve, what to do, and carry his resolution into effect. Take counsel of others; profit by their experience and wisdom, but, above all, take counsel with yourself; make up your own mind what to do in this world, and—do it.

We look forward to rest, to a life of ease, which to them means cessation from toil and from the cares of business. It is not work; it is ours, it is over exertion, it is ambition and desire after gain that brings worn and weary feelings. All of us in business in life; the sooner we get through with life the sooner we relinquish our possessions. The faster a man lives, the quicker he reaches the end of life.

Happiness is composed of small joys. Trample not under foot, then, the little pleasures which are scattered in the daily path, and which, in eager search after some grand joy, we are apt to overlook. Why should we always keep our eyes fixed on the bright distant horizon while there are so many lovely roses in the garden in which we are permitted to walk? The very ardor of our chase after happiness may be the reason that she so often eludes our grasp. We painfully strain after her when she has been graciously brought nigh unto us.

Enjoy the present, whatever it may be, and be not solicitous for the future; for if you take your fork from the present standing and thrust it forward to to-morrow's events, you are in a restless condition; it is like refusing to quench your thirst by tearing you will want to drink next day. If to-morrow you should want, your sorrow would come time enough, though you do not hasten it; let your trouble tarry till its own time comes. Enjoy the blessings of to-day, and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly, for this day is ours. We are dead to yesterday, and not yet born to to-morrow.

The tastes of our countrymen in furnishing their homes is improving every year. In the old countries, where, for thousands of years, the people have been furnishing their houses, and the artistic skill of their artisans has been taxed to produce new styles, which bear the affixes of the name of their production, it is to be expected; but a young country like ours might, without censure, lag behind in the shadow of such beautiful. But such is our progress that, nothing short of the most artistic, will suit the aesthetic tastes of our well-to-do people; and it is a fact, that even in far away villages, towns and cities there may be seen as elaborate, graceful and useful furniture as in the finest houses of the wealthiest furniture, and far in advance of the real styles of a few centuries back. Indeed, the styles of the beautiful and original manufactured itself in Boston, and other centres, and somewhere more so than in Brooklyn, the great suburban home for the wealthy mercantile and professional classes, who spare no expenses to render every thing about their home comfortable and even elegant. There is no city in the world, succesors to T. Brooks & Co., which has about it more fine, costly and tasteful furniture, supply artists and workmen to draft out and fashion, according to model or the taste of the purchasers, any articles needed in their line. Their warerooms are at the corner of Fulton and Lands streets, and are filled with the richest and most beautiful, and very moderate priced furniture, which is the pride of their records. tion has extended to New York, where they have one of the finest collections of new arrangements, including not only rooms, but the permanent fixtures of the building, and in every way in supplying the exacting demands of wealthy purchasers by the production of all styles of furniture which may be required for any house, and at prices very moderate. If our readers will call and examine their stock they will surely be suited in every respect.

"You must cultivate decision of character and learn to say "No," said a father to his son. Soon afterward, when the father told him so to chop wood, the boy said "No," with an emphasis that showed a remembrance of the lesson.

FASHION NOTES.

Grenadines with velvet ball spots or else brocaded satin balls are very stylish.

The beaded passementeries and fringe are the trimmings most used on mantles this season.

Brown grounds in tamise cloth are pretty for traveling suits. The entire suit is made of one fabric.

Velvet facings for brims of poke-bonnets find favor, but the pokes are of very small size, and are very slightly scooped in front.

Gay velvet facings for the brim, with long plumes sronnd the crown, remain the favorite trimmings for white chip Gainsborughs.

Polka dotted stuffs are imported this season, and manufacturers design them in quiet colors, with a view to replacing plain solid colors.

Dark yellow, red, and salmon are used on black lace, while heliotrope, pink, Isabelle yellow, and cream are the colors for light bonnets.

Levantine (which is soft swilled silk), lustrous satin, brocaded silk, satin foulard, coru pongee, are the fabrics most used for the outside of parss la.

A black brocaded satin surtout, lined with lavender satin, and worn over a full skirt of plain satin de Lyon makes a very rich costume for the street.

For millinery all flowers with yellow centres or yellow disks, including corage bouquete of a single open sunflower and the buds, are also fancy of of the season.

The day of the white chip bonnet is over, and the majority of women should rejoice, for it was ever an unbecoming affair and too frail to be of real service to be worn.

Leghorns and Tuscans and other old-fashioned straw bonnets remain the spring millinery, and in some instances are in shapes that recall the styles of half a century ago.

Many of the toilets worn by young ladies are very simply made. The pretty French waist, with a plastron puffed in the top and slurred to the end of the point, is a favorite style.

The newest fancy is to trim lace strings with pleated ruffles of lace and with appliqued ornaments of beads, such as palm leaves of jet or of iridescent beads, or clusters of jet.

New black net for bonnets has gilt threads outlining diemonds all through it, and is called Eugenie net, while square meshed net entirely of gilt threads are shown for trimmings.

A number of dresses for large dinner parties, the opera, or even for ball toilets, are made of transparent black tissues, embroidered all over. This style of toilet is generally very becoming.

Very handsome woolen damasks in plain colors are in large, ball patterns, one edge of the ball showing a satin cre-cent in shaded effect, and the body of the ball a seeded effect.

Gilt bands made of large beads that look like gold form the brim of many black bonnets, and these are used even with jetted lace, which finally proves to be the most popular of all the laces.

While Parisiennes wear turbanes further back than Americans do, they reverse this with all other shapes, especially with small cottage bonnets, and thus they dispense with all face trimming.

Spring cut of door jackets are made of light armure silk. Cream-white cloth jackets are very much the fashion. They are ornamented with silver or nickel buttons or prettily red ivory ones.

The most elegant grenadines are those embossed with velvet in arabesque, vermicelli, and plain leaf patterns of the color of the ground; these are especially handsome in black, or in cream or heliotrope colors.

A flash to dresses of all kinds that is as frequently seen as were white lace or muslin bal-ueuses last year is a narrow knife plaiting of dark red satin. It is put on all French dresses, no matter how light or how dark the material.

For spring walking bonnets in turban shape and for round hats are stiff feathers, mounted breast feathers and wings—that pass around the front and sides of the crown and entirely trim the hat in the way worn the past winter.

Frogs of India long sha-pes are now used for gentlemen's dressing-gowns, and for wrappers for invalids. The dark rich colors are chosen, and the cords and tassels are made to match. The lining is bright colored flannel, or else silk.

In new fringes which are not composed of beads, there is a back ground of soft twisted silk, and over this bangs a fringe of jets with satin balls. Some fringes have over the silk fringe a net-work of lustrous beads and handsome pendants to match.

On white chips or yellow Italian braids there is nothing more spring-like than the bunches of unblown blues with white flowers combined with them, and trimmings of soft Surah silk in the pinkish shades of heliotrope.

Another fancy of Parisian modistes, seen in the most elegant Tuscany braid or Leghorn bonnets, is a new arrangement of triple plumes, which consists in putting them erect on the lower part of the crown, curling upward close against it, and starting under a cluster of roses that are massed across the curtain band.

For driving in the Park in open carriages, for day receptions in the city, and for the pizzas at watering-place hotels, and garden parties in the summer, large round hats are shown in the Gainsborough shapes, with the soft wide brim turned up on the left side.

Black Directoire suits are very stylish, with facings of satin, either red, cream color or black, showing on the coat. Single breasted coats have the wide notched Directoire collar set on, while those with double breasts have it cut as part of the coat.

Laughter.

After all, what a capital, kindly, honest, jolly, glorious good thing a laugh is! What a social! What a diagnost! What a refresher! What an exoricer of evil spirits! Better than a walk before breakfast, or a nap after dinner. How it shuts the mouth of sadness, and opens the bow of kindness! Whether it discovers the gums of infancy or age, the grinders of folly or the pearls of beauty; whether it racks the sides or deforms the countenance of vulgarity, or deep lines the visage, or moistens the eye of refinement—in all its phases, and on all faces, comforting, relaxing, conversing, coovoising, throwing the human form into happy shaking and quaking of iodioop, and turning the human countenance into something appropriate to Billy Button's transformation, under every circumstance and everywhere a laugh is a glorious thing. Like "a thing of beauty" it is "a joy forever" There is no remorse in it. It leaves no sting e'oept in the sides, and that goes off. Even a single unsatisfactory laugh is a great affair to witness. But it is seldom single. It is more infectious than scarlet fever. You cannot help but contemplate a laugh. If there is one laughter and one wiocss, there forthwith are two laughters. And so on. The convulsion is propagated like sound. What a thing it is when it becomes epidemic!

Hold On.

Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to or are talking too much.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to steal, snatch, or do any improper act.

Hold on to your feet when you are on the point of kicking, running off from study, or pursuing the path of terror, shame or crime.

Hold on to your temper when you are excited, angry, or imposed upon, or others are angry with you.

Hold to your heart when evil associates seek your company, and invite you to join in their mirth, games and revelry.

Hold on to your good name at all times, for it is of more value than gold, high places of fashionable attire.

Hold on to the truth, for it will serve you well and do you good throughout eternity.

Hold on to virtue—it is a short but prize to you at all times and places.

Hold on to your good character, for it is, and ever will be, your wealth.

A Big Thing on Wheels.

The many business men of this and New York city have, during the past years, introduced many new and costly novelties to adver tise their various businesses, but there are none in either city who can outdo the President of the Brooklyn Furniture Company. His latest is now out in the shape of a large and perfect model of his buildings, (Nos. 500, 561 and 563 Fulton street,) on wheels, drawn by four magnificent gray horses, with red harness, decorated with gold mountings—the turnout costing over $5,000. It is so attractive that everybody stands and exclaims, "That's the best advertisement I have ever seen!"

Toys! Toys!

There is a pleasant place for these
Where friends may, if they please.
Their leisure and their cash,
Bestow.
'Tis called CRANDELL'S BAZAR.
And it stands like a star,
Nor need you travel far,
Should you call,
No. 7 Fulton street, cor. Fierrepont.

Or high or low, or rich or poor,
None would foul teeth or breath endure.
If they but knew how sure and swift
Was SOZODONT, that priceless gift,
In giving beauty, life and tone
To every charm the mouth can own.

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat,
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results. It is purely acicule in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

Mr. Joseph Murphy, the celebrated Irish comedian, and his excellent Company, in the well-known Irish drama, "Kerry Gow," is the attraction presented this week by Messrs. Theall & Williams at the Novelty Theatre. Mr. Murphy has made a splendid reputation in this play, and, on the whole, is one of the best Irish dramas of the season. Mr. Murphy's Company is composed of the following artists: Messrs. H. Rees Davis, A. A. Armstrong, Will A. Sauds, Hugh Fuller, J. F Traynor, Winston Murray, Luke Martin, John S. Murphy, R Honeywood, Miss M Lodnski Young, Miss Bell Dickson and Miss Charlene Wiedman.

Mr. Murphy will be followed by Miss Fanny Davenport in the beautiful play of "Pique," which has always been received by the public with great pleasure.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

Mr. John A. Stevens and his dramatic company will occupy the boards of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre this week in the well-known drama of "Unknown," which Mr. Stevens and his Company have made a profitable success. The Management of the house have set the play beautifully. The Company supporting Mr. Stevens consists of the following: Messrs. Wm. H. Bailey, W. H. Sontbard, Ralph Delmore, George R. Sprague, George F. Ketchum. Chas. B. Hawkins, Walter Lee, Arthur Williams, James Stinson, Miss Lottie Church, Miss Angie Griffiths, Miss Mamie Wilson, and Miss Louisa Gilman.

The next attraction will be the return of Salsbury's charming Troubadours in their pleasing entertainment, entitled "The Brook." In this new little play this Company give a performance that is entirely new and interesting. At their last appearance at this house they became great favorites, and their performance next week will be the last here for this season.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

The Management and the public were so much pleased with the production of Bronson Howard's play of "Wives" at the Park Theatre a few weeks ago that the constant demand of the latter to witness it again has induced Colonel Sinn to present it this week. The same heartfelt scenery is used, and Miss Adelaide Detchon assumes her original character of Agnes, supported by the popular comedian, Mr. George R. Edeson, John Sutherland, John C. Little, G. Gaston, J. Leslie Gossin, W. Davidge, Jr., Geo. Jordan, Jos. T. Leonard, W. Bronson, W. C. Johns, J. Peters, T. L. Josepha, Miss Pearl Eytinge, Miss Annie Edmondson and Mrs. J. E. Bronson.

Next week the great comedian, Mr. Jos. K. Emmet, will make his second appearance this season at this house, and will appear in his latest success, "Fritz in Ireland," which has been the greatest go of his "Fritzes." Mr. Emmet will have the support of his Company who have been playing with him all the season.

At the matinee on Wednesday, April 7th, Wallack's entire company will appear in the comedy of "Old Heads and Young Hearts."

Night brings out stars, as sorrow shows us truth. We never see the stars till we can see little or naught else, and so it is with truth.

They were seated at a late dinner when the door-bell rang, and the servant handed a card to Lavender's wife. "Why, good gracious, it's our minister, and I've been eating onions!" she exclaimed. "Never mind," said Lavender; "you needn't kiss him to-day."

THE

LANDLORD'S CRIME!

—OR,—

THE CURSE OF INNISFAIL.

A Thrilling Irish Story of To-Day.

BY JOHN E. BARRETT.

THE

LANDLORD'S CRIME

will be commenced in No. 22 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

In this powerful story the author portrays the evils of the rack-rent system, which has blighted Ireland and smitten her once happy-hearted peasantry with famine from

Meath to Mayo.

The struggles of the gallant people for freedom and their own firesides are graphically depicted, and the cause advocated by is pleaded in letters of fire.

The machinery by which hundreds of heartless evictions are cruelly carried out, at the instance of such stern landlords as is admirably illustrated, and the army of agents, bailiffs, process-servers, and Royal Irish Constabulary, by which these deeds are done, passes in vivid review before the reader.

The romance of Desmond's daughter, who is thwarted in love, while her lover is hunted to death's door by the unscrupulous land agent, is touchingly told, and a graphic picture drawn of landlorism stepping between Irish lovers and the altar to tear their plighted hearts apart.

THE VULTURE OF CONNEMARA,

Read the great story of

THE LANDLORD'S CRIME

FASHION NOTES.

Black Spanish lace scarfs are revived for wearing close about the throat like a muffler outside wraps.

For the street are square beaded collars either of jet or of rainbow beads, with a full fraise of black lace above them.

The Martha Washington caps with mob crown have large rosettes of silk notched in saw-teeth on the edges for trimming.

Embroidered black cashmere scarfs with fringe tied in the hems are shown in larger sizes than those imported last year.

Black satin de Lyon and camel's hair remain the favorite fabrics for dressy wraps for spring, and these retain the mantle shape.

Lilac, lavender, violet and strawberry milk are some of the low-toned delicate tints that prevail in millinery and dressy toilet materials.

Yellow is the predominating tint in millinery, and is associated with almost every color that the taste of the modiste can suggest or her patrons select.

For summer wraps there are small round pelerine capes made of many rows of pleated black thread lace, with jet insertion between the rows, and jet fringe on the edge.

There are also square neckerchiefs of India muslin hemmed all round with hem stitching, and ornamented in two of the corners with fanciful bars and squares of drawn-work.

The ladies will be pleased to know that the Spring Opening of Worth & Abraham will take place on Tuesday of this week, when the leading styles will be displayed to the public.

New collerettes of lace have a large square-cornered collar of lace turned over in the back, and above this is a frisio quite high about the neck, while in front is a large irregular bow in English point lace.

Jet passementerie, jet fringe, chenille, and pleated laces of various French and Spanish brands are most used for trimming black mantles, and occasionally the gay cashmere beads are used on black wraps.

For ladies whose complexions allow the use of a great deal of white muslin there are large wide scarfs of soft India muslin edged with lace, to be passed around the neck and tied outside the cloak in a great Directoire bow.

The new French breakfast caps are in most varied shapes. The Fanchon is again used, and is universally becoming. The novelty, however, is a muslin dragery at the back shaped like the Spanish veil, and with the ends crossing in front below the chin.

At an opening of spring dresses and suits given at the earliest season, the light drab mantles and scarfs are shown in great numbers, richly trimmed with braided designs, passementerie, beaded galloon, and fringes of the same shade as the camel's hair of the wrap.

China crape scarfs large enough for mantles are shown covered with embroidery. The paisley rose, cream, and blue are shown in these mantles, and the embroidery is in gay colors representing natural flowers and foliage done in the long stitches of India needle-work.

A stylish novelty is the black grenadine scarf mantle, with its Medicis ruffs of lace around the neck and about the shoulders; jet fringe edges the shell-like lace trimming of the waist-line behind, and the fronts have long pointed ends, and are tied at the waist in a bow of satin ribbon.

Spanish lace scarfs two and a half or three yards long and about a yard wide are imported to wear in the picturesque fashion of Spanish women. There are also small fichus of black Spanish lace, and many three-cornered wraps like small mantles, as well as the familiar three-cornered shawls of larger size.

Persian veiling is the novelty to be introduced for spring. This is black net of very fine quality, edged with Persian colors given by India embroidery, or else by rainbow beads. It is quite narrow, and is to be worn as a mask veil, or else as the long scarf veil that crosses behind the head, and is tied in a great bow under the chin.

At the earliest opening of spring dresses combinations are seen to remain in vogue, and the new fancies in costumes are shown. In French short suits for the street the triple vest is prettily illustrated in coat-like garments that are much longer behind than in front. The coat is usually of brocade, and the foundation of the skirt plain.

Among the pretty things for midsummer are round hats, scarf mantles, and fans of white muslin trimmed with lace. The hats are of most picturesque shapes with soft crowns, not lined, and indented brims shaped by wires and covered with open-work embroidery imitating the Irish point lace. A cluster of large flowers and a few knots of satin ribbon complete the trimming.

Indeed, it is the fashion of the moment to dress the neck a great deal both in the house and in the street, as is shown by the popularity of the Sarah Bernhardt frailes, Directoire bows, collarettes, fichus and scarfs. Brunettes and all ladies with shallow complexions use the ecru tint d muslins and laces that look as if they had been dipped in coffee, or else they confine themselves to the black neck wear that is always stylish, and nearly always becoming.

The new feather fan is in Spanish style, and consists of three very long and full ostrich feathers mounted in a slender fan and fastened by satin ribbon bows. Two pale blue plumes with one of rose color between them make a beautiful fan, and others are composed of two black feathers with a yellow one in the middle. They are worn wing-shelled from the waist by a chatelaine of satin ribbon of the most conspicuous color in the fan.

The white muslin mantle is in scarf shape, and is much larger than those worn last summer. It is shaped at the shoulders to make it fit properly, and the wide ends hang almost to the foot in front. It is trimmed with many rows of lace, either Languedoc or Breton, and is to be used as a street wrap at the watering-places. To accompany these is the sunfan, with long bamboo handle; this is really one of the spread parasol fans of small size covered with white silk or satin, over which is spread muslin and lace frills that are ornamented in the centre with a cluster of flowers and a bow of ribbon.

He Was a Carpenter.

"Are you a carpenter, sir?" asked a citizen of a man who was planing a board.

"Best carpenter you ever saw," was the quick answer, with emphasis on the last word.

The citizen winced slightly, and said: "A plane spoken man, too."

This caused the latter to open his eyes, and he said cautiously: "Excewse me, but I augur that no good can come from such talk. Ham'er right!"

The citizen moaned slightly and leaned up against a lamp-post for support, but came to the attack at last with, "I ax yer pardon, and chisel soon dispel all your words mallet me, so scratch awl you will on that."

The poor carpenter turned pale, and could only stammer, "come in and got a bit and brace us."

And they walked in and gonged the barkeeper for the drinks.

An Editor no Gentleman.

The editor of a certain paper strayed away from home recently, and on all routes was "passed free." Among his adventures he related the following:

While on board a splendid steamer he heard on his cabin green about twenty-four hours agreeable, and he repaired to a barber's shop on board to have it taken off. The fellow did it up in fine style. After he had combed and oiled his hair, brushed his clothes, and slicked him up in fine style, the editor felt gratified, and he pulled out a dime and offered it to the barber as a reward for his services, when the barber drew himself up with considerable pomposity and said:

"I understand that you is an editor."

"Well, what of that?"

"Because we never charge 'em, sir."

"But colored fellows tell me there are a great many editors traveling around now, and such liberality on your part will produce ruinous business."

"Oh, never mind," said the barber, "We makes it all off de gentlemens."

Not a Rich.

"Is your folks rich, Johnny?" said a small boy to a trim-looking urchin as they sat in the gloaming waiting to kill cats.

"Rich? Well, I guess not; do old man owns a dog, mother's got a silk dress, an' I got a rabbit. Is your folks wealthy?"

"No; we ain't got no dog or rabbit, but mother's got a silk dress."

"What did yer ask we for?"

"Cos mother says she thinks your folks is poor. She looked out on the clothes-line yesterday an' she only saw two shirts, an' a pair o' socks, an' a night-cap!"

The cat-killing was resumed.

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat.
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by numbers of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the fragrance which beautifies and preserves. Anyone who has used SOZODONT, or the other thinks of it, and the reply is strongly affirmative of its excellence. Druggists keep it.

THRALL.—Messrs. Thrall and Williams have for this week the splendid attraction of Mr. Joseph Murphy in his great Irish drama, "Kerry Gow." Now should go and see Mr. Murphy in this great character of Dan O'Hara.

HAVERLY.—The Management of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre have, for the first time in this city, the pleasure of presenting a splendid style the popular play, "Unknown," in which Mr. John A. Stevens and company have met with great success throughout the States during the season.

SINN.—Colonel Sinn has reproduced this week the beautiful play of "Wives," which made such a splendid impression at his house a few weeks ago. Miss Adelaide Detchon, Mr. George R. Edeson and all the popular favorites are in the cast. This play must be seen to be appreciated.

WEBB.—The celebrated tragic actress, Miss Genevieve Ward, who has created such a profound sensation in England, as Stephanie, in her play of "Forget-me Not," has entered into an engagement with Colonel W. E. Sinn, of the Brooklyn Park Theatre, and will make a tour of the United States next reason under his management, probably making her first appearance in this country at the Brooklyn Park Theatre.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

Mr. Joseph Murphy, the celebrated Irish comedian, and his excellent Company, in the well-known Irish drama, "Kerry Gow," is the attraction presented this week by Messrs. Theall & Williams at the Novelty Theatre. Mr. Murphy has made a splendid reputation in this play, and, on the whole, is one of the best Irish dramas of the season. Mr. Murphy's Company is composed of the following artists: Messrs. H. Rees Davis, A. A. Armstrong, Will A. Sauda, Hugh Fuller, J. F. Traynor, Winston Murray, Luke Martin, John S. Murphy, R. Honeywood, Miss M. Lodzaki Young, Miss Bell Dickson and Miss Charlene Wiedman.

Mr. Murphy will be followed by Miss Fanny Davenport in the beautiful play of "Pique," which has always been received by the public with great pleasure.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

Mr. John A. Stevens and his dramatic company will occupy the boards of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre this week in the well-known drama of "Unknown," which Mr. Stevens and his Company have made a profitable success. The Management of the house have set the play beautifully. The Company supporting Mr. Stevens consists of the following: Messrs. Wm. H. Bailey, W. H. Scothard, Ralph Delmore, George R. Sprague, George F. Ketchum, Chas. B. Hawkins, Walter Lee, Arthur Williams, James Stinson, Miss Lottie Church, Miss Angie Griffiths, Miss Mamie Wilson, and Miss Louise Gilman.

The next attraction will be the return of Salsbury's charming Troubadours in their pleasing entertainment, entitled "The Brook." In this neat little play this Company give a performance that is entirely new and interesting. At their last appearance at this house they became great favorites, and their performance next week will be the last here for this season.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

The Management and the public were so much pleased with the production of Frank Howard's play of "Wives" at the Park Theatre a few weeks ago that the constant demand of the latter to witness it again has induced Colonel Sinn to present it this week. The same beautiful scenery is used, and Miss Adelaide Detchon assumes her original character of Agnes, supported by the popular comedian, Mr. George R. Edeson, John Sutherland, John Z. Little, G. Gaston, J. Leslie Gossin, W. Davidge, Jr., Geo. Jordan, Jos. T. Leonard, W. Bronson, W. C. Johns, J. Peters, T. L. Josephs, Miss Pearl Etyinge, Miss Annie Edmondson and Mrs. J. F. Sutton.

Next week the great comedian, Mr Jos. K. Emmet, will make his second appearance this season at the house, and will appear in his latest success, "Fritz in Ireland," which has been the greatest go of his "Fritzes." Mr. Emmet will have the support of his Company who have been playing with him all the season.

At the matinee on Wednesday, April 7th, Wallack's entire company will appear in the comedy of "Old Heads and Young Hearts."

Night brings out stars, as sorrow shows us truth. We never see the stars till we can see little or naught else, and so it is with truth.

THE

LANDLORD'S CRIME!

—OR,—

THE CURSE OF INNISFAIL

A Thrilling Irish Story of To-Day.

BY JOHN E. BARRETT.

THE

LANDLORD'S CRIME

will be commenced in No. 22 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

In this powerful story the author portrays the evils of the rack-rent system, which has blighted Ireland and smitten her once happy-hearted peasantry with famine from

Meath to Mayo.

The struggles of the gallant people for freedom and their own firesides are graphically depicted, and the cause advocated by

is pleaded in letters of fire.

The machinery by which hundreds of heartless evictions are cruelly carried out, at the instance of such stern landlords as is admirably illustrated, and the army of agents, bailiffs, process-servers, and Royal Irish Constabulary, by which these deeds are done, passes in vivid review before the reader.

The romance of Desmond's daughter, who is thwarted in love, while her lover is hunted to death's door by the unscrupulous land agent, is touchingly told, and a graphic picture drawn of landlordism stepping between Irish lovers and the altar to tear their plighted hearts apart.

THE VULTURE OF CONNEMARA,

FASHION NOTES.

Black Spanish lace scarfs are revived for wearing close about the throat like a muffler outside wraps.

For the street are square beaded collars either of jet or of rainbow beads, with a full fraise of black lace above them.

The Martha Washington caps with mob crown have large rosettes of silk notched in saw-teeth on the edges for trimming.

Embroidered black cashmere scarfs with fringe tied in the hems are shown in larger size than those imported last year.

Black satin de Lyon and camel's-hair remain the favorite fabrics for dressy wraps for spring, and these retain the mantle shape.

Lilac, lavender, violet and strawberry milk are some of the tone-fused delicate tints that prevail in millinery and dressy toilet materials.

Yellow is the predominating tint in millinery, and is associated with almost every color that the fancy of the modiste can suggest or her patrons select.

For summer wraps there are small round pelerine capes made of many rows of pleated black thread lace, with jet insertion between the rows, and jet fringe on the edge.

There are also square neckerchiefs of India muslin hemmed all round with hem stitching, ornamented with rows of the same done with fanciful bars and squares of drawn-work.

The ladies will be pleased to know that the Spring Opening of Wechsler & Abraham will take place on Tuesday of this week, when the leading styles will be displayed to the public.

New collerettes of lace have a large square-cornered collar of lace turned over in the back, and above this is a fraise quite high about the neck, while in front is a large irregular bow in Directoire style.

Jet passementerie, jet fringe, chenille, and pleated laces of various Parisian and Spanish brands are most used for trimming black muslins, and occasionally the gay cashmere beads are used on black wraps.

For ladies whose complexions allow the use of a great deal of white muslin there are large wide scarfs of soft India muslin edged with lace, to be passed around the neck and tied outside the cloak in a great Directoire knot.

The new French breakfast caps are in most varied shapes. The Pamela is again used, and is universally becoming. The novelty, however, is a muslin drapery at the back shaped like the Spanish veil, and with the ends crossing in front below the chin.

At an opening of spring dresses and suits given at the earliest moment, the light drab mantles and scarfs are shown in great number, richly trimmed with beaded fringe, passementerie, beaded galloon, and fringes of the same shade as the camel's hair of the wrap.

China crape scarfs large enough for mantles are shown covered with embroidery. The paint rose, cream, and blue are shown in these mantles, and the embroidery is in gay colors representing natural flowers and foliage done in the long stitches of India needle-work.

A stylish novelty is the black grenadine scarf mantle, with its Medicis ruffs of lace around the neck and about the shoulders; jet fringe edges the shelving lace trimming at the waist-line behind, and the fronts have wide pointed ends, and are tied at the waist by a bow of satin ribbon.

Spanish lace scarfs two and a half or three yards long and about a yard wide are imported to wear in the picturesque fashions of Spanish women. There are also small flchus of black Spanish lace, and many three-cornered wraps like small mantles, as well as the familiar three-cornered shawls of larger size.

Persian veiling is the novelty to be introduced for spring. This is black net of very fine quality, edged with Persian colors given by India embroidery, or else by rainbow beads. It is quite narrow, and is to be worn as a mask veil, or else as the long scarf veil that crosses behind the head, and is tied in a great bow under the chin.

At the earliest opening of spring dresses combinations are seen to remain in vogue, and the new fancies in costumes are shown. In French short suits for the street the triple vest is prettily illustrated in coat-like garments that are much longer behind than in front. The coat is usually of brocade, and the foundation of the skirt plain.

Among the pretty things for midsummer are round hats, scarf mantles, and faus of white muslin trimmed with lace. The hats are of most picturesque shapes with soft crowns, not lined, and indented brims shaped by wires and covered with open-work embroidery, matching the full round faces. A cluster of large flowers and a few knots of satin ribbon complete the trimming.

Indeed, it is the fashion of the moment to dress the neck a great deal both in the house and in the street, as is shown by the popularity of the Sarah Bernhardt frafses, Directoire bows, collarettes, ficlus and scarfs. Brunettes and all ladies with shallow complexions use the ecru-tint of muslins and laces that look as if they had been dipped in coffee, or else they confine themselves to the black neck wear that is always stylish, and nearly always becoming.

The new feather fan is in Spanish style, and consists of three very long and full ostrich feathers mounted in a slender fan and fastened by satin ribbon bows. Two pale blue plumes with one of rose color between them make a beautiful fan, and others are composed of two black feathers with a yellow one in the middle. They are worn suspended from the waist by a chatelaine of satin ribbon of the most conspicuous color in the fan.

The white muslin mantle is in scarf shape, and is more than larger than those worn last summer. It is shaped at the shoulders to make it fit properly, and the wide ends hang almost to the foot in front. It is trimmed with many rows of lace, either Languedoc or Breton, and is to be used as a street wrap at the watering-places. To accompany these is the sunfan, with long bamboo handle; this is really one of the spread Japanese fans of small size covered with white silk or satin, over which is spread muslin and lace frills that are ornamented in the centre with a cluster of flowers and a bow of ribbon.

He Was a Carpenter.

"Are you a carpenter, sir?" asked a citizen of a man with a hod of brick.

"Best carpenter you ever saw," was the quick answer, with emphasis on the last word.

The citizen winced slightly, and said: "A plane spoken man, too."

This caused the other to open his eyes, and he said cautiously: "Excuse me, but I anger that no good can come from such talk. Hain't we right?"

The citizen stoned slightly and leaned up against a lamp-post for support, but came to the attack at last with: "I ax yer pardon, and chbiel sour drop this if your words mailet me, so scratch awi you will on that."

The carpenter slowly turned pale, and could only stammer, "come in and get a bit and brace up."

And they walked in and gouged the barkeeper for the drinks.

An Editor no Gentleman.

The editor of a certain paper strayed away from home recently, and on all routes was "passed for." Among his adventures he relates the following:

While on board a splendid steamer he heard on his chie grow rather longer than was agreeable, and he repaired to a barber's shop on board to have it cut short. The fellow did it up in first rate style. After he had combed and oiled his hair, brushed his clothes, and slicked him up in fine style, the editor felt gratified, and he pulled out a dime and offered it to the herber as a reward for his services, when the herber drew himself up with considerable pomposity and said:

"I understand that you is an editur."

"Well, what of that?"

"Because we never charge 'em, sir."

"But my colored friend, there are a great many editors traveling around now, and such liberality on your part will prove a ruinous business."

"Oh, never mind," said the herber, "We makes it all off de gentlemens "

Not so Rich.

"Is your folks rich, Johnny?" said a small boy to a trim-looking urchin as they sat in the gloaming waiting to kill cats.

"Purty well off; de old men owns a dog, mother's got a silk dress, an' I got a rabbit. Is your folks wealthy?"

"No; we ain't got no dog or rabbit, but mother's got a silk dress."

"What did yer ask us fer?"

"Cos mother says she thinks your folks is poor. She looked out on the clothes-line yesterday an' she only saw two shirts, an' a pair o' socks, an' a night-cap!"

The cat-killing was resumed.

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat.
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

TOURISTS.—This week Mr. John F. Smith's "Tourists in a Pullman Palace Car," will give the residents of Brooklyn one more week to witness the novel performance at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre; and, as this will be their last appearance in this city, none who can enjoy a good laugh should fail to see these merry "Tourists."

SMITH.—Mr. Francis S. Smith, the poet, author and part-owner of the New York Weekly, has just completed a charming story, entitled "Evelson Wilson; or, The Trials of an Irish Orphan Girl." As all of Mr. Smith's writings are full of feeling, the story will well repay all who appreciate good reading. The opening chapters are now commenced in the New York Weekly.

WITTICISMS.

"You see I have changed my occupation," said an idle fellow, formerly a schoolmaster, to a friend. "Yes, but it is nearly the same thing, though," was the answer, "for you still attend to the pupils."

It is no consolation to a man who has been fishing all day in the rain, and who has caught nothing but a dead cat and a cold, to be told that "there are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught."

"I suppose," said a quack, while feeling a patient's pulse, "that you consider me a humbug." "How odd it is," responded the patient, "that you can so accurately tell a man's thoughts by feeling his pulse."

An old farmer was wondering "why in those days it seems impossible to have an honest horse race," when a neighbor interrupted him with the remark that "he's because we haven't an honest human race."

Mamma: Well, Johnny, I shall forgive you this time, and it's very pretty of you to write a letter to say you're sorry. Johnny: Yes, ma; don't tear it up, please. Mamma: Why not? Johnny: Because it will do for the next time.

No one knows who invented the fashion in vogue of turning down the corner of a letter instead of folding it, but the originator of the custom will be deeply missed by the unfortunate he saw coming.

One Sabbath evening a worthy minister, observing by the time he had reached the third "head" of his discourse the drowsy disposition of several of his hearers, quietly remarked, "In the first place, those of you who are awake will notice," &c.

"Why the deuce should that fellow ask me for an order?" said Stage Manager Zone, to Mr. Zee, the dress-circle man. "Let him have a seat," said Zee, "and make him sit all y'r show on. He'll never want to come again." He had his seat, and he did, and has not since been seen.

An old lady recently visiting a prison, asked one of the attendants why the prisoners received such coarse food. He told her it was to keep their blood from becoming impure. And then asked what they would do if their blood was impure, he dryly responded, "Break out!"

"Oh, Doctor, I'm out again; I'm so much obliged to you," said a convalescent, warmly shaking the doctor's hand. "Why, I didn't even know you'd been ill, and have never been to see you," said the doctor. "That's it, that's what I'm thanking you for," replied the gentleman.

"Elder, will you have a drink of cider?" inquired a farmer of an old temperance elder who was spending an evening at his house. "Ah—hum—no, thank ye," said the old man; "I never drank any liquor of any kind—specially cider; but if you call it apple juice, I'll take a drop."

A Philadelphia man remarked in the presence of twenty-six ladies that he had just found an elegant switch of false hair, and twenty three of them suddenly put their hands to the backs of their heads before they replied: "It ain't mine." And the fellow hadn't found any switch after all.

"A blacksmith brought up his son, to whom he was very severe, to his trade. One day the old man was trying to harden a cold chisel, which he had made of foreign steel, but he could not succeed. "Somehow-ship it, father," exclaimed the boy, "if that won't harden it, I don't know what will."

"Waiter, any spices or cloves?" asked a pedestrian of a saloon keeper on Atlantic avenue one day last week. "Vat for I vant um?" asked the proprietor, with a strong smell of garlic in his breath, of course," exclaimed the pedestrian. "Dake away dot schmell ov der beer from up your nose and behind the counter, peer!" exclaimed the enraged dealer in liquids. "Vat for you vant spices? Vy, you makes der vort scoundrings vas makes der vort schmell ov dem. I buys him!"

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

This week is one of jollification at Haverly's Theatre, as the merry "Tourists in a Pullman Palace Car" will give their lively and entertaining performance every evening and at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The jolly party is made up of Messrs. W. A. Mestayer, Henry Watson, J. N. Long, Will H. Lamb, James Barton, Miss Rose Cooke, Miss Reiffenth, Miss Ethel Lynton and Miss Livingston. If you have not seen them we advise you to do so, for it is the last opportunity, and to miss it would be something you will regret.

None should fail to see this excellent entertainment. The following is a list of the cast: Messrs. Louis James, Chas. Westcot, J. W. Collier, E. L. Tilton, H. Forsberg, F. Roberts, Jos. A. Wilks, Geo. W. Farren, A. E. Houghton, T. Meade, Miss Marie Wainwright, Mrs. C. Walcot, Mrs. Farren, Lizzie Hudson and Le Petite McCarthy. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Pat Rooney and his Combination of Novelty Artists will amuse all who attend with their various acts, jokes, etc.

Better Thoughts.

The crown of all crowns has been one of thorns. The veil which covers the face of fraternity is woven by the hand of mercy.

Misfortune does not always wait on vice, nor is success the constant friend of virtue.

To speak harshly to a person of sensibility is like striking a harpsichord with your fist.

When charity walks into the lowest places of want, we see the beautiful purity of her robes most distinctly.

There is not a heart but has its moments of yearning, longing for something better, nobler, holier than it now knows.

If mankind are unhappy, it is of little consequence what occasions the disquietude. Real and imaginary evils are synonymous.

False friends are like our shadow—keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but leaving us the instant we cross into the shade.

If God made the world, you needn't fear that He can't take care of so small a part of it as yourself. It is better, therefore, to trust than to grumble.

The reason why a man steals an umbrella is because he does not like to go out in the rain and borrow one.

H. J. Eaves, the Costumer.

Mr. H. J. EAVES, the Costumer, late of this city, still holds the leading trade in the particular line of business at No. 63 East Twelfth street, New York, where his Brooklyn patrons still find the most complete stock of costumes in this country at prices that compare favorably with smaller establishments.

Diamonds.

There is no decrease in the elegant display of diamonds at HARTMAN, corner of Fulton and Jay son Streets. Their stock is the largest now in this city, and they sell at fair prices.

He who ... most slow in making a promise is the most faithful in its performance.

The talents of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, without a thought of fame.

Watch for opportunities of usefulness. Every day brings them, and once gone they are gone forever.

A tart temper never mellows with age; and a sharp tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use.

All the paths of knowledge are connected. They all run into each other. They are all ones. There is no end to the things we must learn in order to know what may be called knowledge of any one thing.

There is no contending against necessity, and we should be very tender how we censure those that submit to it. It is one thing to be at liberty to do what you will, and another thing to be tied up to do what we must.

There is no funeral so sad to follow as the funeral of our own youth, which we have been passionately mourning for, and ambitious of pampering with fond desires and ambitious hopes, and all the bright bevies that hang in poisonous clusters over the path of life.

As the tree is fertilized by its own broken branches and falling leaves, and grows out of its own decay, so men and nations are bettered and improved by trial, and refined out of broken hopes and blighted expectations.

I assert that duty is a power which rises with us in the morning, and goes to rest with us at night. It is not extensively with the affections or intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will, and only leaves us when we lose the light of life.

We listen to whom we know to be of the same opinion as ourselves, and we call them wise for being of it; but we avoid such as differ from us; we pronounce them rash and foolish for it, and, and still more afterward, lest we should be thought at any time to have erred.

The best way to present to life the manifold uses of friendship is to cast about and see how many things there are which a man cannot do for himself; and then it will appear that it was a saying sparkled of the ancients to say: "That a friend is another himself," for a friend is more than himself.

Mirth.—Women should all understand that sweetness, and that of grandiuess in manners is much more engaging than that of their persons; that meekness and modesty are the true and lasting ornaments. These are the only charms that render wives amiable, and make them the best guide to our respect.

It was finely said by Socrates that the shortest and most direct road to popularity is "for a man to be the same that he wishes to be taken for." People are egregiously mistaken if they think they can ever attain to popularity by hypocrisy, by mere outside appearances, and by disguising not only their language but their looks. True popularity takes deep root, and spreads itself wide; but the false fails away like blossoms; for nothing that is false can be lasting.

Spring Clothing.

Attention is directed to the announcement in another column of Messrs. John Perry & Co., Clothiers, Nos. 403 and 404 Fulton street, Brooklyn, who invite an examination of their large stock of clothing, manufactured expressly for the present spring wear and summer trade, which for style, quality and economy in prices, fully maintain the reputation of this House.

ANOTHER GREAT IRISH STORY!

No. 20 OF THE

NEW YORK WEEKLY,

NOW READY,

contains the opening chapters of an Irish Story of wonderful power, entitled

EVELEEN WILSON,

OR, THE

Trials of an Irish Orphan Girl,

The story is from the pen of

and is, without doubt, the best of all that prolific author's romances.

It details the trials and struggles of a young Irish girl of respectable parentage who is kidnapped from home and brought to this country by a band of ruthless villians, headed by her own cousin, who is determined, for reasons of his own, to ruin her, and the details are such as to thrill the most solid natures. Her hair-breadth escapes are absolutely electrifying, while her acts of heroism, her indomitable courage, her purity of soul, her earnest faith, her unalterable determination to rise superior to the temptations and persecutions by which she is surrounded, call forth the earnest [illegible] and bate vice.

The different persons introduced will be at once recognized by all familiar with Irish character, and the scenes are described with such graphic power as to enchain the attention of everybody.

The narrative never flags from the commencement to the close, and as the reader follows the heroine from one adventure to another, she becomes nearer and nearer to him, till he absolutely seems to know her personally, and rejoices with her when she has surmounted every obstacle and shines out in all the glory of innocence snatched from the jaws of vice.

EVELEEN WILSON

is one of those peculiar stories, the naturalness of which seems to take the reader captive at once, and carry him through from the first line to the last as though he were a real actor in the drama. It is highly dramatic, the characters are powerfully drawn, and the incidents are of the most exciting character.

All who fail to read

will miss a rich treat and will forever regret it.

Remember, the powerful and pathetic story of

EVELEEN WILSON

is NOW READY in No. 20 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY,

for sale by all news dealers.

FASHION NOTES.

Yellow in its numerous shades will be very fashionable this summer.

For ball toilettes trimmings composed of a net-work of beads will be universally in vogue.

The high flaring Valois collar, kept in place with wire, is found among new styles of neck garniture on the rich at toilets.

Wide soft black ribbon strings are now used instead of crepe, which rubs off, and is displeasable to wear tied closely under the chin.

Madame A. Bentley, of 428 Fulton street, will hold her Spring Opening of Millinery Goods on Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The spring styles will be varied, but the natural outlines will be preserved, and drapery will be low, caught to one side and irregularly fastened.

Very rich and appropriate suits for the street are made of Henriette cloth or of imperial serge after the models in use for cloth costumes this winter.

For simple foulard dresses are dark navy and peacock blue grounds, or else purple rich shades thickly dotted with white, gray or gold dots the size of a pea.

The latest novelty in dress goods is ecru cotton, thicker than unbleached muslin, and with bayadere stripes of bright shades of blue, scarlet, yellow and black.

Antique silver ornaments are quite the rage again. Egyptian necklaces, ancient Roman and Greek coins are all pressed into the service, both copies and originals being worn.

Satin jackets embroidered with silk are in preparation for the spring. The black satin ones embroidered in black will be used for walking, the colored ones for carriage use.

Double breasted effects are given to many basques, and if not cut in one, the extra front is added by a seam down the middle. Two rows of large pearl or metal buttons are on such fronts.

Shirring, which has been so long in vogue, takes a new lease of favor for the approaching season, as quimpes, collars, tablets, fichues and entire sleeves are made of these finely drawn gathers.

A feature of the wool suits for spring is the use of cords and tassels arranged merely as festoons, or passed around the hips with the ends hanging low directly in front or else on the left side.

The simplest designs used in making colored dresses are repeated in those worn as morning. The coat basque, the round overskirt worn simply draped, and the short round skirt, is the model for most costumes.

Among other spring bonnets will be shirred faille ones in the capote shape, trimmed with not of the same shade. Elderly ladies will wear the Panchon bonnet and young ladies will wear a variety of styles.

It is prophesied that summer dresses of muslin will be very simple. A single skirt flounced, a straight bodice, a sash or ribbon belt, sleeves half short and a lace or muslin fichu with ends fastened in the belt.

Jet and lace are not objected to as trimmings for the black silk dresses worn in the house, while for the street diagonal cloth costumes are chosen for plain occasions and uncut velvet with satin de Lyon for full dress.

The trains to new dresses are very long and rather narrow. In many cases they are cut in one piece with the waist, they are shirred to the depth of a quarter of a yard, and all trains are closely plaited so as not to show in front.

A new material, sold in its finest qualities instead of the serge or c oth, is called camel's hair cashmere, and is liked by widows and those who wear the deepest mourning, because it is made entirely of soft wool without any silk.

After cream laces, ladies of elegance have recently adopted redical lace, in order to avoid the too glaring shade of pure white, and to be in harmony with the present time, which are still the fashion, and will be for some time to come.

Tamise cloth is probably the most popular of all mourning dress goods for spring and sum-mn wear; indeed, many ladies find it sufficiently heavy to wear all the year; it is also worn both as the deepest and as the lightest mourning.

For the general manufacture of spring wraps this season, light supple cloths, such as camel's hair fabrics, vigognes, and cashmere cloakings are to take precedence. Choice colors are drabs, light tans, and almond shades, with mastic and stone gray.

Habits of velvet or satin, over dresses of tulle or of silk, covered with lace, will be worn all the spring. These habits are cut like the masculine frock coats but have no sleeves whatever, merely a row of narrow white lace gathered around the armhole.

White petticoats are to be abandoned this spring and garments of black foulard or sarah, trimmed with narrow flounces which are edged with white lace, or else with lace embroidered with silk or wool in red, rose, blue or orange, are to take their places.

Princess forms of modelling remain as popular as ever and are subject to any modifications which are appropriate. The apron front style of princess dress is the ruling favorite at present, and it will hold its way entirely through the season of 1880.

Window shades made of silk, matching in color the furniture and carpets, are the fashion. They are handsomely embroidered across the bottom with vines, grasses, storks or other birds on the wing. Some of the more elaborate have satiqne lace inserted and are edged with the same.

The most popular model in jackets is the sportsman's, which is rather short, half fitting, belted, loose in front, with square basques, a quantity of pockets of all shapes and sizes, and a profusion of fancy buttons. They are either double or single breasted and have a deep collar or revers.

For useful black chip bonnets, to be put on very early in the spring, a handsome trimming is Oriental lace gathered around the crown and tied in a bow on top; then four ostrich tips—one of yellow, the next of peacock blue, the third of ciel blue and the fourth of pheasant brown—are laid beside each other and curl over on the front of the brim.

Poplin is likely to be worn next winter as a dress material, the Queen of England and many of the nobility having ordered costumes and curtains of it. There are three classes of poplin, the single, the double, and kerry. The first two named differ from each other in the respective thicknesses of silk in the warp; while the third sort is a richly corded silk, like the terry velvet, only the same on both sides. The single and double are silk figured, having a pattern thrown up in brocade.

Shyness Exempt!ied.

A young lady in a neighboring town, one day last week went into a dry goods store and thus introduced herself:

"It is my desire to obtain a pair of circular elastic appendages, capable of being contracted or expanded by means of oscillating burnished steel appliances, that sparkle like particles of gold leaf set with Cape May diamonds, and which are utilized for retaining in proper position the habiliments of the lower extremities, which innate delicacy forbids me to mention."

The vendor of calicoes was perplexed, but, not wishing to appear ignorant, said that he was "just on it." After the departure, he ruminated in silence for a few moments, when a new light broke upon his distracted brain, and he burst forth with:

"By thunder! I'll bet that woman wanted a pair of garters."

A Boy's Idea of Heads.

"Head are of different shapes and sizes. They are full of notions. Large heads do not always hold the most. Some people can tell just what a man is by the shape of his head. High heads are the best kind. Very knowing people are called long-headed. A fellow that won't stop for anything or anybody is called hot-headed. If he is not quite so bright, they call him soft-headed; if he won't be coaxed or turned they call him pig-headed. Animals have small heads. The heads of fool's slant back. Our heads are all covered with hair except bald heads. There are other heads besides our heads. There are barrel heads, heads of sermons—and some ministers used to have fifteen heads to one sermon; heads of nations, as the farmer calls his cows and oxen; ball heads, heads of families, but the worst kind of a head is the hunt-head."

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat.
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that its breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

WITTICISMS.

A man is called a suitor whether he happens to suit-er or not.

The weather is not treating the plumber with feeling politeness.

The sleighing not being very good the small boy has gone in swimming.

In life you can "go as you please," but you will be happier if you so strive to pleasess you go.

The next men who brings us a load of wood on subscription, will please drive a stake near the pile, to aid us in finding it.

A boy may not be as good a judge of things as his father, but he will never allow the latter to select a jack-knife for him—if he can help it.

A bachelor cynic remarks that it is singular how early in life a child gains the reputation of resembling the richest and best-looking of his relatives.

"At what age were you married?" asked she, inquisitively. But the other lady was equal to the emergency, and quietly responded, "At the parsonage."

"What does 'Good Friday' mean?" asked one boy of another. "You had better go home and read your 'Robinson Crusoe,'" was the withering reply.

"If you can't keep awake," said a parson to his hearers, when drowsy, why don't you take a pinch of snuff?" "I think," was the reply, "the snuff should be put in the sermon."

"What time do you," asked a customer of a restaurant clerk, as he settled for his breakfast. "It's a quarter after six," replied the clerk, as he raked in the cash and a twenty five cent check.

A loving British wife's postscript to a letter addressed to her husband in New York: "Dear William, I have perused the police reports and morgue returns every day, hoping to see your name."

The other day a Professor of German asked an unregenerated junior what the gender of a certain noun was. The junior quickly replied: "I think it is neuter, sir. At any rate it is neu-ter ma."

A woman who was not a physiologist, and whose husband had some internal malady, said to a friend: "You see, I give him a deal of bread and milk. It does to the part you know, and acts as a position."

"Beecher thinks piety is the best cure for a scolding wife. We don't know how that is, but a married friend around the corner says he long ago satisfied himself that a scolding wife is the best cure for piety."

Every once in a while we hear of a California woman killing a bear. This is all right. But we challenge the world to ransack the pages of history and show us where a women has ever got away with a mouse.

"Are you the saleswomen of whom I bought this handkerchief yesterday?" asked a purchaser at one of our dry goods stores. "I am the sales lady who served you," responded the reduced creature in hanged long watch chain and ringed fingers.

A shoemaker was recently taken up for bigamy and brought before the sitting magistrate. "Which wife," asked a by-stander, "will he be obliged to take?" Brown, always ready as a bee, replied, "He is a cobbler, and of course will stick to his last."

"Yes, gentlemen, certainly, of course," said a Fulton street clothier. "If you want a pair of pants, step right into my pantry; if a vest, walk right up to my vestry; and if a coat—here, Jacob, show this gentleman into the coterie. This way, this way, gentlemen."

When Brooklyn was a village, there was a toll bridge over Newtown Creek, attended to by a widow. People observed that a certain gentleman passed to and fro without paying. Being asked to explain, the fair gate keeper smiled, and said "she never toiled her love."

NOVELTY THEATRE.

There seems to be no end to the first-class attractions presented by Messrs. Theall & Williams at the Novelty. For this week they have "Fairfax," Mr. Bartley Campbell's latest success at the New York Park Theatre. The Company is the same that rendered it there, and includes the names of the following artists: Joseph E. Whiting, Fred. Robinson, Lonis F. Berrett, James Peeks, Eugene Eberle, F. E. Bond, George Warren, Henry Jones, Agnes Booth, Miss Sydney Cowell, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, Miss Nellie Whiting and Little Effie Barrett. Matinees as usual on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week they will present the Union Square Company in "French Flats," which has just closed a long and profitable run at the Union Square Theatre, New York. Other attractions of equal note are booked and will follow in succession

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

The Union Square Company in their latest success, "French Flats," is now on at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. The Company is composed of mostly all the same artists that were in the cast in New York, and the scenery is the same as was used there. "French Flats" is a play that one enjoys, as it is something new and full of fun from beginning to end. It will be given at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Bartley Campbell's latest success, "Fairfax," will be presented at this house by Abbey's New York Park Theatre Company, who made this beautiful play so very interesting during its long run in New York. "Fairfax" will only be here for one week, as "An Arabian Night," from Daly's Theatre, is booked to follow it.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

For this week Colonel Sinn has secured the popular actress Miss Ada Cavendish, who made such a splendid impression while at this house last season. This lady has become one of the leading stars of the day. She has the support of her own excellent Company, and will appear on Monday evening, also Wednesday matinee, in "Much Ado About Nothing;" Wednesday, Thursday and Friday Nights, also Saturday matinee, "Chancrity;" Tuesday and Saturday nights, "The New Magdalen."

Next Monday Mr J. Clinton Hall will make his first appearance in this city in his great comedy, "Strategists," which had a long run in New York, and has been indorsed there and everywhere else that it has been performed, as one of the funniest productions yet seen on the stage.

Playin-tive—Upon a modest grave-stone in Vincennes cemetery appears the pisintive legend: "His mother buryed the corpuet."

"When I die," said a married man to his better half, "I want to go where there are no stoves to put up," and she cheerfully replied she presumed he would.

A lover, having been driven from the house by his sweetheart's father, was asked if he wasn't mad. "No," said he, "not mad, but I must say that I felt very much put out."

"Nelly, will you have some of the turkey?" "Yes, papa," was the reply of the four-year-old, as she looked at the stuffing, "but I won't have any of the hash."

"I should just like to see somebody attack me," said Mrs. Smith at the breakfast table, the other morning. "If no! so would I, my dear—so should I," said Mr. Smith with exceeding earnestness.

One of the secretaries of a Church Missionary Society, a distinguished man, was about to preach to a colored congregation, when he was introduced by the regular minister of the church, a black man, in these words: "Now, den, brethren, I'se hab to inform you dat Braddah Blank is gwine to preach to you today. He is de Secretary of de Missionary Society, a distinguished an' a eloquent man—in fac', my brethren, he is a soundin' brass an' a tinklin' cymbal."

Subjects for Thought.

Grumbling.—Some people are ever grumbling. If they have not great troubles, they have little ones to keep them fretting, and many would say of them that they grumble merely for pastime. A fretful disposition is of no advantage—it only makes the possessor and those connected with him miserable. The better way is always to look on the bright side of things, for we shall meet with trouble enough in the world without turning out of our way to seek it. Grumbling makes a hard life harder, sours the temper, unnecessarily fatigues both body and mind, and never facilitates business.

It is a beautiful thing to frankly acknowledge an error we are conscious of committing toward another; and a more enjoyable thing to know we are wiping away the tears of pain our thoughtless words have caused. The ready smile, a cheerful spirits, and the encouraging words of a time tried companion, are beautiful things to the eyes of angels.

"A crown will not cure the headache, nor a golden slipper the gout." Very true; but a crowned head when it aches doesn't have to keep right on devising ways and means to procure bread and butter, nor does a gold-shod foot when it twinges have to support the weight of a toiling body.

When you see an old man amiable, mild, equable, content and good-humored, be sure that in his youth he has been just, generous and forbearing. In his old age he does not lament the past nor dread the future. He is like the evening of a fine day.

Pluck, not luck, puts a man ahead in this world, and leaves a lot of persons at the foot of the ladder quarreling over their pedigrees, trying to sponge a pass out of some sympathetic friend, or asleep up under the shadow of some self-made man.

When we are young we waste a great deal of time in imagining what we will do when we grow older, and when we are old we waste an equal amount of time in wond ring why we waited so long before we began to do anything.

He who is passionate and hasty is generally honest. It is your old dissembling hypocrite of whom you should beware. There's no deception in a bull-dog. Is only a cur that sneaks up and bites you when your back is turned.

Some unknown philosopher observes: "A little girl who can put on a square patch may not be so accomplished as one who can work a green worsted dog on a yellow ground, but she is far more value in the community."

The man who possesses a passionate and revengeful temper is deprived of reason and all that is great and noble in his nature is suppressed.

Good temper is like a sunny-day; it sheds a brightness over everything; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.

When you are sick it comes easy to promise all sorts of reformation, and when you recover it is no easy to forget them.

Go straight on, and don't mind enemies. If they get in your way, walk calmly round them, regardless of their spite.

"I see you are taking an umbrella to school with you to day," said a gentleman to a little Chicago girl one dark and very windy morning. "Oh, no, sir," came the cheery answer, as she clung to the handle and swooping by, "it's taking me."

Something that was Needed.

There is now organized in this city a Company known as the Brooklyn Hot Ing Company, who are ready to deliver to any part of the city all kinds of Boiled lager, ale, porter, &c., at very moderate prices. Fred. J. Steenken is the manager, and orders may be sent to him at 335 Court street.

H. J. Eaves, the Costumer.

Mr. H. J. Eaves, the Costumer, late of this city, still holds the leading trad in this particular line of business at No. 62 East Twelfth street, New York, where the Brooklyn patrons still find the most complete stock of costumes in this country at prices that compare favorably with smaller establishments.

FASHION NOTES.

In general the princesse form of dress is still the leading one for full dress toilets.

Some of the imported costumes have the entire fronts shirred from top to bottom.

For the hair, birds and insects are much used when mounted on a pin that makes them quiver in the coiffure.

White Spanish lace flchus, just imported, have a gold thread following the outline of the design of fl wers and leaves.

Artificial flowers in parlnieres are now used for decorating houses, on the mirrors, tables mantels, and in the windows.

It is as d there i- soon to be a radical change in haldressing, plaited chignons and light clusters of curls are to be revived.

At the artificial flower stores bunches of roses for looping draperies are foun i to be more popular than trailing vines and sprays.

Thick heavy paper in English styles is fashionable stationery for ladies, in preference to the thin flimsy French paper once in vogue.

Satin and the fine plush known as satin antique are the most fashionable materials for white bonnets, though occasionly velvet is used.

Short shoulder capes, of material resembling the dress, or of plush, brocade or jet, are to form a noticeable feature in of spring walking suits

The newest and most popular of spring fancy goods is the printed India cashmere, in small multi-colored fine patterns over a light ground.

Chi-ters of dahlias of variegated colors from pink to deep red and yellow are shown in the shops, to be worn on bonnets, or in the corsage, or for trimming evening dresses.

The use of satin is on the increase, and the new-st satin goods is satin de luze, a soft, rich texture. It is satin finished and has a back resembling serge. It will be used for bonnets, wraps and dresses.

B lial flower sets are now seldom made entirely of orange blossoms, as these are stiff-looking unless of the fine-t quality; they are now mixed with white lilacs, snowballs, mignonette, jasmine, or clematis.

A new fancy for trimming flchus of muslin and lace is that of having a vine of leaves and buds extend up the left side to the back of the neck while a large bunch of larger half-blown buds is placed lower on the front.

A balloon of flowers is shown to be hung from a chandelier; horseshoes are made of pansies, violets and rosebuds; and there are baskets of white porcelain representing an inverted umbrella filled with flowers.

Short skirts f r the street are found to be so comfortable that many ladies are abolishing all trains—except for full-dress occasions—and are having morning wrappers made short enough for the skirt to escape the flo r.

A pretty way to arrange a sash on a child's dress is to fa-ten it at the back of the waist, bringing it straight down to the waist, hold it in place by bands of embroidery or silk and tie it in a large bow with short ends.

Among the n w fancies for buttons are two mive of dull silver, oxi-ized—the most fashionable of birds just now—and ugly birds of red enamel. Buttons of Florentine copper, representing a terrier's head, are also in favor.

Bonnets that are slightly soiled may be transformed by covering them with a white scarf of lace, allowing one edge to fall over the forehead while the other is gathered in the back, and the ends are tied under the chin.

French fashion authorities say that cords are no longer used for dress trimmings and even for bonnet trimmings. They are ugly, expensive and tasteless d corations, and it is to be hoped that they will not become the vogue here.

A fashion that will hardly be received by women of g od taste is the wearing of anklets. A heavy band of silver or gold, with bangles or medallion clasp, is worn over the embroidered and blacked silk stockings with low slippers.

Stylish bonnets for deep mourning are of crape in turban or capote shape. The trimmings are of crape only; strings are either of crape, finished with a fold, or else of lustreless soft twilled black ribbon, worn rather for use than ornament.

The fashion of a corsage different from the dress will prevail in the spring. Long corsages of s aterial and color different from the skirt will be worn both in the house and on the street, and later when the weather is warmer without any wrap.

Boys and girls from one to two years old are dressed very much alike, but there is an attempt on the part of mothers to make some difference in their outer garments even at this early age. This is shown more particularly in their wrappings, and in the materials of which they are made.

For flannel morning dresses many ladies now prefer fine white gauze flannel, and have it richly embroidered with wh te floss. These are sent to professional scourers to be cleaned when soiled, and t ere are also white cloth wrappers, some of which are beautifully wrought in Persian colors.

Long scarfs of black Spanish lace are now worn most coquettishly arranged over the bonnet, with the front edge falling over the brim, the other gathered into the crown behind, and the ends knotted under the chin. This is worn in white lace on dress bonnets, and in black for the street.

Some new midwinter dresses are embroidered all over the front of the bodice and skirt with beads of all the colors of the most precious stones, such as amber, ruby, emerald and sapphire. Gold and silver embroidery are also much employed, and a new and unique fancy is to have the whole border of silk painted by hand in the Wat eau style with flowers and other designs.

Crackle velvet is the material used f r small Directoire bonnets worn by older ladies, and the trimming for these is soft twilled silk to change-able colors, arranged in scarfs and strings that are trimmed through the middle with gay cashmere figured ribbon. Inside the brim flat gold braid en loch wide is placed, or else the becoming face trimming is slurred satin of some appropriate color.

Very young ladies are wearing during the midwinter season beaver round hats with the crown smooth like the beaver of gentlemen's silk hats, while the broad flaring brim is of long-napped furry beaver, which is found to be very becoming. A single bow of satin ribbon is on the left side of the brim, and the three plumes of White feathers that are stuck in the band of the crown curl over the front of the brim to meet the bow.

A lovely dress for a lady's afternoon costume is violet cashmere of a dark shade, with wide square neck and open sleeve, trimmed with the new stamped ribbon velvet, worn with plaited habit shirt of linen and lace, and inner undersleeves to show through the openings of the dress sleeve, which is not sewed up at all on the outside of the arm, but caught together at intervals with knots of ribbon in a quaint beautiful fashion. A hanging belt of velvet ribbon, with working attached, and narrow foot plaitings of cashmere, headed by the velvet, finish the dress.

To live long it is necessary to live slowly.

Intemperate Weather—Beery, heavy, wet, and "muggy."

A wise man has said: "Common sense makes no parade." It is rough on the soldiers.

The kind of flower oftenest raised by the mothers of nursery boys—The "lady slipper."

A Western woman has lost two husband by lightning. She ought to marry a conductor.

"I don't like winter," said one pickpocket to another. "Everybody has his hands in his pockets"

But few men can handle a hot lamp chimney and say there is no place like home at the same time.

"What is that man yelling at?" asked an Illinois farmer at the bar. "He is yelling at the top of his voice," was the pert answer.

TEXEDILLY.—A smart girl calls a young fellow of her acquaintance Honeysuckle, because he's always hanging over the front fence.

Said a railroad engineer to an Irishman, whose cow had been killed: "But she didn't get out of the way when I rang the bell." "Faith, that's what I said at her, 'ye didn't hear when ring her bell, nay thur"

A mild quibbling does one good. "What was the sermon, this morning?" asked a mother of her child. "Well," was the reply, "it was about, let me see it was about twenty minutes too long; that's all I remember."

EXAMINER.—Now tell me what you consider the chief condition of human existence." Under-Graduate: "Time, sir." Examiner: "How so?" Under Graduate: "Oh, it's very simple. How can a human being exist who has not the time to do so?"

It is better not to ask too many questions about the future. A curious husband—that is, and too curious—asked his wife: "My dear, what kind of a storm do you think they will give me when I am gone?" She answered, coolly, "Brimstone, John."

"You never saw such a happy lot of people as we had here yesterday," said a landlord in Indiana, to a newly-arrived guest. "There were fifteen couples of 'em." "What, thirteen couples just married!" "Oh, no, sir, thirteen couples just divorced."

We haven't his name, but he is a Japanese aristocrat of the first tribe, who thus writes home to his wife: "The chief branch of education of young men here is rowing. The people have large boats—houses called 'colleges,' and the principal of these are Yale and Harvard."

An old man of eighty-four and his bride, aged eighty-two, entered a railway car the other day, and took a seat by the stove. A youth occupying the seat behind says he overheard the following: Old gentleman to his bride: "Who's a little lamb?" Bride: "Boo of m."

A boarder, the other day, after vainly endeavoring to masticate a piece of fowl, laid down his knife and fork, saying, "All the teachings of my youth, and the commands of Holy Writ, compel me to respect old age; but I'll be blowed if I can bring myself to stomach it roasted or boiled."

There's not a charm that lights the face
With so ineffable a grace,
As sweet, pink lip- and ivory teeth;
And nothing now, beneath the sky,
Can beauty such as these supply,
Save SOZODONT, that wears the wreath.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results. It is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every clime of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence.

WITTICISMS.

A man is called a suitor whether he happens to suit-or or not.

The weather is not treating the plumber with freezing politeness.

The sleighing not being very good the small boy has gone in swimming.

In life you can "go as you please," but you will be happier if you so strive to pleases you go.

The next man who brings us a load of wood on subscription, will please drive a stake near the gate, to aid us in finding it.

A boy may not be as good a judge of things as his father, but it is well never allow the latter to select a jack-knife for him—if he can help it.

A bachelor cynic remarks that it is singular how early in life a child gains the reputation of resembling the richest and best looking of his relatives.

"At what age were you married?" asked she, inquisitively. But the other lady was equal to the emergency, and quietly responded, "At the parsonage."

"What does 'Good Friday' mean?" asked one boy of another. "You had better go home and read your 'Robinson Crusoe,'" was the withering reply.

"If you can't keep awake," said a parson to his hearers, "when drowsy, why don't you take a pinch of snuff?" "I think," was the reply, "the snuff should be put in the sermon."

"What time is it?" asked a customer of a restaurant clerk as he sailed for his breakfast. "It's a quarter after six," replied the clerk, as he raked in the cash and a twenty five cent check.

A loving British wife's postscript to a letter addressed to her husband in New York: "Dear William, I have perused the lyric reported in morgue returns every day, hoping to see your name."

The other day a Professor of German asked an unreg-nerved junior what the gender of a certain noun was. The junior quickly replied: "I think it is neuter, sir. At any rate it is neu-ter me."

A woman who was not a physiologist, and whose husband had some internal malady, said to a friend: "You see, I give him a deal of bread and milk. It flies to the part, you know, and acts as a poultice."

"Beecher thinks piety is the best cure for a scolding wife. We don't know how that is, but a married friend around the corner says he long ago satisfied himself that a scolding wife is the best cure for piety."

Every once in a while we hear of a California woman killing a bear. This is all right. But we challenge the world to ransack the pages of history and show us where a woman has ever got away with a mouse.

"Are you the saleswomen of whom I bought this handkerchief yesterday?" asked a purchaser at one of our dry goods stores. "I am the sales lady who served you," responded the refined empress in bangel hair, long watch-chain and ringed fingers.

A shoemaker was recently taken up for blasphemy and brought before the sitting magistrate. "Which wife," asked a by-stander, "will be obliged to take it?" Brown, always ready at a j ke, replied, "He is a cobbler, and offers much stock to his last."

"Yes, gentlemen, certainly, of course," said a Fulton street cl-thier. "If you want a pair of pants, step right into my pantry; if a vest, walk right up to my vestry; and if a coat—here, Jacob, show this gentleman into the coterie This way, this way, gentlemen."

When Brooklyn was a village, there was a toll bridge over Newtown Creek, attended to by a widow. People observed that a certain gentleman passed t-and fro without paying. Being asked to explain, the fair gate keeper smiled, and said "she never toiled her love."

Mr. HAVERLY desires to inform the people of Brooklyn that it is his intention to furnish them with the New York successes immediately after their production and while they are still in the heighth of prosperity.

Mr. HAVERLY, with his many Theatres, has the advantage in negotiating with the Metropolitan triumphs, and it is with pleasure he announces to the citizens of Brooklyn a succession of successful successes never before equaled in Brooklyn.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

The Union Square Company in their latest success, "French Flats," is now on at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre. The Company is composed of mostly all the same artists that were in the cast in New York, and the scenery is the same as was used there. "French Flats" is a play that one enjoys, as it is something new and full of fun from beginning to end. It will be given at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Bartley Campbell's latest success, "Fairfax," will be presented at this house by Abbey's New York Park Theatre Company, who made this beautiful play so very interesting during its long run in New York. "Fairfax" will only be here for one week, as "An Arabian Night," from Daly's Theatre, is booked to follow it.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

For this week Colonel Sinn has secured the popular actress Miss Ada Cavendish, who made such a splendid impression while at this house last season. This lady has become one of the leading stars of the day. She has the support of her own excellent Company, and will appear on Monday evening, also Wednesday matinee, in "Much Ado About Nothing;" Wednesday, Thursday and Friday Nights, also Saturday matinee, "Chancarty;" Tuesday and Saturday nights, "The New Magdalen."

Next Monday Mr J. Clinton Hill will make his first appearance in this city in his great comedy, "Strategists," which had a long run in New York, and has been indorsed there and everywhere else that it has been performed, as one of the funniest productions yet seen on the stage.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

There seems to be no end to the first-class attractions presented by Messrs. Theall & Williams of the Novelty. For this week they have "Fairfax," Mr. Bartley Campbell's latest success at the New York Park Theatre. The Company is the same that rendered it there, and includes the names of the following artists: Joseph E Whiting, Fred. Robinson, Louis F. Barrett, James Peake, Eugene Eberle, F. E. Bond, George Warren, Henry Jones, Agnes Booth, Miss Sydney Cowell, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, Miss Nellie Whiting and Little Effie Barrett. Matinees as usual on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week they will present the Union Square Company in "French Flats," which has just closed a long and profitable run at the Union Square Theatre, New York. Our attractions of equal note are booked and will follow in succession.

Novelty Association Ball.

The Novelty Association, composed of the young men attached to Theall & Williams' Novelty Theatre, will give a grand ball at Lyceum Hall, corner of South Eighth and Fourth streets, on Tuesday evening, February 5d. A good time is in store for all who will attend.

A Sound Investment—A telephone.

Playin-tive—Upon a modest grave-stone in Vincennes cemetery appears the plaintive legend: "His neighbor played the cornet."

"When I die," said a married man to his better half, "I want to go where there are no stoves to put up;" and she cheerfully replied she presumed he would.

A lover, having been driven from the house by his sweetheart's father, was asked if he wasn't mad. "No," said he, "not mad, but I must say that I felt very much put out."

"Nelly, will you have some of the turkey?" "Yes, papa," was the reply of the four-year-old, as she looked at the stuffing, "but I won't have any of the hash."

"I should just like to see somebody abduct me," said Mrs. Smith at the breakfast table, the other morning. "If'm! so should I, my dear—so should I," said Mr. Smith with exceeding carnestness.

Subjects for Thought.

Grumbling.—Some people are ever grumbling. If they have not great troubles, they have little ones to keep them fretting, and they would say of them that they grumble merely for pastime. A fretful disposition is of no advantage—it only makes the possessor and those connected with him miserable. The better way is always to look on the bright side of things, for we shall meet with trouble enough in the world without turning out of our way to seek it. Grumbling makes a hard job harder, sours the temper, unnecessarily fatigues both body and mind, and never facilitates business.

It is a beautiful thing to frankly acknowledge an error we are conscious of committing toward another; and a more enjoyable thing to know we are wiping away the tears of pain our thoughtless words have caused. The ready smile, a cheerful spirit, and the encouraging words of a time tried companion, are beautiful things to the eyes of angels.

"A crown will not cure the headache, nor a golden slipper the gout." Very true; but a crowned head when it aches doesn't have to keep right on dewing ways and means to procure bread and butter, nor does a gold-shod foot when it twinges have to support the weight of a toiling body.

When you see an old man amiable, mild, equable, content and good-humored, be sure that in his youth he has been just, generous and forbearing. In his old age he does not harvest the past nor dread the future. He is like the evening of a fine day.

Pluck, not luck, puts a man ahead in this world, and leaves a lot of pow-wow at the foot of the ladder quarreling over their pedigrees. Trying to sponge a praw out of some sympathetic friend, or to sail under the shadow of some self-made man.

When we are young we waste a great deal of time in imagining what we will do when we become older, and when we are old we waste an equal amount of time in wond-ring why we waited so long before we began to do anything.

He who is passionate and hasty is generally honest. It is your old dissembling hypocrite of whom you should beware. There's no deception in a hail-dog. It is only a cur that meets up and bites you when your back is turned.

Some unknown philosopher observes: "A little girl who can put on a square patch may not be so accomplished as one who can work a green worsted dog on a yellow ground, but she is of far more value in the community."

The man who possesses a passionate and revengeful temper is deprived of reason, and all that is great and noble in his nature is suppressed.

Good temper is like a sunny day; it sheds a brightness over everything; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.

When you are sick it comes easy to promise all sorts of reformation, and when you recover it is as easy to forget them.

Go straight on, and don't mind enemies. If they get in your way, walk calmly round them, regardless of their spite.

"I see you are taking an umbrella to school with you to-day," said a gentleman to a little Chicago girl one day last week, and very windy morning. "Oh, no, sir," came the cheery answer, as she clung to the handle and swooping by, "it's taking me."

Something that was Needed.

There is now organized in this city a Company known as the Brooklyn Bot ling Company, who are ready to deliver to any part of the city all kinds of bottled liquor, ale, porter, etc., at very reasonable prices. Fred. J. Greenwerth is the manager, and orders may be sent to him at 393 Court street.

H. J. Eaves, the Costumer.

MR. H. J. EAVES, the Costumer, late of this city, still holds the leading trade in this particular line of business at No. 63 East Twelfth street, New York, where his Brooklyn patrons still find the most complete stock of costumes in this country at prices that compare favorably with smaller establishments.

Toys! Toys!

There is a pleasant place for those
Where fairies reside, if they please,
Their jolly old home
Is not far from Santa Claus' cosy
Toy Emporium,
Where you can see them all.

'Tis called CRANDALL'S BAZAR,
And it shineth like a star,
Nor need you travel far,
Should you call
On Fulton street, cor. Pierrepont.

Diamonds.

There is no decrease in the elegant display of Diamonds at HART BROS., corner of Fulton and Johnson Streets. Their stock is the largest now in this city, and they sell at fair prices.

FASHION NOTES.

In general the princesse form of dress is still the leading one for full dress toilets.

Some of the imported costumes have the entire fronts shirred from top to bottom.

For the hair, birds and insects are much used when mounted on a pin that makes them quiver in the coiffure.

White Spanish lace fichus, just imported, have a gold thread following the outline of the design of flowers and leaves.

Artificial flowers in jardinieres are now used for decorating bonnets, on the mirrors, tables mantels, and in the windows.

It is as if there is soon to be a radical change in hairdressing, plaited chignons and light clusters of curls are to be revived.

At the artificial flower stores bunches of roses for looping drapery are found to be more popular than trailing vines and sprays.

Thick heavy paper in English styles is fashionable stationery for ladies, in preference to the thin flimsy French paper once in vogue.

Satin and the fine plush known as satin antique are the most fashionable materials for white bonnets, though occasionally velvet is used.

Short shoulder capes, of material resembling the dress, or of plush, brocade or jet, are to form a noticeable feature of spring walking suits.

The newest and most popular of spring fancy goods is the imported satin ribbon, in small multi-colored fine patterns over a light ground.

Clusters of dahlias of variegated colors from pink to deep red and yellow are shown in the shops, to be worn on bonnets, or in the hair, sash, or for trimming evening dresses.

The use of satin is on the increase, and the newest satin goods is satin de lux, a soft, rich texture. It is satin finished and has a back resembling crepe. It will be used for bonnet wraps and dresses.

Bridal flower sets are now seldom made entirely of orange blossoms, as these are stiff-looking unless of the finest quality; they are now mixed with white lilacs, sawbaltia, narcissus, jasmine, or clematis.

A new fancy for trimming fichus of muslin and lawn is that of having a vine of leaves and buds extend up the left side to the back of the neck while a large bunch of larger half-blown buds is placed lower on the front.

A balloon of flowers is shown to be hung from a chandelier. Sometimes are made of pansies, violets and rosebuds; and there are bunches of white porcelain forming a basket covered umbrella filled with flowers.

Short skirts for the street are found to be so comfortable that many ladies are abolishing all trains—except for full-dress occasions—and are having morning wrappers made short enough for the skirt to escape the floor.

A pretty way to arrange a sash on a child's dress is to fasten it at the back of the neck, bringing it straight down to the waist, hold it in place by knots of embroidery or silk and tie it in a large bow with short ends.

Among the new fancies for buttons are twin mice of dull silver, owls—the most fashionable of birds just now—and lady birds of red enamel. Buttons of Florentine copper, representing a terrier's head, are also in favor.

Bonnets that are slightly soiled may be transformed by covering them with a wide scarf of lace, allowing one edge to fall over the forehead, while the other is gathered at the back, and the ends are tied under the chin.

French fashion authorities say that cords are much used for dress trimmings and even for bonnet trimmings. They are ugly, expensive and tasteless decorations, and it is to be hoped that they will not come into vogue here.

A fashion that will hardly be received by women of good taste is the wearing of anklets. A heavy band of silver or gold, with bangles or medallion clasp, is worn over the embroidered and clocked silk stockings with low slippers.

Stylish bonnets for deep mourning are of crape in turbine or capote shape. The trimmings are of crape also; strings are either of crape, finished with a fold, or ties of lustreless soft twilled black ribbon, wider for use than ornament.

The fashion of a corsage different from the dress will prevail in the spring. Long corsages of material and color different from the skirt will be worn both in the house and on the street, and later when the weather is warmer without any wrap.

Boys and girls from one to two years old are dressed very much alike, but there is an attempt on the part of mothers to make some difference in their outer garments even at that early age. This is shown more particularly in their wrappings, and in the materials of which they are made.

For flannel morning dresses many ladies now prefer fine white gauze flannel, and have it richly embroidered with white floss. These are seat to professional scourers to be cleaned when soiled, and there are also white cloth wrappers, some of which are beautifully wrought in Persian colors.

Long scarfs of black Spanish lace are now worn most coquettishly arranged over the bonnet, with the front edge falling over the brim, the other gathered into the crown behind, and the ends knotted under the chin. This is worn in white lace on dress bonnets, and in black for the street.

Some new mid-winter dresses are embroidered all over the front of the bodice and skirt with beads of all the colors of the most precious stones, such as amber, ruby, emerald and sapphire. Gold and silver embroidery are also much employed, and a new and unique fancy is to have the skirt tabbier of silk pointed by hand in the Watteau style with flowers and other designs.

Crackle velvet is the material used for small Directoire bonnets worn by older ladies, and the trimming for these is soft twilled silk in changeable colors, arranged in scarfs and strings that are trimmed through the middle with gay cashmere figured ribbon. Inside the brim flat gold braid an inch wide is placed, or else the becoming face trimming is shirred satin of some appropriate color.

Very young ladies are wearing during the midwinter season heavy round hats with the crown smooth like the beaver of gentlemen's silk hats, while the broad flaring brim is of long-napped furry beaver, which is found to be very becoming. A single bow of satin ribbon on the left side of the brim, and in the three Prince of Wales feathers that are stuck in the band of the crown curl over the front of the brim to meet the bow.

A lovely dress for a lady's afternoon costume is violet cashmere of a dark shade, with wide square neck and open sleeve, trimmed with the new stamped ribbon velvet, worn with plaited habit shirt of linen and lace, and laced undersleeves to show through the openings of the dress sleeve, which is cut sewed up at all on the outside of the arm, but caught together at intervals with knots of ribbon in a quaint heraldic fashion. A hanging belt of velvet ribbon, with a warlike shield, and narrow foot pleatings of cashmere, headed by the velvet, finish the dress.

To live long it is necessary to live slowly.

Intemperate Weather—Beery, heavy, wet, and "muggy."

A wise man has said: "Common sense makes no parade." It is rough on the ladies.

The kind of flower oftenest raised by the mothers of unruly boys—The "leaf-slipper."

A Western woman has lost two husband by lightning. She ought to marry a conductor.

"I don't like winter," said one pickpocket to another. "Every one puts his hands in his pockets."

But few men can handle a hot lamp chimney and say there is no place like home at the same time.

TEXEDILLY.—A smart girl calls a young fellow of her acquaintance How-you-kicke, because he's always hanging over the front fence.

Said a railroad engineer to an Irishman, whose cow had been killed: "But she didn't get out of the way when I rang the bell." "Faith, thin," said Pat, "ye didn't shtop whin she rang her bell, anywhere."

A mild criticism does one good. "What was the sermon, this morning?" said the mother of her child. "Well," was the reply, "it was about, let me see, it was about twenty minutes too long; that's all I remember."

Examiner: "Now tell me what you consider the chief condition of human existence." Undergraduate: "Time, sir." Examiner: "How so?" Undergraduate: "Oh, it's very simple. How are you to have a boating race unless at the time to do so?"

It is better not to ask too many questions about the future. A curious husband—that is, not too curious—asked his wife, "My dear, what kind of a stone do you think they will give me when I am gone?" She answered, coolly: "Brimstone, John."

"You never saw such a happy lot of people as we had here yesterday," said a landlord in Indiana, to a newly-arrived guest. "There were thirteen couples of 'em." "What! thirteen couples just married!" "Oh, no, sir; thirteen couples just divorced."

We haven't his name, but he is a Japanese aristocrat of the first tribe, who thus writes home to his wife: "The chief branch of education of young men here is rowing. The people have large boat-houses called 'colleges,' and the principal of these are Yale and Harvard."

An old man of eighty-four and his bride, aged eighty two, entered a railway car the other day, and took a seat by the stove. A youth occupying the seat behind says he overheard the following: Old gentleman to his bride: "Who's a little lamb?" Bride: "Ifofe of us."

A boarder, the other day, after vainly endeavoring to manipulate a piece of foul, laid down his knife and fork, saying, "All the teachings of my youth, and the commands of Holy Writ, compel me to respect old age; but I'll be blowed if I can bring myself to stomach it roasted or boiled."

There's not a charm that lights the face
With so ineffable a grace,
As sweet, pink lip and ivory teeth;
And nothing now, beneath the sky,
Can beauty such as these supply.
Save SOZODONT, that wears the wreath

CAMPBELL.—Mr. Bartley Campbell's latest is a very interesting story, entitled "That Dreadful Night," which will be commenced next week in the columns of the New York Weekly. As Mr. Campbell is the most popular playwright and author of the day, his story will be looked for by the million who have witnessed his many successful plays.

WITTICISMS.

A four-in-hand is worth two in the hush.

The Fastest Train Out—The train of thought.

An honest milkman is the scarcest work of God.

A well bred way to crimp hair—With a rolling pin.

The saddest words of tongue or pen: "I'm going to pay, but I can't tell when."

It is fair to presume that there would be fewer family jars if people indulged less in pickles.

A little boy being asked what the chief end of man was, replied: "The end what's got the head on."

Many a man who wears precious stones in this world will have to be contented with brimstone in the next.

Lady: "No, thanks! I never read newspapers on Sundays." Waiter: "Beg pardon, mum, but this is a Sunday paper."

While a nun was singing, the other day, "There's a Good Time Coming," another man rose and said, "Would you kindly fix the date?"

A man was sitting for his photograph. The operator said, "Now, sir, look kind o' pleasant —smile a little." The man smiled, and then the operator exclaimed: "Oh, that will never do! It is no wide for the instrument."

A little Waterloo Sunday school miss was asked by her teacher: "What must people do in order to go to Heaven?" "Die, I suppose," replied the little one. The teacher didn't question her any further.

At an evening party a lady was called upon for a song, and began: "I'll strike again my tuneful lyre." Her husband was seen to start hurriedly from the room, remarking: "Stuff! I know it, she won't."

There is a growing feeling among the American people that the man wh can hear a fellow mortal complain of a cold in the head, and abstain from telling him what to do for it, is the man who should be the next President.

Mother-in law, holding the screaming baby: "Dear little darlin', how it looks like its papa now!" Papa wonders why it is that his wife's mother always compares the baby to him when it is crying, and not at other times.

Lady: "Why did you leave your last place?" Servant: "Well, yer see, mum, I had to pay for all my breakages, and as they came to more than my wages, yer see, mum, it was a kind of impossible that I couldn't stand."

"Once upon a time," a man met an old woman in an English town, driving several geese. "Adieu, mother of Asses," said he. "Adieu, my son!" was the old woman's reply. The fellow went on his way, feeling for his ears.

A traveler announces as a fact (and though he is "traveler" we believe that he once in his life beheld people "minding their own business." This remarkable occurrence happened at sea, the passengers being too sick to attend to each others concerns."

"Fellow citizens," said a local candidate, "there are three topics that now agitate the people—finances, tariff, and the penitentiary. I shall pass over the first two very briefly, as my sentiments are well known, and come to the penitentiary, where I shall dwell for some time."

The gas suddenly went out at a San Jose concert the other evening and when it was re-lit a young lady indignantly accused a happy-looking man who sat on the next bench of kissing her in the darkness. The man tried to explain, but some of the lady's friends seized him and proceeded to fire him out with expedition. As they reached the door, the victim managed to gasp out. "He kiss a woman— Why, I'm just divorced." That settled it. He was apologized to, and the man of experience proudly resumed his seat.

The Management of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre have for this week introduced the grand Company in their well known burlesque of "Evangeline," which has always been a great success in this city. Jarbeau, Louise Searle, G. K. Fortescue, Harry Hunter, and other popular artists.

Next week, the great Chicago success, "All the Rage," will be produced in excellent style by a fine Comedy Company, embracing William Davidge, Frank Hardenburgh, J. C. Padgett, and others of equal note. "All the Rage," is said to be one of the best comedies of the season.

FASHION NOTES.

Embroidered satins are imported by the yard to combine with plain satin de Lyon or silk.

Perhaps the most favorite visiting toilettes of the winter are still black, but they are not longer of one fabric only.

Long black kid gloves with a bracelet of small yellow rose buds at the top is one of the caprices of semi-dress toilettes.

The imported brocades are indescribable, so intricately are their quaint colors blended, and through it all are irregular threads of silver or of gold.

The Oriental cashmeres are so popular that they are now imported in pale rose, blue, and gold tints to combine with the light colors of evening dresses.

Large creamy ten-rose buds end the decked Isabelle spanish roses are worn with garnet, peacock blue, lavender gray, or black toilettes on dressy occasions.

Small yellow chrysanthemums as bright-tinted as buttercups are as popular as the daisy bouquets worn during the summer, and will remain fresh several days.

There is also a fancy for a bunch of the fragrant green leaves of the rose geranium; these are so popular that one of the favorite "incepins," this winter represents these leaves made of green tinted gold.

For the rich materials imported this season, princess designs will reign over all others, and all that is showy in color and graceful in garment will unite in making this queenly model more and more elegant.

Artificial bouquets for the corsage are worn both in the house and street, and are worn on the dresses imported from the best Parisian houses. Natural flowers are, however, greatly preferred, and ladies who can obtain them use fresh natural flowers all winter.

The novelty of the season as a polonaises is the design which is latteaded for ladies who do not select coats, basques, and jackets as their first choice. It is also intended for the street, and for formal visiting, in which case it is made of velvet, or the richest fabrics of silk and wool.

The white toilo reticulerie, or nun's cloth, which is really all-wool French bunting, is very popular this winter for full dress toilettes for children and misses. It is very handsome and effective when combined with pale cloth of gold, which is really oriental cashmere with many gold threads in it.

New basques are in some cases made long enough to give the pouder effect, commonly seen upon the overskirt. Such designs are always worn with a well-trimmed skirt, and are either close and very bigs at the throat, or they are cut as surplice form and filled in with folds of pearl lace, edged with a narrow trimming.

The Jersey costume webbing of wool or silk is supplied by the yard in the two colors most in demond—navy-blue and myrtle green. The long cuirass bodices made from this are so elastic that they mould themselves to the figure in short seams, except at the sides, where the edges are joined by overcasting as in the seam of underwear.

Cloth, or camel's-hair, or satin de Lyon, is substituted for velvet in many costumes made by this design, and the bronde may be of silk instead of wool, and of one color in place of several. A similar design is also used for mourning toilettes, the vest and apron being of English crape, and the remainder of imperiel serge or of Henrietta cloth.

The Spanish marriage has brought Spanish colors and styles into vogue in Paris, and in clistes are combining red and yellow in very rich toilettes. The newest Indiana costume is a skirt of dark Capucine satin de Lyon, with a basque of garnet velvet. The Spanish veil is also much in favor, and is shown by modistes here in both black and white Spanish lace. Red and yellow ostrich plumes form their only setsin or lace honnets.

The long scarfs for extra wraps described lately by Madame Raymond have already appeared on Fifth avenue. They are long doubled scarfs of stripped India camel's-hair of finer quality and pattern and more subdued in color than the striped long shawls worn as traveling wraps. They are worn doubled, with the ends lengthwise, placed high on the shoulders like a scarf, and are fastened by a large brooch-clasp of smoked pearl or of oxidized silver.

In selecting velvet it is desirable to get that with elastic pile that will be least easily flattened by use. Some of the richest velvets with thickest pile are often the most easily marred, the way to test this is for the purchaser to obtain samples, and crease them by pressing a sharp edged paper-knife against the pile, or in other ways, and also moistening it slightly. If the pile does not come up after the pressure is removed, it certainly will not resist that which comes with even the most careful usage.

The newest lace cravat is a large lace bow called the Merveilleuse, in imitation of the bows worn during the French Revolution. It may be made of any trimming lace by sewing the straight ends together, and of this forming an ordinary bow of two long loops and two ends strepped in the centre; below this the lace is thes formed into a jabot shaped like a fan, the two shell-like rows coming together in a point below. This point reaches nearly to the waistline, while the large bow is high about the throat—indeed, just under the chin.

While coat sleeves are as tight as they can be worn in street suits, Worth is gradually reviving fuller sleeves for house dresses, especially for grand toilettes. Some of these suggest the mutton-leg sleeve, as they are gathered in at the arm-hole, and edge narrower toward the wrist, where they are again slightly gathered to a narrow band on the outside seam, and are finished with a small flat square cuff. This is very handsome when the cuff is covered with lace laid flat on the outside, and with a gathered lace frill inside.

Another bow, called the butterfly, has two little pleated pieces of white India muslin strapped tightly where they are joined, and this forms the centre. Wide lace, either Languedoc, or duchess, or Valenciennes, is then sewed to the pleated ends and when the bow is worn the upper edge of this lace is pinned high about the collar, and it is allowed to fall open below and display the pretty design formed upon it. The butterfly bow is also made of black Chine crape edged with the black hand painted lace which is now the season.

Among the latest importations are quaintly colored French cashmere wrought all over with polka dots of the same color; these come in gray, brown, green, and blue. They are to be used for the principal part of a costume that may be combined with silk, satin, or velvet. They are also seperate embroidered pieces representing fence, flowers, and fringe, through all of one color, and scalloped on the edge; these are to be used for side panels, aprons, scarfs, and shawls. The new square-cornered revers now made length wise in front and side breadths.

GRAMMAR IN RHYME.

It is seldom that one sees so much valuable matter as the following lines contain, comprised in so brief a space. Every little grammarian must entertain upon the mysteries of syntax, will find it highly advantageous to commit the whole to memory, as by so doing many a "black mark" will be avoided, for with these rules and the help tongues and one need never mistake a part of speech:

1. Three little words you often see,
   Are, a, and the.
2. A Noun's the name of anything,
   As school or pupil, pool or swing
3. Adjectives tell the kind of Noun,
   As great, small, pretty, white, or brown.
4. Instead of Noun the Pronoun stand—
   Her head, his face, your arm, my hand.
5. Verbs tell of doing to be done—
   To read, count, sing, laugh, jump, or run.
6. How things are done the Adverbs tell,
   As slowly, quietly, ill, or well.
7. Conjunctions join the words together—
   As men and women, with or whether.
8. The Preposition stands before
   A Noun, as in or through a door.
9. The Interjection shows surprise,
   As oh! or how pretty!—ah! how wise.

The whole are called Nine Parts of Speech, Which reading, writing, speaking teach.

The Ladies Say So.

The fashion in hair dress is fully developed at L. SHAW'S, 51 West Fourteenth street, New York, for at this house is kept one of the largest stocks in this country, and it is there the newest fashions originate. The ladies say this from the fact that they get the latest styles in their hair goods there and are posted on the manner of arranging the head-dress, which is one of the first things a lady should be posted in.

A Rare Chance.

A rare chance is now offered to the ladies of this city to purchase Millinery Goods. Mr. J. Rothschild advertises in another column to sell, at a great reduction in prices for a few days prior to taking stock, all kinds of first-class millinery goods; and from the prices of a few of the goods given we should say it is a rare chance, and that the ladies should avail themselves of this opportunity to purchase from this high ly reputable house.

Molasses Facts.

The introduction of the Pasheuil Molasses Candy into this city by HUYLER, who is so celebrated in this line of business, was one of the events that has caused so many of the ladies and gents to call frequently in demand, as the records at the Brooklyn store, No. 889 Fulton street, will bear the most positive proof.

There is no sweetness so pure,
Unless you're kissing your best lake pe'ple,
That's why they share in inventing titles.
For it SUGGAT at once, as sweet girls:
For it shone given to the month.

"Is this a fair?" asked a stranger, stopping in front of a place where a festival was in progress, and addressing a citizen. "Well," replied the citizen, "they call it fair, but they take everybody in." He probably had invested in a ticket in an oyster soup lottery, and had drawn a blank.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

This week Colonel Sinn introduces the great Dutch comedian, Mr. Gus Williams, in the comedy-drama, "Our German Senator." Mr. Williams has always been a big favorite in Brooklyn, but now, that he has something really good and something that calls on him to show what a "German Senator" can do, you may expect a very fine evening's entertainment. His new play is one of the greatest successes of the season. Don't fail to see him. Every evening this week and at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Mr. H. J. Byron's charming comedy, "Our Girls," will be brought out in good style. During its run at Wallack's it received the highest praise from the press. Mr. George R. Edeson and Miss Rose Rand will be included in the cast which will be composed of the best artists.

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

"Forty of them!" Haverly's famous United Mastodon Minstrels, consisting of forty of the choicest of this entertaining class of artists, will occupy the stage of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre this week and give one of the finest minstrel entertainments ever witnessed in this city. The Company includes the same names in this city. They will all (forty) appear at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week the celebrated American romantic drama of "Davy Crockett" will be presented by Joe Frank Mayo and his own Company. Frank Mayo and "Davy Crockett" are well known all over the United States, and no better performance is given than this beautiful American play. It will be mounted in the most lavish style and cast to the full strength of Mayo's excellent Company.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

One of the finest attractions of the season is this week offered at the Novelty Theatre. Mr. Frank Mayo and his excellent Company are rendering "Davy Crockett," in which Mr. Mayo has a world-wide reputation. His performance in this beautiful romantic drama is something one never tires of. He will appear at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week will be one of fun, and lots of it, as Haverly's United Mastodon Minstrels, forty strong, and those forty of the best in the profession, will be on hand. You can imagine what an entertainment it will be. As they only come once a year, don't miss seeing them, or you will regret it. Other first class attractions will follow in succession during the entire season

ITEMS ABOUT WOMEN.

The income of Queen Victoria amounts to $2,000,000 per annum.

The Empress of Austria visits Ireland again in February for the hunting season.

Queen Victoria can use the deaf and dumb alphabet with neatness and dispatch.

Countess Danner left property to the amount of $2,000,000 to found an institution to train girls for household work.

Mr. Tiburtius, wife of the Surgeon-General of Germany, is a leading dentist of Berlin and attends the royal family.

It is said that no woman who was ever elected to office, in Wyoming or elsewhere, ever had an offer of marriage afterward.

Mrs. Nathaniel Greene, of Middletown, Connecticut, who married the son of General Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary fame, celebrated her ninety-sixth birthday a few days ago.

Madame Carla Serena is the first woman who has ever been elected to membership in the Imperial Royal Society of Austria. This honor was recently paid her upon her return from long travel in the Caucasus and Persia.

In Illinois, as well as in many other States, there are women who conduct large farms successfully. A story is told of two in that State who though in broken health, bought a twelve acre farm, put out a grapery and have a beautiful home.

Miss Yocums, a school-teacher at Kittits Valley, Oregon, has taken up a land claim, fenced it, built a house, and this year raised 512 bushels of grain, besides teaching school. She says she does not mean to marry until she can support a husband.

Miss Rogers, a cousin of Richard Cobden, has just distinguished herself at Oxford, where her examinations have been the wonder of the university. She is a brilliant writer of Latin verse, and admirable in prose. She has just been appointed lecturer at Somerville Hall.

A pious woman was recently before a London police court for "disturbing, acting, trouning and disquieting" a clergyman who conducting service in the church which she had devoutly attended for years. Her offence consisted in making "a most shocking noise," which she considered singing, but which was a nuisance to everybody else. It was found to be incurable and could no longer be endured.

Mrs. Eaton, who died a few days since in Washington, was a historical person there fifty years ago. She leaves a daughter, the beautiful Virginia Timberlake, now the Duchesse de Sanyayo, of Paris, and the mother-in-law of one of the Rothschilds. Mrs. Eaton's first husband was Mr. Timberlake, a purser in the navy; her second husband was John H. Eaton, Secretary of War in President Jackson's Cabinet.

Lady Anne Blunt, the granddaughter of Byron, is a notable instance of the traveling English woman. She went with her husband, Mr. Wilfrid Scawen Blunt, to Central Arabia. At one time, after traveling for days without seeing any living creatures except a few Bedouins and camels, the hymn they were suddenly taken prisoners by a band of Bedouin horsemen, who afterwards made profuse apologies for having attacked a lady unawares and set them free.

The Sisters of Charity in the United States numbered at a recent enumeration eleven hundred and seventy-nine, in charge of one hundred and six establishments for the care of orphans, infants, foundlings, hospitals and school children. All of these institutions, if we read correctly, had their origin in the consecration and labors of one woman. That is to say, Mrs. Eliza Seton, better known as Mother Seton, began in 1806, at Emmitsburg, in Maryland, the formation of a sisterhood in connection with a school, and which is the parent of similar societies, now widely scattered throughout America.

A young physician in California was engaged to be married to a young lady in a Southern State, and as a keepsake sent her a small nugget of gold. He was prosperous, and the wedding was fixed for an early date. But a sudden fall in his circumstance reduced him to poverty. Too honorable to hold the young lady to her promise in his altered circumstances, he reluctantly and with many a heart-pang wrote releasing her from her engagement. But the young lady had a brave heart, and resolved on sending her promise in spite of the change in her lover's position. She took the little nugget of gold and had it made into a ring, which she sent to the young physician. On the ring was the inscription: "Entrust me not to leave thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." (Ruth i., 16.)

FASHION NOTES.

Stoores are mounted in more solid work than formerly, and diamonds look especially well when set in silver.

Velvet lace, a new trimming, is velvet embroidered in open work, and when worn over white satin has a fine effect.

Cloth surtouts shaped like the heavy overcoats worn by gentlemen are favorite garments with ladies this season.

Dresses not designed for walking, shopping, or traveling are made half-long, short costumes being reserved solely for the street.

The handsomest belts are made of colored silk and are hand pasted. Black ones are the most effective when painted in bright colors.

Watch chains for ladies are like the short bar chains worn by gentlemen, or else they are chatelaines suspended from a pin on one side.

Gloves of undressed kid are the leading preference for the small, full-sized evening. Dressed kid is the choice for evening wear.

Fancy pocket-handkerchiefs are a rage this season, and a lady's wardrobe is scarcely complete without a handkerchief to match each toilette.

The new lace, called point lanqueice, is fast becoming the rival of breton. It has the appearance of real old lace and is handsomer than breton.

The plain gold lace pins are not nearly so large as those of last season, and are best liked when very light and slender and in some artistic design.

The open worked galloons, richly worked, imitating cathedral fret work, are very expensive, but add to the value of a toilet as much as real point.

A novelty in bridal dresses is in hand painting upon the front and sides, or on a border to the train and basque. The design is fine and the coloring delicate.

Utrecht velvet is one of the handsomest materials for making the embroidered and applique mantelets, which are fashionable and are so fashionable at present.

Costumes of black plush are the latest novelty. They are trimmed with black satin, and a jet collar and jet ornaments are placed on the front and cuffs of the jacket.

Entire dresses are no longer made of plain material, whether satin, silk, or woolen, but goods are always combined with pekin, embossed velvet, damask, or brocade.

This season the demand for light laces is represented by a collection of soft, shaded lace half linen, half cotton, in the most beautiful point d'esprit, often called tulle esprit.

The popular novelty of the season in trimming furs, is Vicuna, the coat of a South American sheep which bears this name. The fur is long, soft and wavy, and is a pale shade.

Many of the best princess designs show basque effects in the front, while the back is the plain and shapely princess form. This admits of extra trimming for the front of the design.

Some beautiful fans are made of pasteboard, covered with silk and finely painted. The edge of the fan is finished with plaited ribbon or lace; the handle is of ivory.

The handsomest collars for children are of white Russia lace with upright finish of narrow lace in the neck. Under not so pretty are in deep round shape of embroidered muslin edged with lace.

Silk dresses are mostly made with square trim, shirred tablar, and plaited scarf forming the double skirt. The full plain bodice is trimmed with facings of some pretty figured silk fabric.

Among the pretty things brought from Vienna for holiday gifts are the leather articles, which it is the fashion this year to have in light shades of cream, gray, olive or else in black.

Two and three materials continue to be used for evening dresses, and these are trimmed elaborately. Flowers are the commonly employed, bead trimming, fringes and cord garniture are substituted.

Irish poplin has been revived in England, in order to help the Irish manufacturers through the hard times, and this material is used instead of silk to make circulins. They are fur lined and are handsome.

The chief embellishment of neckties this season is embroidery and hemstitch work. Fine linen cambric is employed for the latter; those of cambric and batiste are wrought in French colors that are warranted to hold.

Scarfs of point d'esprit folded around the neck and carried quite to the belt are seen; but this lace at a little distance is too solid in appearance; ladies like better white cravats of batiste, with finger-deep trimmings of point d'esprit bordering lace upon the ends.

The unterfall most worn this winter, and which will continue to be worn until the beginning of summer, is satin in every color, and for the principal parts as well as for the accessories of a toilette. A dress of satin combined with embossed velvet is the most beautiful and stately of elegant toilettes.

Small bonnets to match costumes are the height of good taste, and ladies who can afford them are not without bonnets, as well as gloves, all of monotone color; but they have for independent service, elegant hats of black velvet and black satin, which are both plain and figured, and used either in conjunction or separately. Shapes are varied.

Turbins bonnets are the favorite shape for young ladies. They consist merely of a large round crown, with or without drooping fringe or quilling in front, but invariably have strings of satin ribbon that fasten under a row of loug loops and short ends just behind the left ear. This bonnet is worn quite far back on the head and displays the front hair.

The fashions for evening dresses are simp'er in make than those of last year; they are also of richer material. Basques with skirts are preferred to wrappers and over dress robes. The prevailing fabric are fancy figured or stamped flannels, as well as basket figured and honey comb woolens The hand-somest sacques are lined with white silk. They are trimmed with lace or n rich broche border laid smoothly on. Bows of ribbon showing the same colors are added.

Shot silks are also much used for evening dresses in combination with brocades that combine the colors in the changeable silk. Thus an amber silk shot with rose has brocaded sides of amber ground nearly cover-d with dark red brocaded figures. A fringe of amber beads forms the trimming on the front and finishes the alternate breadths of brocade silk and shot silk. Another novelty is velvet with colored figures upon it, made up with satin to correspond with the color in the figure. Thus dark blue velvet has roses in old gold shades strewn upon it, and is combined with old gold satin.

Breakfast caps of Languedoc lace are in square close shapes, with three frills of the lace across the front, a plait down the right side, some shell-pleatings on the back and left side, while two of the new full rosettes now worn on much French lingerie are made of creamy white satin, and held near the front by two round cluster brooches of brilliants. Other caps for older ladies rea in Marie Antoinette shapes with deep gathered ruffles, and laid flat as in plents, but soft, full, and careless-looking; these also have brilliants for ornaments, while other lace caps are trimmed with a large bow of ribbon, in Spanish fashion.

The Panchon, or handkerchief-shaped bonnet, is again revived, and is liked because it is so universally becoming, and is so simple that a lady can make it without the aid of a milliner. The crown of these is pointed in front, lies flat on the top of the head, and has no brim. It is very pretty when covered with red or black satin, across which rows of black beaded Breton lace are slightly gathered. Some large loops of black satin or of garnet ribbon form a bow on top quite far back, which is partly covered by the beaded lace. The strings are then of black satin ribbon, edged on the lower side with lace to match, with the new curled fringe, or else they are made of satin and entirely trimmed; these strings fasten under the chin, not on the side.

The artistic tapestries in quaint designs and dull, dark colors are the richest fabrics for dividing velvet dresses. They come in single breadths, a yard wide, and are not cut up in overskirts, but are draped around the figure with a scarf or sash to form an apron effect, a strap than confines the sides, and one or two ends finished with fringe hung behind. A collar and cuffs of the tapestry are added to the velvet coat or basque. This makes a most elegant yet simple costume when black velvet is used, and the tapestry combines dull red with olive, old gold, and pale blue shades. The tapestry costs $30 a metre. The buttons on the basque repeat the colors of the tapestry, and the bonnet of black velvet must have the same colors either in the silk used for trimming, or in the feathers, or else in beaded ornaments.

Beautiful Kid Gloves.

If there is one thing more than an other that ladies admire, and look for, it is a nice Kid Glove, and those made under the new system are simply in reality and shade can gratify their wishes at C. T. Jones', importer, 1,467 Broadway, New York, (under the Coleman House,) where all the Parisian styles are on exhibition; also a full line of ladies' fine hosiery.

The lily is as white as snow,
The rose is as the crimson red,
But neither one can surpass in glow,
The color for the bright cheek glad,
By the sweet lips and teeth alike
That SOZODONT has purified.

SMILES.

Hark, I hear the ladies say,
"He has such a winning way."
That's to say, his breath is sweet,
And his teeth are white and neat.
And he smiles, as is his wont,
Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. Ask anyone who has used SOZODONT, what he or she thinks of it, and the reply will be strongly affirmative of its excellence. All druggists keep it.

"How dear to my heart are the scines of my childhood," mutters the lazy fisherman as he mended the old nets.

Pat: "Do ye buy rags and bones here?" Rag Merchant: "We do surr." Pat: "Thin be jabers put me on the schales."

A Parisian actress recently remarked to a friend, "I don't see any use wearing monogram stockings this kind of weather."

When a Milwaukee peper remarked, recently, "The lilac bunies are budding," a reader said, excitedly, "You lilac Satan."

Flees will flee from the scent of the oil of pennyroyal. This is cheaper than catching them, if you have got anything else to do.

Old Gentleman: "Waiter, how's this? The potatoes are quite hard." Waiter (with presence of mind): "Hard times, you know, sir."

A clergyman said, the other day, that modern young ladies were not the daughters of them who lived in Ham, but the daughters of Ham and Shem.

It is not true that it has ever yet been satisfactorily explained why a baby always gets the reputation of being like the richest member of the family.

It is not true that a merried man can ever become a bird, although when he comes home at two in the morning his wife very often makes him quail.

An exchange thinks it queer that blonde women should be regarded as frights in Russia. Well, we don't know; but there are some around here we are afraid of

A school girl was recently asked at an examination, by a gentleman, to tell him what Adam lost by his fall; and when pressed, she replied, "I suppose it was his hat."

A five-year-old city boy told his mother how to make butter: "You just take a long stick with a cross at the end of it; then you get a big tub, and then jou borrow a cow."

The New Testament says: "Now I suppoze you know that there are three times as much water as land upon the surface of the earth!" Tommy: "I should think so, indeed. Look at the puddles!"

"Come, Bill, it's ten o'clock, and I think we had better be going, for it is time honest men were at home." "Well, yes," was the answer, "I must be off, but you needn't hurry on that account."

The way to reach a man's heart is to cater to his appetite. A girl that can claw a piano and agitate the atmosphere is a good parlor ornament, but one that can grease a griddle and turn two pancakes at a time, is the kind of a female to tie to in time of the year.

A citizen of New Mexico being informed that his absent wife had married and attached his wife, and she had beaten off and killed the animal, he shrugged his shoulders, and said: "If that panther had knowed her as well as I do, be'd a never rifled her dander up, you bet."

"Is this a fair?" asked a stranger, stopping in front of a place where a festival was in progress, and addressing a citizen. "Well," replied the citizen, "they call it fair, but they take everybody in." He probably had invested in a ticket in an oyster soup lottery, and had drawn a blank.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

One of the finest attractions of the season is this week offered at the Novelty Theatre. Mr. Frank Mayo and his excellent Company are rendering "Davy Crockett," in which Mr. Mayo has a world-wide reputation. His performance in this beautiful romantic drama is something one never tires of. He will appear at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week will be one of fun, and lots of it, as Haverly's United Mastodon Minstrels, forty strong, and those forty of the best in the profession, will be on hand. You can imagine what an entertainment it will be. As they only come once a year, don't miss seeing them, or you will regret it. Other first class attractions will follow in succession during the entire season

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

"Forty of them!" Haverly's famous United Mastodon Minstrels, consisting of forty of the choicest of this entertaining class of artists, will occupy the stage of Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre this week and give one of the finest minstrel entertainments ever witnessed in this city. The Company includes many favorite names to this city. They will all (forty) appear at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week the celebrated American romantic drama of "Davy Crockett" will be presented by Mr. Frank Mayo and his own Company. Frank Mayo and "Davy Crockett" are well known all over the United States, and no better performance is given than this beautiful American play. It will be mounted in excellent style and cast to the full strength of Mayo's excellent Company.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

This week Colonel Sinn introduces the great Dutch comedian, Mr. Gus Williams, in the comedy-drama, "Our German Senator." Mr. Williams has always been a big favorite in Brooklyn, but now, that he has something really good and something that calls on him to show what a "German Senator" can do, you may expect a very fine evening's entertainment. His new play is one of the greatest successes of the season. Don't fail to see him. Every evening this week and at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Next week Mr. H. J. Byron's charming comedy, "Our Girls," will be brought out in good style. During its run at Wallack's it received the highest praise from the press. Mr. George R. Edeson and Miss Rosa Rand will be included in the cast which will be composed of the best artists.

ITEMS ABOUT WOMEN.

The income of Queen Victoria amounts to $2,000,000 per annnn.

The Empress of Austria visits Ireland again in February for the hunting season.

Queen Victoria can use the deaf and dumb alphabet with neatness and dispatch.

Countess Danner left property to the amount of $2,000,000 to found an institution to train girls for household work.

Mr. Tiburtius, wife of the Surgeon-General of Germany, is a leading dentist of Berlin and attends the royal family.

It is said that no woman who was ever elected to office, in Wyoming or elsewhere, ever had an offer of marriage afterward.

Mrs. Nathaniel Greene, of Middletown, Connecticut, who married the son of General Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary fame, celebrated her ninety sixth birthday a few days ago.

Madame Carla Serena is the first woman who has ever been elected to membership in the Imperial Royal Society of Austria. This honor was recently paid her upon her return from long travel in the Caucasus and Persia.

In Illinois, as well as in many other States, there are women who conduct large farms successfully. A story is told of two in that State who though in broken health, bought a twelve acre farm, put out a grapery and have a beautiful home.

Miss Yocums, a school-teacher at Kittitz Valley, Oregon, has taken up a land claim, fenced it, built a house, and this year raised 612 bushels of grain, besides teaching school. She says she does not mean to marry until she can support a husband.

Miss Rogers, a cousin of Richard Cobden, has just distinguished herself at Oxford, where her examinations have been the wonder of the university. She is a brilliant writer of Latin verse, and adnirable in prose. She has just been appointed lecturer at Somerville Hall.

A pious woman was recently before a London police court for "disturbing, vexing, troubling and disquieting" a clergyman while conducting service in the church which she had devoutly attended for years. Her offence consisted in making "a most shocking noise," which she considered singing, but which was a nuisance to everybody else. It was found to be incurable and could no longer be endured.

Mrs. Eaton, who died a few days since in Washington, was a historical person there fifty years ago. She leaves a daughter, the beautiful Virginia Timberlake, now the Duchesse de Sampay, of Paris, and the mother-in-law of one of the Rothschilds. Mrs. Eaton's first husband was Mr. Timberlake, a purser in the navy; her second husband was John H. Eaton, Secretary of War in President Jackson's Cabinet.

Lady Anne Blunt, the granddaughter of Byron, is a notable instance of the traveling English woman. She went with her husband, Mr. Wilfrid Scawen Blunt, to Central Arabia. At one time, after traveling for five days without seeing any living creatures except a few hares and gazelles and one hyena, they were suddenly taken prisoners by a band of Bedouin horsemen, who afterwards made profuse apologies for having attacked a lady unawares and set them free.

The Sisters of Charity in the United States numbered at a recent enumeration eleven hundred and seventy-nine, in charge of one hundred and six establishments for the care of orphans, infants, widows, patients, insane and school children. All of these institutions, if we read correctly, had their origin in the consecration and labors of one woman. That is to say, Mrs. Eliza Seton, better known as Mother Seton, began in 1808, at Emmetsburg, in Maryland, the formation of a sisterhood in connection with a school, and that was the parent of similar societies, now widely scattered throughout America.

A young physician in California was engaged to be married to a young lady in a Southern State, and as a trousseau sent her a small nugget of gold. He was prosperous, and the wedding was fixed for an early date. But a sudden fall in his circumstance reduced him to poverty. Too honorable to hold the young lady to her promise in his altered circumstances, he reluctantly sad with many a heart-pang wrote releasing her from her engagement. But the young lady had a brave heart, and resolved on keeping her promise in spite of the change in her lover's position. She took the little nugget of gold and had it made into a ring, which she sent to the young physician. On the ring was the inscription "Entreat me not to leave thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." (Ruth i., 16.)

A New Feature.

RAVEN, justly claiming the title of the "Leading American Confectioner," is now making to order, for sale, or to hire, evening dresses of the most elaborate description. The Raven Confectionery Co., Limited, Constitution, in fact anything and everything needed for Private Theatricals, Parties, Tableaux, &c. Brooklyn patrons can take any of the stages of the Third Avenue "L." RAVEN, 62 East Twelfth street, between Broadway and Fourth avenue.

$300 for $50.

Ticket No. 9,955 in the "Little Havana," decided by Hon. J. Hayward, December 23d, was sold through Hoadley & Hall's agency, 250 Fulton street, to come and draw $50. This was a good investment. The drawings of the Royal Havana are never doubted.

Diamonds.

There is no decrease in the elegant display of Diamonds at HARRY BROS., corner of Fulton and Johnson Streets. Their stock is the largest now in this city, and they sell at fair prices.

Ladies love the Opera, and the gents, who have a great regard for the ladies generally, go to VAN SEVEREN'S Opera Cigar Store for a good cigar. The favor of a good cigar is always agreeable to a lady. VANDEVEER is at the corner of Fulton and Court street.

FASHION NOTES.

Stones are mounted in more solid work than formerly, and diamonds look especially well when set in silver.

Velvet lace, a new trimming, is velvet embroidered in open work, and when worn over white satin has a fine effect.

Cloth surtouts shaped like the heavy overcoats worn by gentlemen are favorite garments with ladies this season.

Dresses designed for walking, shopping or traveling are made half-long, short costumes being reserved solely for the street.

The fashionable belts are made of colored silk and are hand painted. Black ones are the most effective when painted in bright colors.

Watch chains for ladies are 1 ke the short bar chains worn by gentlemen, or else they are chatelaines suspended from a pin on one side.

Gloves of undressed kid are the leading preference for the street, shopping or walking. Dressed kid is the choice for evening wear.

Fancy pocket-handkerchiefs are a rage this season, and a lady's wardrobe is scarcely complete without a handkerchief to match each toilette.

The new lace, called point lanquedoc, is fast becoming the rival of hreton. It has the appearance of real old lace and is handsomer than brotos.

The plain gold lace pins are not nearly so large as those of last season, and are best liked when very light and slender and in some artistic design.

The open worked galloons, richly worked, imitating cathedral fret work, are very effective, but add to the expense of a dress very much as real point.

A novelty is tinsel dresses is in hand painting upon the front and sides, or as a border to the train and lauge. The design is fine and the coloring delicate.

Utrecht velvet is one of the handsomest materials for making the embroidered and appliqued mantel, table and bracket covers that are so fashionable at present.

Costumes of black plush are the latest novelty. They are trimmed with black satin, and a jet collar and jet ornaments are placed on the front and cuffs of the jacket.

Entire dresses are no longer made of plain material, whether satin or velvet. The plain goods are always combined with pekin, embossed velvet, damask, or brocade.

This season the demand for light laces is represented by a collection of soft, shaded laces half linen, and shades most of a South American sheep which bears this name. The lace is long, soft and wooly and of a yellow shade.

Many of the best princess designs show basque effects in the front, while the back is the plain and shapely princess form. This adds a deal of extra trimming for the front of the design.

Some beautiful fans are made of pasteboard covered with silk and finely painted. The edge of the fan is finished with plaited ribbon or lace; the handle is of ivory. They are small in size.

The handsomest collars for children are of white Russia lace with upright finish of narrow lace in the back. Collars are so pretty are in deep round shape of embroidered cambric edged with lace.

Silk dresses are mostly made with square train, shirred tatller, and plaited scarf forming the double skirt. The light lining bodice is trimmed with facings of some pretty figured silk fabric.

Among the pretty things brought from Vienna for holiday gifts are the leather articles, which it is the fashion this year to have in light shades of cream, gray, olive or else in black.

Two and three materials coatiane to be used for evening dresses, and these are trimmed elaborately. Flowers are enormously employed, head trimming, fringes and cord garniture are substituted.

Irish poplin has been revived in England, in order to help the Irish manufacturers through the hard times, and this material is used instead of silk to make circulars. They are fur lined and are handsome.

The chief embellishment of neckties this season is embroidery and hemstitch work. Fine lines cambric is used for the latter; those of cambric and tattiste are wrought in French colors that are warranted to hold.

Scarfs of point d'esprit folded around the neck and carried quite to the belt are seen, but this lace at a little distance is too solid in appearance; ladies like better white cravats of batiste, with finger-deep trimmings of point d'esprit bordering lace upon the ends.

The material most worn this winter, and which will continue to be worn until the beginning of summer, is satin in every color, and for the principal parts as well as for the accessories of a toilette. A dress of satin combined with embossed velvet is the most beautiful and stately of elegant toilettes.

Small bonnets to match costumes are the height of good taste, and ladies who can afford them are not without bonnets, as well as gloves, all of monotone color; but they have for independent service, elegant hats of black velvet and black satin, which are both plain and figured, and used either in conjunction or separately. Shapes are varied.

Turban hoants are the favorite shape for young ladies. They consist merely of a large round crown, with or without dropping fringe or quilling in front, but invariably have strings of satin ribbon that fasten under a bow of long loops and short ends just behind the left ear. This bonnet is worn quite far back on the head and displays the front hair.

The fashions for evening dresses are simp'er in make than those of last year; they are also of richer material. Sacques with skirts are preferred to wrappers and over dressy robes. The prevailing fabric are fancy figured or stamped flannels, as well as basket figured and honey comb woolens The hand-somest sacques are lined with white silk. They are trimmed with lace or a rich brocke border laid smoothly on. Rows of ribbon showing the same colors are added.

Shot silks are also much used for evening dresses in combination with brocade that combi-nes the colors in the changeable silk. Thus an amber silk shot with rose has brocaded sides of amber ground nearly cover.d with dark red brocaded figures. A fringe of amber beads forms the trimming on the front and the train has alternate breaths of brocaded silk and shot silk. Another novelty is velvet with colored figures upon it, made up with satin to correspond with the color in the figure. Thus dark blue velvet has roses in old gold shades strewn upon it, and is combined with old gold satin.

Breakfast caps of Languedoc lace are in square close shapes, with three frills of the lace across the front, a jaket down the right side, some shell-pleatings on the back and left side, while two of the new full rosettes are seen on much French lingerie are made of creamy white satin, and hold over the front by two round cluster brocches of brilliants. Other caps for older ladies are in Marie Antoinette shapes with lace gathered ruffles, and laid flat as in pleats, but soft, full, and careless-looking; these also have brilliants for ornaments, while other lace caps are trimmed with a large bow of ribbon tying in Alsacian fashion.

The Paschca, or handkerchief-shaped bonnet, is again revived, and is liked because it is so universally becoming, and is so simple that a lady can make it without the aid of a milliner. The same shape is adopted in frost, lies flat on the top of the head, and has no strings. It is very pretty when covered with red or black satin, across which rows of black beaded Bretos lace are slightly gathered. Some have a bow and ends of the same velvet ribbon form a bow on top quite far back, which is partly covered by the beaded lace. The strings are thes of black satin ribbon, edged on the lower side with lace or velvet, to sew curled fringe, or else they are made of doubled net similarly trimmed; these strings fasten under the chin, not on the side.

The artistic tapestries in quaint designs and dull, faded colors are the richest fabrics for dressing velvet dresses. They come in single widths about a yard wide, and are not cut up in overskirts, but are draped around the figure from a scarf or sash to form an apron effect; a strap then confines the sides, and one or two ends finished with fringe hang behind. A collar and cuffs of the tapestry are added to the velvet coat or basque. This makes a most elegant yet simple costume when black velvet is used, and the tapestry combines dull red with olive, old gold, and pale blue shades. The tapestry costs $30 a metre. The buttons on the basque repeat the colors of the tapestry, and the bonnet of black velvet must have the same colors either in the silk used for trimming, or in the feathers, or else in beaded ornaments.

Always using SOZODONT.

Smiles are becoming only when the lips display pretty teeth. It is also very desirable that the breath should be sweet. SOZODONT produces both of these results, is purely botanic in its ingredients, imparts a coral tint to the gums, removes every trace of tartar from the teeth, and is indorsed by members of the MEDICAL, DRAMATIC and MUSICAL professions. In every class of society, SOZODONT is recognized as the dentifrice which beautifies and preserves. WITTICISMS.

Nobody's Child—Joshua, the son of Nun.

Political Advice—If at first you don't succeed, lie, lie again.

No matter how little you overwork a horse, his sufferings are "unspeakable."

Every man is made better by the possession of a good picture, if it is only a landscape on the back of a hundred dollar note.

An exchange talks of "the land of rubber," and the schoolboy, with a taste for geography, says, "What an easy country to bound."

"What kind of a carpet shall we get for the parson's study?" said a church committeeman of his colleague. "Ax-minster," was the comprehensive reply.

"The worse does of 'hop bitters' I ever had," said a young man, "was the other night when I took a girl to a hop, and some other fellow danced with her every set."

A French poodle is about opening a "hymeneal academy" in this city, at which young ladies will be taught marriage service, with all the proper nobs, sighs, and hysterics, in three easy lessons.

"Tom," said a girl to her sweetheart, "you have been paying your distresses to me long enough. It is time you made known your contentions, so as not to keep me in expense any longer."

He was reading in the paper the other evening of Dodd, Brown & Co.'s failure. When little five-year-old went to bed that night, she said, "Mamma, who shall I pray to now that Dod has failed?"

In the "Life of Wilberforce" is the following entry in his diary: "Went to hear Mr. Foster. Felt much devotion, and wondered at a man who fell asleep during the psalms. During the sermon I was fain to sleep myself."

"Mamma, did they used to have carriages in Jerusalem?" asked a very little boy just from the Sunday-school. "I don't know, dear; why?" "Because I heard the minister talking to-day about the Hacks of the Apostles."

When a man is hanging by his toes from the cornice of a high building, and expects momentarily to drop, nothing so completely reassures and so thoroughly satisfies him as the sudden discovery that he is safely at home in bed.

A fair one wrote to her lover, begging him to send her some money. She added by way of postscript: "I am so ashamed of the request I made in this letter that I sent after the postman to get it back, but the servant could not overtake him."

"And now, young gentleman, which of you can tell me the name of the greatest of the planets—the champion planet, so to speak—of our solar system?" "Come, it's Saturn." "And how is that, pray?" "Why, because he carries the belt."

"Yat a monster language," said a Frenchman. "Here I read in ze newspapers zat ten convicts is murder, are committed for trial, and zan committed himself to a reporter. No wonder everyzing in a hurry is done by committees."

"Oh, my dear sir," said a sufferer to a dentist, "that is the second wrong tooth you've pulled out." "Very sorry, my dear sir," said the kindhearted operator, "but we always were only three altogether when I began, I'm sure to be right the next time."

A Family Portrait.—A gentleman in Paris paid a visit, the other day, to a lady, in whose parlor he saw the portrait of a lovely woman, of, say, five-and-twenty. Upon the entrance of the lady, her visitor asked her if the picture was a family portrait, and was told that it represented her deceased daughter. "Has it been long since you lost her?" asked the gentleman. "Alas! sir," replied the lady, "she died just after her birth, and I had her portrait painted to represent her as she would have appeared if she had lived until now."

THEALL'S NOVELTY THEATRE.

The Management of this house keep up the attractions, and there is no falling off of the large audiences that nightly fill the house. Last week Uncle Josh caught the crowds for all the house would hold, and this week the two great comedians, Messrs. Robson and Crane, and their excellent Company will make the residents of the Eastern District feel glad of their arrival among them, as they will appear as The Twins in Shakespere's "Comedy of Errors." None should fail to see these two comedians in this play, for if you miss it, it is something to regret.

The following are booked for this house and will appear in succession: Aldrich and Parsloe in "My Partner," Criterion Comedy Company, Widow Badott Combination, Frank Mayo, Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels, Fanny Davenport, Tony Denier's "Humpty Dumpty Trompe," and Joseph Murphy's "Kerry Gow."

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

Kate Claxton, supported by Mr. C. A. Stevenson and her own admirable Company in the sensational drama, "A Double Marriage" and "The Two Orphans," is what Colonel Sinn is presenting this week. Miss Claxton is favorably remembered here, and her success throughout the country has been exceedingly great. She will appear in "A Double Marriage" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, and as Louise, in "The Two Orphans," for the remainder of the week. In this character she is widely known all over the country and has everywhere met with success.

Next week the great English actor, Mr. Bandmann, and Company will appear in the really sublime and masterly crention "Narcisse." In this play Mr. Bandmann has a splendid European reputation, and he should have the hearty support of the patrons of this house. He will be followed by Mr. John McCullough, who will appear in some of his best characters. This gentleman's engagements have always been of of the best.

HAVERLY'S THETREA.

Mr. Steele Mackaye and his excellent Madison Square Theatre Company in the beautiful play, "An Iron Will," is the attraction offered this week by the Management of Haverly's Theatre. This play is by Mr. Mackaye, who is also the author of "Rose Michel," "Won at Last," and other well known dramas. "An Iron Will" is full of fine effects, thrilling incidents and powerful climaxes. Mr. Steele Mackaye's Company is composed of Mr. O. W. Conldock, Thomas Whiffin, B. T. Ringgold, Miss Effie Ellsler, Cecile Rush, Gabrielle Du Sauld, and others equally distinguished, forming one of the neatest attractions of the season.

Next week will be one of opera, when Mr. Maurice Grau's fine French Opera Company, consisting of the following well known artists: M'lle Paola Marie, M'lle Angele, M'lle Leroux Bouvard and M. Capoul, will appear on Monday in "La Fille De Mme. Angot;" Tuesday, "La Peechole;" Wednesday matinee, "Chimes of Normany;" Wednesday evening, "Mignon;" Thursday, "Girofe-Girofa;" Friday benefit of M'lle Paola Marie, and only performance here of "La Camargo;" Saturday matinee, "La Fille De Mme. angot;" Saturday matinee, "Le Grande Duchesse."

Miscellaneous Theatricals, Etc.

"Our Boys" was presented in Fayetteville, N. Y., on December 3, Syracuse 5, Baldwinsville 4, by Syracuse amateurs.

The Frentice Club of Louisville, Ky., gave their annual entertainment in Macauley's Theatre, November 25, producing "Ours."

NEW.—"Les Petites Lionnes" is the title of a new comedy which recently received its first representation at the Theatre des Arts, Paris.

BOUGON.—"Le Boudier" is the title of a little piece by MM. Crisfulli and Serguin, recently produced at the Theatre des Arts, Paris.

ROY.—"Robbing Roy, or Scotched and Kilt," F. C. Burnand's burlesque of "Rob Roy," has met with great success at the Gaiety Theatre, London.

The Happy Hour Dramatic Association, recently organized in New Haven, Ct., are rehearsing "The Chimney Corner" and "Tramps" for a performance on Christmas Night.

PEARL.—At the last examination for admission to the classes of instrumental and vocal music at the Paris Conservatoire, there were seventy-two applicants for admission to the violin classes, and but seventeen vacancies. Among the successful competitors was the gifted little girl-violinist from this city, Miss Carris Carpenter, known as "Little Pearl."

O'NEIL.—James O'Neil was complimented with an overflowing house on the occasion of his annual benefit in Baldwin's Theatre on November 25. "A Celebrated Case" was the bill presented, with Mr. O'Neil as Jean Renaud. Miss Eleanor Carey as Adrienne, Miss Jeffreys Lewis as Valentine de Morsay, Miss Nellie Wetherill as Duchesse d'Asbeleres, and J. C. Rosch—who made his first appearance in this city—as O'Rourke.

Jane Gilbert, who is now living at No. 26 Vine street, Baltimore, was born at Dorchester County, Md., on March 11, 1776, and is 103 years old. She is in good health. She told the Baltimore Bulletin the other day that she once saw General George Washington and well remembered the bombardment of Fort McHenry. She worked for Mistress Butler, who made Betsy Patterson's wedding clothes, and she carried the clothes to the Patterson mansion. Moreover, she was permitted to stand with the servants in the room when "Miss Betsy," "a sallow and ugly man," married Miss Patterson.

FASHION NOTES.

Colored flannel petticoats are also shown in pale blue, pink, and scarlet shades.

Satin embroidered with iridescent beads and strung pearls is used for the richest wedding dresses this season.

Contrasts of color and picturesque corsages copied from old paintings are other features of imported evening dresses.

Satin and velvet, both plain and brocaded, are the fabrics used for imported full-dress toilettes almost to the exclusion of gros grain.

Fichus, jabots, and breakfast caps for young married ladies are made of silk ganze with designs of India shawls on a yellowish-white ground.

Trained skirts, worn only with rich evening and other full dress toilettes, are of any length that the taste, the occasion and the fabric may require.

The fall and winter underwear in marino, worsted and lambs' wool materials come in high colors, and soft warm tints, as well as in the plain white, which was so long worn.

Children's dresses still partake of the English style, modified somewhat by French taste. Little boys to the age of five and a half years wear the long pleated English dress without visible trousers.

India cashmere shawl patterned fabrics are used for opera cloaks. They are trimmed with fringes of raveled silk, in all the colors of the fabric, and soft wash silk is ruched all with a garnet velvet collar.

The fashionable Balmoral skirts are a revival of the old time quilted skirts, and are shown in cardinal satin, in dark blue, brown or black, wadded lightly, and quilted in most fanciful designs with borders

For full figures a great deal of shirring is used on the hips and across the front of the skirt. All the drapery on dresses intended for stout figures is arranged like curtains, having the fullness low down on the skirt.

Ball dresses just imported for the approaching holiday gayeties have the skirts of white tulle, with low corsage of white satin, or of colored brocade, or else of the loveliest Roman sashes in bars of pink and pale blue.

Fans of lace, beginning at the waist and extending to the lower edge of the basque, are placed on some new dresses. Cascades of lace conceal the side-seams below the waist in the back, and the effect is striking if not pretty.

Some of the newest imported French wraps are long loose sacques, with a dolman cape superposed and trimmed with the richest fringes, passementeries, cloak ornaments and olive buttons and cords beside with cut jet.

Black satin dresses have jet trimmings that almost cover the front breadths, while the old train has for ornament two long sash bows made of the satin doubled and caught together at the end, where it is finished by a jet tassel.

The newest sets of furs are of tiger cat and leopard skin in natural colors. They are a refreshing change from the sober tones of Russian lizard and are not costly. Little fur bags of these skins are worn to match the muff and boa.

Among the fav rite materials for winter dresses should be placed satin, shove sli, black satin. It is even preferred to velvet, and has almost entirely replaced faille. The latter will take its old position again after January, toward spring.

A new kind of muslin delaine, heavier than that hitherto worn, has been introduced. Alpaca is entirely out of fashion. It is kept by merchants only to supply the light demand that is made by public institutions and religious orders for it.

Very novel fringes and embroideries are made of iridescent beads on a gold thread; these are also sometimes called cachemere beads. All the colors of the prism are reflected on a gold ground, and the effect may be imagined. This very pretty trimming is used with broche cachemire, and with black satin and velvet.

Furs have been low in price thus far in the season, but now that the cold weather has commenced there will be a rise. Sealskin is the most popular of all furs, and some dolmans have appeared. They are too heavy for this climate and are too expensive for any but the very wealthy to own them. Fur trimmings are exceedingly popular.

Novel dresses are made of Turkish cashmere; a mixture of silk and wool covered with most brilliant hand embroidered designs. Some are striped blue and gold, and are embroidered in red, green and gold; others are embroidered white and gold over a red ground; others, again, form a tiny mosaic of blue, red and white, and are embroidered with multi-colored beads.

A very elegant costume in black silk has the tablier composed of rows of deep fringe, headed with jet passementerie placed diagonally. The waist has a deep pointed basque in front, opening over a vest of black satin, buttoned with black onyx buttons. The back of the dress is in the princess style and is of stripped moire and satin, the stripes being an inch and a half in width. The train is long and full.

Little girls wear the English dress to the age of twelve years. When the toilette is intended to be very dressy, the corsage is made low-necked, and filled in with a gulmpe. In this case the dress is very short, and is trimmed like that of their mothers, with ruches, flounces, bows of ribbon, fringe, etc. Hats for all children, both for little boys and for little girls, this season, are of soft (not stiff) felt in all shades.

Little girls from two to four years of age, when their parents do not care to dress them in white, wear box-pleated blouses made of dark navy blue or gendarme flannel. These have three box pleats down the front, and the embroidery, which is generally done by machine, near each edge from the neck down to the waist and over the hips, but are loose on the skirt. A wide belt of the flannel is strapped on low down on the hips.

The plaids offered this season are known as the Glencoe, Culloden, McDonald, Stuart, Argyll, Cawdor and Breadalbane. The Cawdor has a small azure check dividing the black through the green, and a red one through the blue. The Argyll has a white check through the green, and two black through the centre of the blue. The Breadalbane has two green checks for every one blue, and a yellow stripe through each green.

New mattiness, or house sacques, are made of pale blue, rose, cream, or white cloth of smooth surface, and are trimmed with a row of wide galloon in the richest Oriental colors and designs. Sometimes black lace, in which the leaf design is outl ned by gold thread, is put on as frills on such jackets. Still others are trimmed with pleatings of white Breton lace and gay cashmere ribbons, or else striped satin ribbons in many loops and bows.

A new fabric brought into favor since lustrous goods have become fashionable is called satin cashmere. It is a twilled fabric with all the glow of the finest satin, yet has cashmere wool for its foundation. This is not to be confounded with wool satines of loose texture and large-ribbed twill, as it is so closely woven that the twilled surface is smooth, and has all the sheen of satin that is woven entirely of silk. At present it is shown only in black, and is very expensive.

Pretty wrappers and morning sacks are made of unbleached Canton flannel trimmed with Torchon lace. Crimson Canton flannel is made up in these articles, trimmed with pearl buttons and Torchon lace. A pretty wrapper is made of Turkish toweling goods, and trimmed with contrasting colors of Canton flannel. Some useful wrappers are made of fine red flannel, trimmed with wide black braid. Many kinds of materials, not heretofore used for dresses, appear in these pretty morning robes.

S. B. Jones, of Fulton Street, is making a magnificent display in his Depot meats devoted to the sale of Toys, Dolls, and mechanical and amusing articles. He has made specious additions, and the general effect, brilliancy of color, and richness and quality of the goods offered far surpass his previous seasons. Dolls of surpassing beauty, delicate China ware and rich Majolica, illustrating the application of high art to objects of common use, ingenious automatic toys, new games and numberless entertaining and instructive articles which will well repay a visit. S. B. Jones extends invitations to ladies to visit his Shew-Rooms daily and bring their children with them.

Beautiful Kid Gloves.

If there is one thing more than an other that ladies admire and look for, it is a nice Kid Glove, and those wishing to see the latest style in make and shade are greatly their wishes met at C. T. Jones', importer, 136 Broadway, New York, (under the Coleman House,) where all the Parisian styles are on exhibition; also a full line of other fine hosiery.

Toys! Toys!

There is a pleasant place for thee,

See them all;
'Tis called CRANDALL'S BAZAR,
And it abounds in toys a store,

Should you call,

SOUND and WHITE TEETH.

More SOZODONT is annually sold than of all other dentifrices and tooth-washes combined. There must be a reason for this fact. SOZODONT has been many years before the world, and if it did not fulfill the promises made for it, it would long ago have fallen into oblivion. But the more it is used, the more it becomes in demand. Those who have tried it once, try it again, and then recommend its use to others. FOR CLEANSING THE MOUTH, PRESERVING THE PURITY AND WHITENESS OF THE TEETH, protecting the enamel, guarding from the ravages of decay, keeping the gums hard, rosy and healthful, there is no equal to SOZODONT. All Druggists keep it.

BROOKLYN, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1878.

THE WOUND MAY BE HEALED BUT THE SCAR WILL REMAIN.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH.

Oh, ye who from crime and pollution are free,
Watch well the temptations that throng around thee!
A character tarnished ne'er loses its stain—
The wound may be healed but the scar will remain.

'Tis true that the vilest forgiveness may earn—
The sorrowing lost to the fold may return—
But ne'er, ne'er, ne'er will being wash a stain—
The wound may be healed but the scar will remain.

The misty bloom brush'd from the cheek of the plum,
No more to its delicate surface can come—
And the pure heart polluted ne'er freshens again—
The wound may be healed but the scar will remain.

The sieve of vile appetites, touched by remorse,
May weep o'er his follies and alter his course—
But still on life's tablet his record is plain—
The wound may be healed but the scar will remain.

Then shun ye the tempter and seek ye the goal
Which promises peace to the world-weary soul.
If ye on your will strive to forget it is vain—
The wound may be healed but the scar will remain.

—N. Y. Weekly.

Art Progress.

One of the inevitable results of a great development of taste in any particular direction is that the first-rate names connected with the subject become after a time as it were exhausted topics, and the world's interest overflows upon the names of the second order, the pupils or contemporaries of the great men. When all he been said of Shakespeare, Marlowe and Peele began to be passionately studied; when there is no more to be learned about Raffaelle we take to exploring the most inmost recesses of the Florentine school. Latterly the passion for old engravings and etchings has increased so greatly, research has done so much with the lives and works of Durer and Rembrandt, that there is little more to be known about the men, and probably little to be discovered about their works.

Within the last two years we have had, in England, two rather elaborate "Lives of Durer," and it need not be said that Germany has not been behindhand in doing the honor to the great German.

Another symptom of this widespread interest, a symptom that is always to be found where interest in an artist co-exists with a great diffusion of wealth, is the vastly increased prices which Durer's engravings and similar works now command. Thus both antiquarian curiosity and the passion for collecting are obliged to look outside the narrow circle with which they had formerly been content.

The "little Masters," those seven pupils or followers of Durer whose minute engravings have gained them that name, are now beginning to be almost as much sought after and inquired into as the great master himself.

COME AGAIN.—The patent æthlinca, mortised for the publisher's name, has begun a new era upon us for 1879. The designs are all new and very different from those of last year, the picture of the boy visiting in his bare feet, with one little brother on his back and six more on the sled, being put on the January instead of the December page, then the picture of Christmas eve moved along about the end of December instead of the middle of August, as was the case last year. In fact the idea of so entirely rearranging it, the trunks have been moved back and the hole put out by the door, and the ceiling painted, so it looks just as good as new.

Blunders.

Few attributes of character are more charming than the faculty of gracefully acknowledging one's errors. The man who makes a blunder and sticks to it is a person with whom argument or controversy becomes impossible. The trouble and time spent in attempting to convince him of the truth are completely wasted, for he will still believe that what he has advanced must be right, even in the face of so sad demonstration that it is wrong. In the other hand, of the action of one who will admit with frank and ready courtesy that he has been mistaken, it may be said that he "disarms him that gives and him that takes"—it covers his own retreat with graciousness and gives his adversary a pleasant memory of an encounter with a generous foe.

A woman was yesterday seen hanging out some clothes in a yard on Macomb street when a boy looked over the fence and called out:

"Have you seen any mad dogs go by here, marm?"

"Mad dogs—mercy!" gasped the woman, and she threw four wet shirts on the ground in a heap and got into the house at four bounds.

The boy maintained his position, and after a few minutes the woman put her head out of the door and asked:

"Have you?"

"Nosir," was the calm reply; "I guess the season for 'em is over. School's commenced."

"You miserable boy! why did you alarm me so?" she exclaimed as she opened the door and stood on the step.

"Who's in alarmed? I guess if I want to find a mad dog I've got a right to inquire if any has gone by, haven't I?" "You don't expect me to go 'n git out full-sheet posters and leave 'em at houses, do you, or pay for a double-column ad. in the Free Press! Hump! the idea that a boy don't jist inquire about mad dogs."

The Porcupine.

This curious-looking animal is about two feet in length when full grown. It is entirely covered with spines, which it can raise at pleasure, and which give it a formidable appearance. Shakespeare alludes to them as "quills upon the fretful porcupine." It is a rather inert animal, sleeping in the day, as in the hole it has burrowed, and coming out at night to search for food in the shape of fruit, leaves and berries. The spines, which are sharp-pointed hollow quills, are the animals weapons of defence, and can be used with great effect. Those on the Canadian porcupine are quite short, and prove very painful and troublesome when the animal detaches them from his body and fills the mouth of his attacking foe with the sharp-pointed, dangerous spines. The Indian women dye these bright colors, and work them in with the beaded embroidery on belts, shoes, and baskets. The porcupine is found in various parts of Europe, also in Africa. It is sometimes eaten in Rome but the flesh is not very palatable.

The New York Herald seems to have discovered that changes in the weather are almost invariably followed by a fearful outbreak of crime. We have noticed that a general and unaccountable—and we may say criminal—disappearance of umbrellas is usually preceded by barometrical depression.

It is a solemn thought that every time your heart beats some immortal soul is born into this world of care and sorrow and toil and death, and every time "My Grandfather's Clock" is sung, some human being passes away to his eternal rest.

"I told her I'd never smoke another cigar," he said softly, "and I won't. A pipe's plenty good enough for me" and he gracefully drew a match over the leg of his trousers.

When may a man's friends naturally suppose that he has gone amissing? When he has gone a-courting.

The 'Le pas' is gone, alas! too late,
The meaning of disaster;
Although certain rapid gait,
He fears people'll run faster."

"DOLCE FAR NIENTE."

BY CHARLES G. HALPINE.

My friend, my chum, my trusty crony!
We were designed, it seems to me,
To be two happy lazaroni,
On sunshine fed and macaroni,
Far off by some Sicilian sea.

From dawn to eve in the happy land,
No duty on us but to lie—
Straw-latted on the shining sand,
With bronzing chest, and arm, and hand—
Beneath the blue Italian sky.

There, with the mountains lily glinting
Their purple spendors in the sea—
To which the white winged vessels panting,
(Fortunes for busier fools amassing),
This were a Heaven to you or me.

Thus should we lie in the happy land,
Nor fame, nor power, nor fortune miss;
Straw-latted on the shining sand,
With bronzing chest, and arm, and hand—
Two loafers couched in perfect bliss.

Presence of Mind.

The quickness of wit, or, as it is generally called presence of mind which is equal to an emergency is intellectual or practical, is one of the most valuable qualities, as well as one of the least common with which man has been endowed. It makes all the difference between the deft and the blundering—those on whom one rely in the hour of need, and those who are as broken reeds, piercing the hand which trusts them. It is the quality of the commander, the lawyer, the explorer, the engineer; all the possibilities of time and the circumstance are in the power of the man who can make use of them by the readiness of his wit, the orderly arrangement of his faculties—and the possibilities of circumstance do not often run dry in hands which know how to deal with them. It is better than a coat of mail or a Bayton suit in the way of self-preservation; and he who is good at a pinch and able to hold his own in an emergency has a lease of nine lives, and, like another Achilles, is all but invulnerable against the ordinary accidents of life. That "all but," however, is the great modifying influence of the whole matter.

MISSING A DRINK.—"Did you say that I never missed a drink, sir?" asked a man of an neighbor, in any angry and threatening manner. "I may have done so," replied the neighbor. "But you know I never drink, and detest the very smell of liquor," said the other. "Well, then," returned the neighbor, "you never miss a drink, do you?" That put the matter in a different light, and they took a—smoke together.

We have often wondered why the god Pan always wore the legs of a goat when he was in full dress, but we suppose that he was so that he could stand on his head and thus thoroughly disguise himself when a neighbor with a shot gun came down the block, looking for the man who was playing the flute.

Six years ago two young men in Philadelphia inherited from their father about $60,000 each. Since that period one has died poor and the other is now driving a furniture cart for a living. The name of the daily paper they started is not given.

"We all knows," said a cookney school committeeman to a new teacher he was examining for her position, "that A, B, and C is words, but what we wants to know is vy they is so."

She was a stubborn woman, and when she died her husband planted a willow over her grave, so that even in death she might have a willow'd time over.

Parties wishing to keep a full file of the STAGE can have copies of all issues mailed to their address for $2.50 a season. Payment in advance.

BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE.

Miss Fanny Davenport in two plays, "Olivia" and "Pique," is the excellent bill offered this week by Colonel Sinn. Miss Davenport is one of the most popular stars this season, and the plays are too well known to need comment. She will have the support of the regular company and appears on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee in "Olivia," a play, in four acts, by W. G. Wills, founded on an incident in Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee in "Pique."

Next Monday, October 28, one of the events of the season will take place at this house, as Miss Genevieve Ward will appear as Queen Katherine in "Henry VIII." She will have the support of Messrs. George Vandenhoff and James H. Taylor and the regular company. All the beautiful scenery and stage effects will be transferred from Booth's Theatre, and the play will be as well mounted here as it was there. The whole is under the management of Jarrett and Palmer.

COURT SQUARE THEATRE.

Professor J. M. Macallister opened with his sleight-of-hand performance at this little house, and the best proof of his skill in that line is that et every exhibition the audience increases, and it is now a settled fact the Professor has made a hit in Brooklyn. We hope his stay will be a long one as his entertainment is purely first-class; besides, there is another inducement held out, that everyone, on purchasing a ticket, gets a number and, with it, stands a good chance of winning a nice prize. Mr. Macallister gives an excellent entertainment on Saturday afternoon.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

If you visited the Olympic last week you, of course, know how crowded it was to see the excellent programme given by its proprietors. The bill for this week even exceeds that of last, and is rendered by different artists. The dramatic part of the performance is by Mr. Sidney France in the sensational play of "Marked for Life," supported by a company of popular artists. The variety part of the bill include the names of the Big Four—Aces (Lester and Allen, Tierney and Cronin); Miss Jennie Southern, Wood and Beasley, Kearney and Powers, Miss Emma Monticello and Louis Alfredo.

Next week another new and novel bill will be given.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, October 24, 25 and 26, the great Hermann will be at the Academy of Music and there exhibit his wonderful skill in magic. He comes to us from the Aquarium, where he has been puzzling the New Yorkers for the past two months. As Mr. Hermann has given several of his charming entertainments in this city heretofore he will undoubtedly get a good reception. This will probably be his last appearance here for some years, as he will soon return to South America where he has made the handsome sum of 500,000 only a short time ago.

NOVELTIES IN FASHION.

AUTUMN BONNETS.

The dressing of the head is a much more important matter at this season of the year than in the spring. During the Summer, ladies who live in cities usually leave their homes, and take up their quarters in the country, leading a sort of Bohemian life, and requiring very little as a head covering beyond a shade hat, or simple straw bonnet that is used for traveling and church wear.

In the Fall, however, it is very different. The broad-brimmed hat, so useful in the country, is out of place for city streets, and a stylish bonnet, or dressy walking hat must take its place, supplemented by an elegant bonnet for church wear, a park bonnet, a reception bonnet, and at least one for concerts, and general evening purposes. Whatever the fashion in shape, color, or combination of materials may be, there is always this difference between Summer and Winter head gear—that of formality and informality—the more relaxing even the devotees of fashion from strictest correct out-door.

Itbeing the etiquette to wear bonnets on all occasions, when the observance of ceremony in the toilet is demanded, it naturally follows that bonnets are very much more worn in winter than in summer. This season they reveln very much the size and shape of next year, some larger and some smaller, but we have great variety in the trimmings. There is a display of color, such as has hardly been seen before during the present century in solid masses. A very few years ago, red bonnets would have seemed an impossibility. Now we have them made of red plush, trimmed with red feather, and tied with red satin ribbon. We have also receptions bonnets, the frames of which are covered plain with ruby satin, or ruby velvet; the mounting, costly lace, and a long soft ostrich plume.

Of course red bonnets are the exception, and are only worn by persons who can afford several changes, and do not therefore need to display them frequently. But there is a distinguished demand for elegant bonnets in one solid color of plush, or velvet, the only fashionable combination consisting of trimmings of brocade in high-blended colors, which look like Indian embroidery, or Persian stuff.

A feature of the stylish bonnets is the absence of fullness in the covering or the trimming. Whetever is used, is laid close to the form, or only gathered in scant folds, which add nothing to the apparent size, and change nothing of the original shape, which is almost uniform, close with small flaring, or "Cottage" brim.

Persons who must combine them—have to one "best," select a style to match their best suit which is usually of black, or some dark shade' trimming it with feathers to match, and a fabric which contrasts in texture, but not in color. Satin is the favorite trimming, both for plush and velvet; but if the plush is fine, a so more distinguished when trimmed only with well-curled feathers of the same shade, and a clasp, the soft fold one of fine dark plush hung very becoming to defects complexion-, and more so when there is nothing to break it.

EVENING COSTUMES.

There is great variety, as well as great distinction in the toilets prepared for Fall and Winter evening entertainments and public assemblages, and first it is well to understand that public opinion demands a strict adherence to forms of etiquette which involve good taste. No lady ever goes to the theatre without a bonnet, and no one who is habituated to society customs will go to the opera in full dress, that is, without a bonnet, and in a dress of light color, unless she occupies a box, and is, therefore, to a certain extent, as much at home as in her own parlor.

It is better always to err on the side of reserve and modesty than on that of display. A lady at an informal gathering, where the majority of the ladies present wear high black dresses, feels herself most uncomfortably out of place in full evening dress, light in color, and made expressly to display a profusion of ornament.

Now in Great Demand.

The elegant assortment of gloves for ladies and gentlemen now on sale at C. T. Jones' Glove Emporium, 1,161 Broadway, New York, are now in great demand.

A Beautiful Complexion

is now attainable by every lady who uses RICKSECKER'S FACE POWDER. It is delicate, guaranteed harmless, delightfully perfumed, soothing to the skin, and, when properly applied, defies detection. It imparts to the face a peculiarly pleasing and youthful appearance, and soon becomes a toilet necessity with every lady of refinement who appreciates a really fine powder. A cool invitation. To be had of the best druggists, at fifty cents a large box.

A Wedding on the Hill.

or in any part of the city, will be an assured success by having the invitations engraved at the recherche establishment of Martin & Bennett, No. 185 Montague street, opposite the Academy of Music. The best and latest styles of fancy stationery are to be found at this establishment. Card engraving, etc. Estimates cheerfully given.

MISERERE.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

I think the pity of this earthly life
Is love: So sighs a singer of the day
When passive strain my sympathetic lay
Sadly prolongs. Alas! the endless strife
Of love's sweet law with cold Convention's rules;
The lovlig souls unbreed; the perfect mate,
After long years of yearning, found—too late!
The trosses of false friends; the frown of fools;
The fear that hides him in beauty's arms;
The weariness of absence; and the dread
Of lover—or of love—untimely dead—
Musing on these and all the direful harms
That helpless human hearts are doomed to prove,
I think the pity of the life is love!

Food of the Esquimaux.

From an Esquimau point of view, the commercial importance of the seal and whale fisheries is very great. The flesh and blubber of these animals not only supply the Greenlander with nutritious food but also provide them with heat and light. The seal-skins, too, afford material for clothes, beds and tents, and whalebone, called "mattak," is also a favorite article of diet. It may give some idea of the vast numbers of these animals killed yearly to summarize the avenge annual catch as follows: Of Phoca fœtida, 51,000; of P. vitulina, 2,800; of P. groenlandica, 33,800; of P. barbata, 1,100; of Cystophora cristata, 3,500, and of narwhals, white whales and walruses, nearly 1,000. The right whale has nearly disappeared, and the mean annual catch of the "humpback" whale is scarcely over two. The most important fisheries in addition, appear to be those of the codfish, the halibut, and the capeline.

Carters.

If carters are worn, it is important to know how to apply them with the least risk of harm; at the bend of the knee the superficial veins of the leg unite, and go deeply into the upper part of the thigh, beneath the hem string tendons. Any ligature below the knee obstructs all the superficial veins; but, if the constriction is above, the hem-string tendons keep the pressure off the veins which return the blood from the legs. Unfortunately most people, in ignorance of the above facts, apply the garter below the knee.

Russian Soldiers.

Russian soldiers are sorted, as far as possible, according to their size and complexion. Lesky Nicholas there was a Hussar regiment altogether made up of dark-haired men plited with the smallpox, and another of light haired men in the same case. There was a regiment whose soldiers all had fair hair, slim figures, and blue eyes; and another where every features and ergle nosez were the rule. These happy nacarments have been less strictly adhered to under the present reign, but enough is done in the way of sizing to bring men of twenty different dialects into each regiment and thereby greatly to obviate the risk of mutiny.

Eggs.

An establishment in St. Louis dries eggs by the hundred thousand. The eggs are broken, the yelk and white separated from the shell, the liquid dried by a patent heating process, and the dried article, which resembles brown sugar, is put in barrels for transportation. The dried article has been taken across the Equator in ships, and on being made into omelets proved to be as nice as fresh eggs.

The first sight of a new piece. Irish box-keeper: "There isn't a seat in the house, sir; but I can give you a chair."

It is designated Yellow, and is by far the most beautiful tint that has ever been made. The other tints are: White, Flesh, Pink and Brunette. Price per box, 50 cents.

Nothing New Under the Sun.

The indescriminate application of the above proverb to mental, physical and mechanical truths may be just in the fundamental or abstract relation of these principles to the proverb; but in the unfolding, particularly of the mechanical laws, the exercise will not elevate a bald pood. A proof of this may be indulged in any day by visiting the old, but ever new, establishment of JOHN F. MASON, where the fungus, the fruit of the best talent the country affords, may be seen displayed in Furniture, Carpets, Oil Cloths, &c., presented by him this Fall as the latest, and to convince the public that heth in construction and cost there is something new under the sun. THE BROOKLYN DAILY

BROOKLYN, SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1878.

DAWN.

The lilies droop, the red rose pales;
The tender violet's perfume fails;
The birds are dumb, the leaves are still;
Night's dark shade inherits the hill.

O eyes as dim with washed tears!
O heart whose pain through smiles appears!
Thy bitter cup of sadness fill,
For night and darkness hold thee still.

The clouds are gone, the sky is clear,
Night's shade has flown, the dawn is here.
Warm life and love the glad air thrill;
In golden sunlight lingths the rill.

The lilies raise their drooping heads;
Fresh fragrance steals from violet beds;
The rose with crimson blushes now,
The song birds trill, the trees tops bow

Oppressed with fear, no light hath shone
My weary, tangled path upon,
While Time, with swift, resistless tread,
Cried, "Youth and joy for thee are dead!"

But heart awake and greet thy morn;
Fresh life and light for thee shall dawn;
Through skies made clear by love's bright ray
Thou too shall know the perfect day.

(FROM THE CRITERION.)

LACES.

A highly entertaining article upon antique lace, published in the London Queen, will be of interest to such as are admirers of the exquisite fabric in pictures. It is stated that there was scarcely any article of men's and women's wear which at one time or other was not adorned with lace—the surplice of the priest, caps and headdresses, the ruff and the collar in their numberless varieties, ruffles and nanchettes, robes, mantles and petticoats, stomachers, chemises and shirts, jack boots and ladies' slippers, and white sets of ornamental church and state linen. And every one of these numerous items has a distinct history of its own.

To begin with the headdress, we first find lace applied to the charming hoods or caps conspicuous in many portraits of Mary, Queen of Scots, where they appear bordered with a Vandyked edging of fine cut-work or reticella, or arranged in the shape of a diadem, as shown in the portrait of Catherine of Arragon by Vertruffen and other contemporary paintings.

That similar, but close fitting, caps were in use for children we may conclude from the statue monument of Princess Mary, third daughter of James I., in Westminster Abbey. Lace adorned forty hoods were gradually transformed during the reign of Charles I., into the low-crowned cap, bound with a ribbon under the chin, and edged with a narrow frill of lace. Of these the christening cap or "biggin" adorned with "hollie work" are new examples. The fashion of close fitting caps has been perpetuated in bewitching morning and smart night caps to the present day.

In the reign of William and Mary the imagination of bonnet makers took a higher flight, and introduced in imitation of the "coiffure a la Fontagne," a headdress known as "the tower" or "the commode." The cap itself was close fitting behind, but in front a pile of lace and ribbons rose in regular and alternate tiers on a frame of wire two or three stages high, a lace scarf or veil streaming down each side over the shoulders to the waist.

Lace afterwards and throughout the eighteenth century to the present day appears in headdresses only in the shape of pinners, lappels or barbes, as bows and as secondary ornaments to hats and hoods. Lappets were for a long time imported items of a lady's headdress, subject to special rules of etiquette—how to wear them on grand occasions, pinned up or let down, etc.—whether of point d'Argenian, d'Alencon needle-made and pillow woven Brussels or Valenciennes. A great many of such barbes have been preserved and show what immense labor and exquisite taste have been bestowed on these morsels of the lacemaker's skill.

Lace, however, was not confined to ladies' headdresses, as is proved by the cap of the Emperor Charles V., which is preserved in the Musee de Cluny. Laced nightcaps were headdresses of "high state" with James I., as the Water Poet exclaims, and the "coppet" in which James II., died may still be seen in the museum of Dunkirk.

A close fitting velvet cap, with a vandyked border of reticella lace or cutwork, appears to have been part of the official dress with the lawyers of the Scotch courts in the seventeenth century, but was likewise donned by other gentlemen of grave pursuits, as our portrait of Sir Henry Spelman, the antiquarian, who died in 1641, shows.

One of the most salient features of dress during the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James I., is the lace adorned ruff. At first, in Henry VIII.'s time it merely consisted of a small frill made of holland or lawn, worn by men and women just above the collar or partlet. This was called the Spanish ruff, and was not ornamented with lace. It gradually grew in size until it assumed the extraordinary dimensions which make the ladies of Elizabeth's Court appear as though they had thrust their heads through a millstone.

The difficulties of supporting the ruff by starch and wire frames once overcome, lace was hardly introduced for its adornment. It began on the edge of each layer with a vandyked border, inclusions of various designs formed the body. Double lengths of the finest cutwork or reticella, of needle-made point and pillow-woven bone lace were used for this purpose, and in some cases studded with sparks of precious stones, with pearls, lugles and spangles.

Half a quarter of a yard deep, requiring from twelve to sixteen lengths of lace set three or four times double, and forty-five yards to edge it, were claimed as the privilege of the nobles, such monstrous dimensions being prohibited to Elizabeth's humbler subjects by statute. Some wearers could scarcely turn their heads, and Raine Margot, it is recorded, had one day to send for a spoon two feet in length where with to eat her soup at dinner.

The "collarbatus," or French fall, as it was sometimes termed, with its deep-scalloped border of lace and somewhat to match, proved, for ladies, a most becoming covering for neck, shoulders and part of bust; neither did it set badly on the shoulders of gentlemen. Vandyke, with his incomparable eye for the picturesque in dress, immortalized the falling lace collar in nearly all his portraits.

The falling band still lives in the modified shape of lace berthes and lace-adorned neckerchiefs to the present time, and once more assumed under the latter form, an important item of dress in Louis XVI.'s reign, when the ladies were wont to wear next to a handkerchief of lightest gauze, over shoulders and bust.

We now come to the lace cravat, which was introduced from France toward the close of Charles II.'s reign, and superceded the bands and falling collars. At first it was but the "steinkirk," reduced to two lappets in front, with ends of the richest lace, stiffened and fluted as before, and especially fancied by the learned professions. Later it partook more of the character of a necktied fine linen with ends of lace, either spread out fanshape, or handing airily down, as shown in the portrait of Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford.

The battle of Steinkerque, 24 of August, 1692, introduced a new fashioned cravat in the shape of a kerchief of lace twisted about the neck. On that occasion the French cavaliers were suddenly ordered into action, and in their haste for the fray found no time for tying their cravats carefully, but just threw them round their necks and passed the ends through a button-hole.

From this time "steinkirks" became the rage with men and women, and were in William III.'s reign not only worn by the nobility, but by all classes. The men passed the laced ends in orthodox fashion through a buttonhole of their waistcoat, and women used long gold-shaped brooches and fastened them to the dress.

Innumerable other items of a lady's and gentleman's wardrobe, besides the more prominent ones which we have described, were adorned with lace. The ladies of Charles I.'s court had their petticoats bordered with a broad band of Flanders lace, and lace-trimmed aprons formed for a long time an important portion of the dress of a fashionable woman. In 1744 the latter were worn so long that they almost touched the ground; and in 1635 we read of "lawn aprons with flounces in rows," and stomachers also starched. On hoods, masks, and veils, on the "modesty bits," and tuckers of corsets, on chemises and underwear, the richest trimmings of point and pillow lace were lavished by the belles of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Gentlemen wore lace on their scarfs and shoulder belts, yet even had their barbing and combing cloths trimmed with it as late as in the reign of William III., who paid $270 for the lace borders of six new razor cloths. Two-thirds of a woman's career was often expended in lace for the trimming of "head tires," "head dresses," "fontange hats," lappets and "sparings," costumes to make a modern husband shudder.

We have mentioned shirtlace for rigging out a bride with lace and linen was not much thought of in Scotland. At the time of the union, in 1715, the eldest daughter married the Prince of Spain, the bill for lace-trimmed linen alone amounted to £25, 10s. Sterling. However, as the farthest details of the lavish way in which lace was used must late into the eighteenth century would carry us too far. It must be sufficient to state that most of the flounces, insertions and odd bits of antique lace which have come down to our time, and which often puzzle their possessors how they have been used in former times, and how they could be utilized for modern dress, belong to the period of bone-trimmed linen.

Table and sideboard covers, bed-curtains and valances, chests and cabinets required a quantity of straight insertions and borderings, which have been thus preserved, while the lace in constant wear on the person perished through starch and soap.

An Abandoned Daughter.

Heartless indeed must be the parents who could cast an innocent and beautiful girl upon the cold charity of an unfeeling world. And hard will must the parents' conduct appear when it is known that they had plundered their own child of wealth left her by an affectionate relative. May heaven pity poor "NORA, THE IRISH CHARITY SCHOLAR," whose touching story is just begun in No. 19 of the New York Weekly, now ready.

RONDEAU.

BY JOHN PAYNE.

Life lapses by for you and me;
Our seven days pass us by and flee.
And evermore death draws us nigh;
The blue fades fast out of our sky;
The ripple ceases from our sea.
What would we not give, yea and I,
The early sweet of life to buy!
Alas! sweetheart, that cannot we;
Life lapses by.

But though our young years buried lie,
Shall Love with spring and summer die?
What if the roses faded be!
We in each other's smiles will see
New springs, her question how or why
Life lapses by.

Brief.

A traveler interrogating a backwoodsman received brief but pertinent answers; thus: "Whose house is this?" "Noggs." "Noggs?" "Of what build?" "Logs." "Any neighbors?" "Frogs." "What is the soil?" "Bogs." "Why so climate?" "Fogs." "What do you live on?" "Hogs." "How do catch them?" "Dogs."

JUNE IN JANUARY.—The Worcester Spy says that early in the winter a lady in Auburndum, Mass., took a dry stick from the brush-heap and put it in a flower pot to support a house plant. Soon afterward a green spot appeared on the seemingly dead stick, and it developed into a bunch of apple blossoms, with all the beauty and perfume of June.

LADIES' FASHIONS.

Even while winter hesitates to surrender, and there is only a hint of the sweet by-and-by, inventive minds are cunning fingers have settled upon fashions for the coming season; and with the exception of small points and trimming, and those unexpected styles which come and go at all times, spring and summer wardrobes may be taken in hand from this time onward.

The introdnction of materials suitable for warm weather indicates the preferences that will prevail, and the necessary changes that light fabrics require. Newest Princesse models are adapted to the use of two fabrics, or else they are extremely plain, so that they may be representated in wash materials. In the former, long inertions upon the center-front are popular, and these are plain, side-pleated, lengthwise, or shirred in sections.

A graceful Pompadour Princesse dress is a very stylish model for house or carriage toilettes, and is so simply constructed that it can easily be made by the most inexperienced dressmaker. It is an excellent design for black silk, for the colored, checked, and brocaded summer silk, for grenadine worn over silk, and for plainer fabrics as well. It may be made high at the throat, or cut out square in the line of pompadour. The long back seams and the gathered train are very stylish, and are easily adjusted. The waist-lining should be closed far below the hips, but the shirt sheuld not be lined.

A very stylish silk, cut-away jacket, vest, scarf, and yoke kilt skirt, is one of the most popular costumes for the present spring season, and these stylish suits are worn out of town during the summer, and for traveling. It can be made of brown basket cloth, and others are shown in myrtle green lady's cloth, cashmere, bonrette, in dark navy blue, and black-blue cloths, and in summ r camel's-hair. The vest may be of silk or of the cloth used in the suit. In mourning have their tamise and serge dresses made in this way.

The kilt skirt must be short enough to clear the ground; it has a yoke over the hips to prevent bulkiness. The scarf is in one piece, and is drawn closely around the figure, and tied in a large, long-looped bow; sometimes it is of silk to match the vest.

The cut-away jacket differs from the cutaway coat, in being shorter, and rounding in the design.

Silks of light quality, with raised figures, are offered for spring costumes, or as parts of combination suits. These are more stylish than checked or striped silks sold for the same money, but they do not wear so well, as the raised figures are apt to fray; they serve, however, for a season, and long on the capricious fashion lists.

Cornick capes promise to be very much worn on various spring garments. They are seen on cloth sacques, on basques of plain costumes, on polonaises, on Dolmans, on English cloth traveling cloaks, and finally on ulsters.

Sets of three capes are on wraps, but basques have only one or two. It is said that the capes without other wraps will be used for spring; they will be made of cloth of light quality.

Evening coiffures, ribbon and flower coiffures are arranged on a stiff lace foundation of crape and tulle of blue satin ribbon, and are ornamented with silver wings and silver pink blanc.

For a chenille scarf, arrange a pink and claret-colored chenille scarf on a stiff lace foundation, and trim it with pink lace, pink roses, and gilt feathers. On one end of the scarf should be a fringe.

A little girl's suit is of gray camel's hair, but princesse shape in front. The back is of silk and has plain, side-pleated skirt, and at the waist-line by a band of garnet serge, piped with bright blue. A broad width of the same edges the skirt. The shoulder cape is trimmed with two narrower bands, and the square sailor's collar with one. The cuffs are formed of the same, and, with smoked pearl buttons, complete the costume.

At one of the best modistes we have been shown some elegant mourning bonnets of different styles; among others, a deep mourning bonnet of black grenadine, English crape and moss fringe, in the capote glish shape, with a large Alsatian bow of black grenadine. A mourning scarf of grenadine, edged with a wide cross strip of English crape, falls at the back on one side from the Alsatian bow.

In half-mourning bonnets, some models are so very pretty as to be equally suitable and becoming to wear out of mourning. One is of white felt bonnet, trimmed with black ostrich feathers, fastened on with a bow of black velvet. Inside is a diadem of black velvet, with a similar bow at the side. Black velvet strings, tied at the side.

A Paris bonnet of black plush is shown trimmed with a plush scarf falling at the back into two fringed ends, fastening on a black wing. On one side are too ball-headed silver pins. Of course, this tasteful Paris bonnet may be copied in plush of any color, as seal, navy-blue, moss-green, etc., with gold or silver pins.

A home toilette of light bottle-green Lyons silk consists of a demi-train skirt and a princesse overdress. The skirt is trimmed twelve inches deep with plaze flounces of the same, divided with fine box plaitings, set on under a box-plaited ruche bound on each side. The overdress buttons in front from neck to feet, and between each button crosses a strap of brocaded galloon, ending beneath bows of ribbon matching in color. The bottom of the front breadths describes a tablier, draped at the sides, and edged with a double plaze flounce, which is continued around the back semi-train breadths, and centered with a band of the brocaded galloon. The sleeves are of the coat shape, embroidered on the outside of the arm to match the galloon, and finished with outside cuffs of lace and a collar to match.

Colors are popular in the Renaissance guipures. Parisian damassés, Surat diamantés, and Spanish guipures, the Medieval pearl grounds, the Medieval panel grounds, the woolens called livery, the knitted tissues called bouclet, and the stones and drolls called cocker, Espagnol malade, face gratifée, vendre-bicke, and Maudite. We may say of face gratifée, that it looks like meshed strawberries. It is a color to be mixed with bubble and ramifleering tinges of bole, amber and turquoise. Espagnol malade is more sallow than can hope to be any person having Saxon blood in their veins. As to vendre-bicke, it is pink, not pale dun, because bicke in French is not always a quadruped, but "vendreles!" as Henry IV. would have said, "it is not possible to be more precise."

SUZANNE.

A Wondrous Tale.

We have read many strange stories, but one of the most entrancing and yet exciting is that which the enterprise of FURMAN & SMITH has secured for publication in the New York Weekly. We refer to the charming domestic and sensational story of "NORAH, the Irish Charity School," which is begun this week in No. 10 of the New York Weekly. It is rumored that the gifted author, Bertha Allyn, is a graduate of Packer Institute. It seems very likely, for the opening scenes of the story take place in a female seminary, but of course the author permits the reader to guess. She has certainly given the public a delightful story.

ANOTHER GREAT STORY

Begun this week, in No. 19 of the

New York Weekly.

It is entitled

NORAH,

The Irish Charity Girl;

OR, THE

MISSING HEIR OF CALLONBY.

BY BERTHA ALLYN.

A very outreaching plot, which is developed with rare skill and vigor, commends the novel and exciting incidents that abound in this well-told story. Frequent surprises, many of them of a startling character, keep the reader's anticipation constantly on the alert. The enduring is very effectively illustrated; and the bond of love formed in the school serves to lighten some of the heaviest cares of life, when

Plotters and Scoundrels, to secure a vast inheritance, hesitated at no scheme of villainy which was likely to aid their designs against the

TWO BEAUTIFUL HEROINES.

During the progress of this delightful story the constant changes of scene bring to view the acts of

The Scheming Mother.
The Vindictive Teacher.
The Treacherous Uncle.
The Unfortunate Heir.
The Young Gambler.

The most unqualified praise will certainly be lavished upon the deeply-interesting story of

NORAH,

THE IRISH CHARITY SCHOLAR,

Just commenced in No 19 of the

NEW YORK WEEKLY.

HEAD-LIGHTS.

A single orange tree in the Azores in one year produced 20,000 oranges in a fit state for exportation. The Azores send every year to London more than 200,000 boxes of oranges.

A new railway car lamp has been largely adopted in Germany, Holland and Belgium, and the Society of Arts has awarded a medal to its inventors, Messrs. Pintsch. It allows a person to read small type at the furthest distance in the car.

The most expensive railroad car in the world, costing $35,000, was completed last autumn by the Pullman Company, and has since been used in various parts of the country by tourists able to pay for its luxuries. It is a French flat in miniature.

The Seiki Kan, a Japanese war vessel, which was built at Yokoska, will shortly start for a cruise to Europe, and will be manned solely by Japanese. This will be the first instance of a man-of-war built in the East and manned by Asiatics, visiting European waters.

Canada is doing an immense business in shipping lobsters to England. A few weeks ago one ship from Halifax took 383,000 worth in cans for London, which represented something like 63,000 lobsters, and a little before a shipment to the value of $72,000 was made.

THE BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE

BROOKLYN, THURSDAY FEBRUARY 7, 1878

A SONG.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those who wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care;
To stay at home is best.

Weary and homesick and distressed,
They wander East they wander West,
And are soothed and beaten and blown about
By the winds of the wilderness of doubt:
To stay at home is best.

Then, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
The bird is safest in its nest;
O'er all that flutter their wings and fly
A hawk is fluttering in the sky;
To stay at home is best.

STAGE TRADITIONS.

It is due to stage tradition that red hair is always associated with comicality, and when combined with a chintz waistcoat, invariably signifies rustic integrity; that a flaxen wig is typical of youth and frivolity; that black locks and wicked-ness are inseparable. Lloyd, in his poem of "The Actor," 1760, writes:

"To sum up—dress demands the actor's art,
Yet there are those who overdress the part:
By some properties right gives suited image,
Black wigs to murderers, feathered hats to kings."

And he proceeds to record other conventions of the stage:

"But Michael Cassio might be drunk enough,
Though all his features were not grimed with snuff,
Why should Full Peachum slister in silk clothes,
Why every devil dance in scarlet hose?"

"Pray, what is the meaning," demanded Charles II, "that we never see a rogue in a play, but oddshalt they always clap him on a black periwig, when, it is well known, one of the greatest rogues in England always wears a fair one?" The King is supposed to have been thinking of the blonde pates of Dr. Titus Oates. Of late years Hamlet has been seen upon the stage wearing flaxen locks, appropriate, it has been urged, to his Danish nationality. For the same reason Claudius might wear a fair wig: yet who ever saw the murderous King so attired? The old practice of smearing Cassius' face with snuff, to denote his intoxicated condition, has been long since abandoned: but heroines of the Fairy Feast dramas are still apt to appear in satin clothes. The Adinas, and Aminas, and Zerlinas of the opera house are wont to be very splendidly appareled. Merlinda-bobs and his diabolical connections are still faithful to the scarlet hose they assumed so very long, long since.

The following obituary appeared in a Memphis paper on a man killed by an accident: He was an upright Christian, a good citizen and an ardent patriot, but of limited information with regard to circular saws.

Blissful.

A country minister of "limited capacity" recently married for a second wife a widow of some property. Being an ardent servant of Mammon, a former neighbor asked him if he did not feel well by the second marriage. "Oh, yes, indeed," he said, with solemnity; and then, as an expression of reverence one stole into his face, he added, "and, what is more remarkable, the clothes of my wife's first husband just fit me."

A Boa Shot.

"Nine, sir," observed a social scorpion. "I can speak nine languages distinctly, but my father, when alive, could speak speak no less than fifteen." "Ah!" remarked Douglas Jerrold, "I knew a man who could speak three-and-twenty, and he never said anything worth hearing in any one of them."

AN ACTRESS-MOTHER.

M. de Valdrome married an actress in Paris, and, after a short experience of domestic life, both husband and wife demanded a separation, which was accorded. A son, the only child of the marriage, remained with the father; but the father dying, the boy was claimed by his mother. The Court rejected her claim and decided that the lad should be brought up by the Dominicans of Arcouil, and allowed to visit his mother twice a week. The mother smuggled him out of the house and sent him shrewd disguised as a girl. When the Dominicans who had accompanied the boy wished to take him back to Arcouil, he was already on his way to the frontier. A strict watch was set once kepton Mme de Valdrome, who was followed about wherever she went, but she managed to elude her pursuers. She went into a church, and, while seemingly engaged in prayer, arranged her face and dress in such a way that no one recognized in acertain decrepit old woman who hobbled out of the church the youthful Mme. de Valdrome, who finally joined her son in exile.

The Ruling Passion.

As Dr. Johnson was riding in a carriage through London on a rainy day, he overtook a poor women carrying a baby. He invited her to get in with her child, which she did. The doctor said to her, "My good woman, I think it is most likely that the motion of the carriage will wake your child in a little while, and I want to ask a favor of you. If you talk any baby talk to it, you will have to get out of the coach." As the doctor had anticipated, the child awoke, and his mother exclaimed, "Oh! the little dear; he is going to open his eyes; pyey!" "Stop the coach, driver!" shouted John, son and the woman had to finish her journey on foot.

The man with a little brown jug has to watch it nowadays, or his wife will punish it all up and leave it away on the mantelpiece iora "ceramic."

A Computation.

Fifty years ago, when snuff-taking was all the go, the Lord Stanhope of that day estimated that every pressed and inspected snuff-mill takes, by a moderate computation, one pinch every ten minutes. Every pinch taken, with the splendid ceremony of wiping about a big silk handkerchief and other incidental circumstances connected with it, consumes a minute and a half out of every ten. This amounts to the full time of fifty years, which makes 365 days in the year, and if the practice be continued for forty years, two years will have been spent in tickling and blowing the nose.

A Discovery.

Charles Reade has discovered another abuse. It isn't the mismanagement of prisons or those asylums this time—something far worse. His new crusade is against "credulous women" who lavish their children to me the right hand more than the left, and it is begun with a vigor which bids fair to extirpate the whole female race or make the rising generation even-handed.

The Newest Perfidy.

The fashionable bracelet in Paris, is fascinage—slavery. It is a fetter of gold worn on the arm above the elbow, and is secured by a padlock, by the jeweller in the presence of the donor, to be worn till death or divorce of separation. The jeweller, when the one alone is ever, holds the key coll next day to see that the rivet holds firmly. She come—without her friend, bien entendu—and the treacherous goldsmith confides to her the secret of a concealed spring by means of which she can remove the fetter at will.

"Alcohol will clean silver." "Yes," remarks the Cincinnati Saturday Night, "alcohol, well stock to, will clean out all the silver you have got."

ALAS! ALAS!

They met each other in the glade—
She lifted up her eyes:
Alack the day! Alack the maid!
She blushed with swift surprise.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from lifting up the eye—

The pail was full, the path was steep—
He reached to her his hand;
Sho felt her warm young pulses leap,
But did not understand.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from stooping hand with hand.

She sat beside him in the wood—
He wooed with words and sighs;
All loving in spring seems sweet and good:
And maidens are not wise,
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from listing lover's sighs.

The summer sun shone fairly down,
The wind blew from the south;
An blue eyes gazed in eyes of brown,
His kiss fell on her mouth.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from kisses on the mouth.

And now the autumn time is near,
The lover roves away:
With breaking heart and failing tear,
she sits the livelong day.
Alas! alas! for breaking hearts when lover- rove away.

North Pole Doings.

He said that once he was cast away on no ice-berg, with no luggage but a pair of skates and a fishing pole. But he skated around until he came across a quiet fish, frozen into the ice. So he took off his shirt—it was night for six months that year up there—tore it into strips for a wick, rubbed the strips through the bamboo fishing rod, stuck the rod into the fat of the whale and lit the other end. He said it burned splendidly, and the ice-berg reflected the light so strongly that it was bright as day for forty miles around, and one vessel was into the iceberg thinking it was a light house. He said he sold the iceberg to the captain for $12,500, and the captain split it up and took it home and made 200 per cent profit disposing of it to ice companies.

Welsh Justice.

At the Merioneithshire Quarter Sessions, in Wales, the other day, the Llanfairfechan pale-gerty-whipsgrech was charged by the Dolgelly Local Board with obstructing the highway near the town. The Rector of Llanfairfechan, who was also chairman of the Llanfairfechan parish in Anglesea, near the Menai Bridge, owns property in the neighborhood of Dolgelly. The name given is an abbreviation of the full title of the village.

Everyday Absurdities.

To make yourself generally disagreeable and then wonder that nobody will ask you. To sit shivering in the cold because you won't have a fire till November. Not to go to bed when you are tired and sleepy because it is not bedtime. To make your servants tell lies for you and afterward be angry because they tell lies for themselves. To tell your own secrets and believe other people will keep them.

A Poser.

Did you ever sit down before the grate and cross your legs and wonder how it comes that a dear little twinkling pumpster, too small to lift a dictionary, can ask a question that would send a college professor to the foot of the class?

When Longfellow was presented to Mr. Longworth, of Cincinnati, the latter remarked: "There is no great difference in our name—" "Yes," replied Mr. Longfellow, 'but wouth' makes the mane; the want of it the 'fellow.'"

Academy of Music—Wednesday evening, Brignoli's Italian Opera, "Don Pasquale." Thursday evening "Our Boys;" benefit of the poor of Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

The advent of Mr. John E. Owens in Brooklyn is always hailed with delight by a large class of theatre-goers who enjoy the gentleman—peculiarly sero-comic vein. The piece selected by Mr. Owens for the entire week is a dramatization of Dickens' charming story of "Dot." Of all Mr. Owens' happy delineations none surpass that of the blind toy-maker, and we may safely say that in none does he appear to great advantage. The characters in the drama will be enacted by the members of the New Park Theatre company, who are well fitted for the roles in which they are cast. Altogether, the present week at the New Park Theatre will be one of the most satisfactory, from an artistic stand point, of the season. For the coming week Miss Rose Eytinge in the powerful play, "Rose Michel." Dramatic stars will appear in rapid succession.

WOOD'S THEATRE.

Nothing during the present dramatic season has attracted such appreciative audiences as the melo-drama, and in "Dead Shot Darrell," at Wood's Theatre, this week, there promises to be no exception to the rule. The drama serves to present Mr. C. E. Marshall to the public of Brooklyn in a heroic role, and one which will be certain to enlist wide-spread sympathy. The scenery, accessories and the cast will be all that need be desired to fulfill the requirements of the piece. For next week Upton in his romantic drama, "Honor; or, The Fate of an Artist."

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Each week it seems that the management of the Olympic Theatre must have presented the best variety programme that has been given in Brooklyn, but as week succeeds week and novelties follow each other in bewildering number and excellence we are obliged to acknowledge that a more successful theatre of its kind never existed in this city. The crowded audiences that will nightly fill the Olympic, during the current week, will be treated to a capital performance, of which the leading features are: Fields and Hoey, Blanche Selwyn, Cramley and De Forrest, Naoni, the Dillons (Susie and James), Albert Goyer, Lon Edwards, Jimmy Taylor, Harry Beaudet and Frank Wills, and same old company, with Miss Fanny Herring in the play of "Tigress of the West."

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The musical and dramatic entertainment for the benefit of the poor, to be given, as heretofore announced, at the Academy of Music, on the 7th inst., promises to be a big artistic as well as a pecuniary success. Already a large number of tickets have been disposed of, and the sale at Chandler's is progressing rapidly. The programme, which is a notable one, includes Salcedo, the ventriloquist soloist, and Miss Alice Waltz, in various musical selections, and will conclude, (through the courtesy of John E. Owens, Esq.), with Byron's famous comedy of "Our Boys," interpreted by some of the best local amateur talent, the cast embracing Messrs. Harry P. Hatch, Charles H. Edwards, Thomas H. Adams, James P. Sherman, M. C. Chester, and Ralph L. Newton; Mrs. Sherer, and Misses Annie B. Phelps, Grace Rider and Kittie Rider.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

On Wednesday evening Brignoli's Italian Opera Company will produce Donizetti's charming Comic Opera, in three acts, "Don Pasquale," with the following cast:

Mlle Galfenetti	as ..... Norina
Signor Brignoli	as ..... Ernesto
Sig. Farlaguiera	as ..... Dr. Malatesta
Sig. Susini	as ..... Don Pasquale
Sig. Ciccone	as ..... The Notary

A YARN OF THE ROCKIES.

Old Dick Waller used to tell some tough yarns about his wanderings. He was an American trapper, and, having seen old times, was a privileged character. As admiring crowd gathered around Dick while he related one of his yarns. "I tell you I was out huntin' in the Rockies, an' gettin' a beetle out o' the regular course I at last fetched up at the foot of the mountain, highest mountain I ever reed. I thought I'd crawl to top, an' take a look to see what I war. Well, I contineed on for about a week, an' at last I reed the top. Then I couldn't see nowhere and nothin', for I war up too high. All on a sudden a notion took me to fire at old Rosser [the gun], an see if I couldn't shoot up ramblin. But, not seein' anythin' arter the fire, I concluded I'd load up. Well, it jest so happened that it war about the time of the new moon; an' she war a-sailin' majestically by me, an, bein' in a mighty good humor, I thought to myself now, that war no trees up so high—I jest shall string o' the flask over the pint o' her horn, and perseed with the rest of my job. But, by crickey, when I'd rammed the ball down and primed for the flask, it wasn't there—the moon had been goin' all the time, an' was a good way off." His hearty laughed one of the listeners, thinking he had the old fellow in a tight place. "What did you do then without your powder?" "Why," said the old "I just waited until she kim round the next night, an' then I tuk my powder flask off."

When William Beverley, the scene painter of London, was a school-boy, he had a companion named Who was, like himself, a great lover of theatricals. The latter had a toy theatre and had devised a melodrama which ended in the blowing up of a mill and the destruction of one of the villains of the cast, but dared not carry out his plan for fear of ruining his theatre. Beverley came to his aid, constructed the requisite "set" and blew it up successfully. The other boy, to whom this old was rendered, was Charles Dickens.

Refinements.

"A sort of thingum-Robert, sir Walter, you say—call it." "I intend to plant a row of thorny-ost beans." "This memorial is a very dammer-erick affair." "I recommerciability is a Marysallies." "He had been quite a Benjamin factor to me." "Never talk of people by their Shakespeareanse." "The negro played upon a banjaph." "He took so pho-dly an a specture or a pipso-Thomas." "I want a little Patrick of butter." "Wipe your feet upon the Matthew."

Paris is crazy over a new toy. It is a two-penny cord bearing a picture of a family on moving day. They are passing a tree and the rat has escaped. "Where is the cat?" is the question, and after the purchaser has vainly puzzled to find anything resembling a cat in the picture, the vender holds it in a certain position, and lo! there in the missing cat filling the whole foliage of the tree.

The Course of True Love.

One can understand how, as Shenstone says, "A blockhead with a melodious voice, in boarding schools may have his chalice" or "flow oft the dancing-master's art may climb from the toe to touch the heart," but it is not easy to find out how the little, lame, lank preceptor's clerk can win the affections of a country heiress over six feet tall, and weighing 250 pounds. Her father, a farmer hale and hearty and rich, living near Indianapolis, and weighing 225 pounds, could not understand it. "Why, Sarah," he would say, "the beetle chap ain't fur enough to square to." But much liked her lover none the less, and when he was forbidden to come courting, rose at dead of night, jobbed him on the road, and hastened to a clergyman's house. Ten minutes after they were married the bride's father burst into the room, and drawing a revolver ordered his daughter to go home. The "beetle chap" touched the arm of a stalwart friend, and in the twinkling of an eye a shotgun was levelled at the stern father. "Guess not, dad!" said the blooming bride, as the old gentleman dropped his revolver. "I'll cut your throat with a shingle," he muttered as he went out to look for his horse.

Too Much a Book-Worm.

The Saturday Press' Memoirs speaks of a bibliomaniac named Lavidoe Carreau, who killed eight persons in order to legally inherit a rare volume which he coveted. It mentions also a pastor in Saxony who murdered a man and his female servant to obtain funds for the purchase of a library.

Says the Cincinnati Breakfast Table—Greek is the language for poetry, French for love and Italian for hand-organ melody, but a man with a short-collar that don't fit is the same helpless being in all.

Wild Bill's Chum.

Everybody has heard of Wild Bill, the famous Western scout; and no one knows him better than his chum, Colonel Cumbly Utter, popularly designated as "Colorado Charley." They lived and traveled, and fought side by side, and no misunderstanding ever disturbed the friendship which connected these renowned plainsmen. Charley now figures as the valiant hero of an exciting tale just from the press of YORK WEEKLY, under the quaint title of "No Slouch—A Romance of Pike's Peak." It graphically pictures thrilling scenes peculiar to Western life, and of course will be eagerly perused by all who admire well-told stories.

"The Best of All."

C. H. RIVERS' Academy, in State street, has been thoroughly overhauled and redecorated, a portable stage, with scenery, attached, and accommodation for seating about five hundred people renders it desirable for private dramatics and soiree dansante entertainments. Rivers's Academy is "the best of all."

Masquerade Parties

are very popular this season. Ladies or gentlemen desirous of obtaining perfect disguises, so essential to the pleasure of the masquerader, will do well to call on EVANS, 261 Fulton street, opposite Clinton street, or 666 Broadway, N. Y., near Fourteenth street. The elegant costumes used in "Cloth-ette" are from this establishment.

Get the Best.

"A good thing is always the cheapest." Such is the motto of Dr. Lozier, Clairvoyant, proprietor of the Opera Clear Store, corner of Fulton and Court streets, for he buys the best of imported cigars and retails them at the same rate as a very inferior article; he makes it up, as he sells an immense quantity.

Men Born to Beauty, and all women who have it not desire it. This pre-eminent charm is acquired by using Laird's "Bloom of Youth." Sold by all druggists everywhere.

SOZODONT

An article that is not once a teeth preserver and breath purifier, and yet so pleasant and convenient to use, its exceeding popularity does not surprise my one. Time has fully established the fact that SOZODONT possesses these excellent qualities in an eminent degree. Every person who has ever used it prizes it as a perfect and indispensable dental decoy. Pure are enjoyed by all who use the balsamic SOZODONT. It removes the disagreeable odors from the mouth arising from Tobacco, Spirits, or Catarrh. Sold by Druggists.

ACTUAL OCCURRENCES IN THEIR LIVES

Mr. Richardson will be remembered as the author of a series of sketches in the New York Weekly, entitled "Wild Bill: Face to Face with Life and Death by Sundry." Those anecdotes were told in a picturesque style, which had about it all the charm of simplicity and truth, and they attained great popularity on that account. The publishers take pleasure in announcing that the new story is in the same vein, and that while it deals with some of the same characters, it exhibits of those fascinating people of the frontier. To this element is added a plot which develops rapidly and with great interest, and which culminates with intense effect in the close.

FASHION NOTES.

Rococo jewelry is revived.

The reign of the tablier is over.

Dominoes are slender fourragers.

There is a rage for beads in Paris.

Everything is to be beaded in spring.

Spring styles are making their appearance.

Scarf draperies for fourragers grow in favor.

Blouse polonaises, with carrick capes, will be worn.

Old gold, amber, and rainbow beads are to be worn.

Large quantities of flowers are seen on all ball toilets.

Dress and bridal capes are worn by ladies of all ages.

Fluffy wool fringes are to trim the first spring dresses.

Long sashes grow in favor in spite of the warm weather.

The corsage of the fashionable ball dress is shockingly low.

Chambery gauze is the material for bridesmaids' dresses.

Blue-gray jet is the coming variation of this popular fashion.

New parasols show dashes of color on grounds of white or black.

Spring goods are seen in small quantities on dry goods counters.

Spanish colors—old gold, yellow, and black—are coming in fashion.

Large lace collars and outside cuffs will be much worn in the spring.

New passementeries are richly seeded with beads of every description.

Rough surfaces and Oriental colors are seen among the spring dress goods.

Kilt skirts for both boys and girls will continue to be worn in the spring.

Rose color is worn by the first bridesmaid when several attend a bride.

The tulle and crowns of spring bonnets will be covered with a network of beads.

The last fancy in flower garnitures is for them to be studded with artificial dew.

Parisian ladies are having their ball dresses made to wear over small side panniers.

Satin evening dresses are trimmed with single folds of crape of the same shade of color.

The arrows, or washerwoman's tunic, is the only overdress worn in Paris at the moment.

Solid black or white grounds in spring parcales have borders in Oriental colors and designs.

Carrick capes on spring polonaises and paletots have stole-like pieces extending down the front.

The fancy for the moment for gentlemen's evening wear is black satin scarfs instead of white cambric neckties.

Masks are of wire, gauze, lace, and white and colored silk and satin, with a full of lace or a ruffle all at the bottom.

The squarer the neck, the higher the shoulder straps, and the shorter the sleeves the more fashionable is the ball dress.

The favorite masquerade dresses this season are Turkish and Muscovite costumes, of which there are many variations.

Effects of Law Practice.

The following unique handbill was issued in Buffalo, N. Y., a days ago: Ten dollars reward, For returning to the undersigned his stout leather traveling satchel (in use thirty years, lower corners recovered), bellows iron frame top—handles double leather, was locked, around the key hole a brass plate—it by 3 inches—inscribed—plainly, words thus, "L. G. & G. L. Marvin: law office: Buffalo, N. Y." Its contents were; 4 old large registers 200 to 700 pages each, written full; also law pleadings and minutes, &c., of no intrinsic value, all only convenience to litigants, and a reference office—from which they were being carried—about half past five P. M., and set down (heavy) to the iron bank building—on Seneca street, as in N. Y. corner steps, inside the alley, south from Seneca street, 80 feet, west from Main street, while the bearer, not one minute—stepped further in the alley, and returned and satchel gone. If so returned—and contents,—to-day, above reward will be paid, if within three days, $5, and no questions asked.

MARK TWAIN'S LATEST.

I lost on new shoes. They were number seven when I started, but were no more than three now and still diminishing. I walked two hours in those shoes after that before we reached home. Doubtless I could have the reader's sympathy for the aching. Many people have never had the headache or the toothache, and I am one of those myself; but everybody has worn tight shoes for two or three hours, and know the luxury of taking them off in a retired place and seeing his feet swell up and observe the fragrance. Few of us will ever forget the exquisite hour we were married. Once when I was a callow, bashful cub, I took a plain, unsentimental country girl to a comedy one night. I had known her one day—by the normal divine; I wore my new boots. At the end of the first half hour she said, "Why do you fidget so with your feet?" I said, "Did I?" Then I put my attention there and kept still. At the end of another half hour she said "Why do you nap, yes, oh, yes, and 'Ho, ah, ho, certainly, very true!' so every-thing I say, when half the time they are entirely irrelevant answers?" I blushed and explained that I had been a little absent-minded. At the end of another half hour she said, "Pinch-why do you grin so similarly at vacancy and yet look so sad?" I explained that I always did when I was collecting. An hour passed and then she turned and contemplated me with her earnest eyes and said "Why, do you cry all the time?" I explained that very funny comedies always made me cry. At last human nature surrendered and I secretly slipped my boots off. Then was a mistake; I was not able to get them on any more. It was a rainy night, there were no omnibuses going our way, and so I walked home barefoot, up with shame, with the girl on one arm and my boots under the other, I was an object worthy of some compassion especially in those moments of martyrdom when I had to pass through the place that fell upon the pavement from street lamps. Finally this child of the forest said, "Where are your boots?" and being taken unprepared I put a fitting denial to the follies of the evening with the stupid remark, "The higher classes do not wear them to the theatre."

Sadly to Wit.

A Virginia negro boy, who professed to be dead fully afraid of cholera, took to the woods to avoid it, and there was found asleep. Being asked why he went to the woods, he said, "I'spec," "Ibid," said the overseer, "how is it that you went to sleep?" "Don't know, massa, really," responded the negro; "but 'spect I must have overpowered myself."

Pertinent.

At one of Mrs. Hayes' recent receptions she asked a little girl what her name was. "Dora," replied the child. "Well, Dora," said Mrs. Hayes, "I am glad to see you." "You'd be glodder," answered Dora, "if you knew I was from Ohio." It is said that Mrs. Hayes greatly enjoyed the joke.

A Man Who Was "No Slouch."

The celebrated borderman and exact shot, CHARLIE UTTER, who has frequently split forty-five bullets out of fifty on a knife-blade, at a distance of sixty yards, at last appears as the hero of a stirring romance, which is begun in the current issue of the New York Weekly. This same sterling character is introduced as "NO SLOUCH," and he one of the most thrilling tales we have ever read.

BROOKLYN, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1878.

A SONG.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those who wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care;
To stay at home is best.

Weary and homesick and distressed,
They wander East they wander West,
And are baffled and beaten and blown about
By the winds of the wilderness of doubt;
To stay at home is best.

Then, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
The bird is safest in its nest;
O'er all that flutter their wings and fly
A hawk is fluttering in the sky;
To stay at home is best.

STAGE TRADITIONS.

It is due to stage tradition that red hair is always associated with comicality, and when combined with a china wristcoat, inviolably signifies rustic integrity; that a flaxen wig is typical of youth and frivolity; that black locks and wicked-ness are inseparable. Lloyd, in his poem of "The Actor," 1762, writes:

"To suit the dress demands the actor's art,
Yet there are those who overdress the part:
To some proscriptive right gives settled things,
Black wigs to murderers, feathered hats to Kings."

And he proceeds to record other conventions a the stage:

"But Michael Cassio might be drunk enough,
Though all his features were not grimed with snuff,
Why should Full Peachum slink in rusty clothes,
Why every devil dance in scarlet hose?"

"Pray, what is the meaning," demanded Charles II, "that we never see a rogue in a play, but nobody but always clap him on a black periwig, when, it is well known, one of the greatest rogues in England always wears a fair one?" The King is supposed to have been thinking of the blonde portaits of Dr. Titus Oates. Of late years Hamlet has been seen upon the stage wearing flaxen locks, appropriate, it has been urged, to his Danish nationality. For the same reason Claudius might wear a fair wig: yet who ever saw the murderous King so attired? The old practice of smearing Cassio's face with snuff, to denote his intoxicated condition, has been long since abandoned: but her ines of the Petty Peachum class are still apt to appear in shirt clothes. The Juliets, and Ophelias, and Zerlinas of the opera house are worn to be very splendidly appointed. Mephistopheles and his diabolical connections are still faithful to the scarlet hose they assumed so very long, long since.

Blissful.

A country minister of "limited capacity" recently married for a second wife a widow of some property. He sought prudent servant of Mammon, a former neighbor asked him if he did notdo well by the second marriage. "Oh, yes, indeed," he said, with animation; and then, as an expression of reverent awe stole into his face, he added, "and, what is very remarkable, the clothes of my wife's first husband just fit me."

A Hot Mot.

"Nine, sir," observed a social scourge. "I can speak nine languages distinctly; but my father, when alive, could speak nine-an hour than fifteen." "Ah!" remarked Douglas Jerrold, "I knew a man who could speak five-and-twenty, and he never said anything worth hearing in any one of them."

AN ACTRESS-MOTHER.

M. de Valdrome married an actress in Paris, and, after a short experience of domestic life, both husband and wife demanded a separation, which was accorded. A son, the only child of the marriage, remained with the father; but the father dying, he now was claimed by his mother. The Court rejected her claim and decided that the lad should be brought up by the Dominicans of Arcouil, and allowed to visit his mother twice a week. The mother smuggled him out of the house and sent him abroad disguised as a girl. When the Dominicans who had accompanied the boy wished to take him back to Arcouil, he was already on his way to the frontier. A strict watch was at once kept on Mme. de Valdrome, who was followed about wherever she went, but she managed to elude her pursuers. She went into a church, and, while seemingly engaged in prayer, arranged her face and dress in such a way that no one recognized in a certain decrepit old woman who hobbled out of the church the youthful Mme. de Valdrome. She finally joined her son in exile.

The Ruling Passion.

As Dr. Johnson was riding in a carriage through London on a rainy day, he espied over-took a poor woman carrying a baby. He invited her to get in with her child, which she did. The doctor said to her, "My good woman, I think it is most likely that the motion of the carriage will wake your child in a little while, and I want you to understand that if you talk any to me, I shall say will have to get out of the coach." As the doctor had anticipated, the child awoke, and the mother exclaimed, "O! the little dear; he is going to talk to the gentlepay!" "Stop the coach, driver!" shouted John-son and the woman had to finish her journey on foot.

A Compensation.

The man with a little brown jug has to watch it nowadays, or his wife will paint it all up and store it away on the mantelpiece for ornamic."

A Disadvantage.

Fifty years ago, when snuff-taking was all the go, the Lord Stanhope of that, day estimated that every professed and incorrable "snuffer" takes, by a moderate computation, one pinch every ten minutes. Every pinch taken, with the splendid ceremony of whisking about a big silk handkerchief and other accidental circumstances connected with it, consumes a minute and a half out of every ten. This amounts to one day out of every ten, which makes 30 days in the year, and if the practice be continued for forty years, two years will also have been spent in tickling and blowing the nose.

A Discovery.

Charles Reade has discovered another abuse. It isn't the mismanagement of prisons or insane asylums this time—something far worse. His new crusade is against "credulous women" who teach their children to use the right hand more than the left, and it is begun with a vigor which bids fair to extirpate the whole female race or make the rising generation ambidextrous.

The Newest Perfidy.

The fashionable bracelet in Paris, is l'esclavage—slavery. It is a fetter of gold worn in the arm above the elbow, and is riveted and soldered by the jeweller in the presence of the donor, to be worn till death or divorce or separation. The jewel er, when the eye alone is over, bids the lady call next day to see that the first holds firmly. She come—without her friend, bien entendu—and the treacherous gold-smith confides to her the secret of a concealed spring by means of which she can remove the fetter at will.

"Alcohol will clean silver." "Yes," remark the Cincinnati Saturday Night, "alcohol, well shook to, will clean out all the silver you have got."

ALAS! ALAS!

They met each other in the glade—
She lifted up her eyes:
Back the day! Alack the maid!
She blushed with swift surprise.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from lifting up the eyes.

The jail was full, the path was steep—
He reached to her his hand;
She felt her warm young pulses leap,
But did not understand.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from clasping hand with hand.

She sat beside him in the wood—
He wood with words and sighs;
Ah! loving in spring seems sweet and good;
And maidens are not wise.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from listing lover's sighs.

The summer sun shone fairly down,
The wind blew from the south;
As blue eyes gazed in eyes of brown,
His kiss fell on her mouth.
Alas! alas! the woe that comes from kisses on the mouth.

And now the autumn time is near,
The lover roves away;
With breaking heart and falling tear,
She sits the livelong day.
Alas! alas! for breaking hearts when lovers rove away.

North-Pole Doings.

He said that once he was cast away on an iceberg, and that he was night for six months that year up there—tore it into strips for a wick, ran the strips through the bamboo fishing rod, stuck the rod into the ice, lit the white and lit the other end. He said it burned splendidly, and the iceberg reflected the light so strongly that it was bright as day for forty miles around, and one vessel ran into the iceberg thinking it was a light house. He said he sold the iceberg to the captain for $15,000, and the captain split it up and took it home and made 200 per cent profit disposing of it to ice companies.

Welsh Justice.

At the Merionethshire Quarter Sessions, in Wales, the other day, the Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch was charged by the Deputy Lord Lieut enant with obstructing the highway near the town. The Rector of Llanfair, wilgwyngllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogoch, is a parish in Anglesea, near the Menai Bridge, and a property in the neighborhood of Delgelly. The name given is an abbreviation of the full title of the village.

Everyday Absurdities.

To make yourself generally disagreeable and then wonder that nobody will visit you. To sit shivering in the cold because you won't have a fire till November. Not to go to bed when you are tired and sleepy because it is not bedtime. To make your servants tell lies for you and afterward be angry because they tell lies for themselves. To tell your own secrets and believe other people will keep them.

A Poser.

Did you ever sit down before the grate and cross your legs and wonder how it comes that a dear little toddling youngster, too small to lift a dictionary, can ask a question that would send a college professor to the foot of the class?

When Longfellow was presented to Mr. Longworth, of Cincinnati, the latter remarked: "There is no great difference in our names." "Yes," replied Mr. Longfellow, "but words' makes the man; the want of it the 'fellow.'"

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

The advent of Mr. John E. Owens in Brooklyn is always hailed with delight by a large class of theatre-goers who enjoy the gentleman's peculiarly sero-comic vein. The piece selected by Mr. Owens for the entire week is a dramatization of Dickens' charming story of "Dot." Of all Mr. Owens' happy delineations none surpass that of the blind toy-maker, and we may safely say that in none does he appear to so great advantage. The characters in the drama will be enacted by the members of the New Park Theatre company, who are well fitted for the roles in which they are cast. Altogether, the present week at the New Park Theatre will be one of the most satisfactory, from an artistic stand point, of the season. For the coming week Miss Rose Eytinge in the powerful play, "Rose Michel." Dramatic stars will appear in rapid succession.

WOOD'S THEATRE.

Nothing during the present dramatic season has attracted such appreciative audiences as the melo-drama, and in "Dead Shot Darrell," at Wood's Theatre, this week, the promises to be no exception to the rule. The drama serves to present Mr. C. E. Marshall to the public of Brooklyn in a heroic role, and one which will be certain to enlist wide-spread sympathy. The scenery, accessories and the cast will be all that need be desired to fulfill the requirements of the piece. For next week Cipriee in his romantic drama, "Honor; or, The Fete of an Artist."

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Each week it seems that the management of the Olympic Theatre must have presented the best variety programme that has been given in Brooklyn, but as week succeeds week and novelties follow each other in bewildering number and excellence we are obliged to acknowledge that a still more fruitful theatre of its kind never existed in this city. The crowded audiences that will nightly fill the Olympic, during the current week, will be treated to a capital performance, of which the leading features are: Fields and Hoey, Blanche Selwyn, Cumley and De Forrest, Naoni, the Dillons (Susie and James), Albert Geyer, Lon Edwards, Jimmy Taylor, Harry Bennett and Frank Wills, and same old company, with Miss Fanny Herring in the play of "Tigress of the West."

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The musical and dramatic entertainment for the benefit of the poor, to be given, as heretofore announced, at the Academy of Music, on the 7th inst., promises to be an artistic as well as a pecuniary success. Already a large number of tickets have been disposed of, and the sale at Chandler's is progressing rapidly. The programme, which is a notable one, includes Saleedo, the eminent cornet soloist, and Miss Alice Waltz, in various musical selections, and will conclude, (through the courtesy of John E. Owens, Esq.), with Byron's famous comedy of "Our Boys," interpreted by some of the best local amateur talent, the cast embracing Messrs. Harry P. Hatch, Charles H. Edwards, Thomas B. Adams, John F. Silvernail, M. C. Chester, and Ralph L. Newton; Mrs. Sherer, and Misses Annie B. Phelps, Grace Rider and Kittie Rider.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

On Wednesday evening Brignoli's Italian Opera Company will produce Donizetti's charming Comic Opera, in three acts, "Don Pasquale," with the following cast:

Mlle. Gallmberti	as	Norina
Signor Brignoli	as	Ernesto
Sig. Tagliapietra	as	Dr. Malatesta
Sig. Susini	as	Don Pasquale
Sig. Ciccone	as	The Notary

A YARN OF THE ROCKIES.

Old Dick Waller used to tell some tough yarns about his wanderings. He was an American trapper, and, taking one thing with another, a privileged character. An admiring crowd gathered around Dick while he related the following: "One day I was out hunting in the Rockies, and got on a track out o' the reg'lar course I at last fetched up at the foot of the 'tarnalest, highest mountain I ever seed. I thought I'd rest a bit, an' then make back to see what I was. Well, I continered on for about a week, an' at last got to the top. But I couldn't see no where, no further, for I was up too high. All on a sudden a notion took me to fire off the Rocker (his gun), for see if I couldn't skear up sumthin,. But, no, seein' anythin' arter that fire, I concluded I'd load up. Well, it jest so happened that it was about the time of a new moon; an' she war a-silin' majestically by me, so, havin' nowhar else to put the powder-flask—no use, thar war no trees up so high—I jest flung the string o' the flask over the p'int o' her horn, and pereeded with the rest of the job. But, by cracky, when I'd rammed the ball home, an' reached for the flask, it warn't thar—the moon had been goin' all the time, an' was a good ways off." "Ha, ha!" laughed one of the listeners, thinking he had the old fellow in a tight place. "What did you do next without your powder?" "Why," said Dick, "I just waited until she'd an round the next nigh, an' then I tuk my powder flask off."

A CHANGE.

When William Reverley, the scene painter of London, was a school-boy, he had a companion pupil who was, like himself, a great lover of theatricals. The latter had a toy theatre and had devised a melodrama which ended in the blowing up of a mill and the attended destruction of the villains of the cast, but dared not carry out his plan for fear of ruining his theatre. Reverley came to his aid, constructed a proper "set" and blew it up successfully. The other boy, to whom this aid was rendered, was Charles Dickens.

Refinements.

"A sort of thingum-fedoret, or Walter-pa-mony-call it?" "I intend to plant a row of Henry-ocalyptus." "This memorial is a very James-crack affair." "Incomprehensibility is a Mary-syllable." "He had been quite a Benjamin-factor to me." "Never talk of people by their Nicholasnames." "The scene played upon a harp-Joseph." "He looks as ghostly as a spectre or a phan-Thomas." "I went a little Patrick of butter." "Wipe your feet upon the Matthew."

Paris is crazy over a new toy. It is a two-penny card bearing a picture of a family on moving day. They are passing a tree and the cat has escaped. "Where is the cat?" is the question, and after the purchaser has vainly puzzled to find anything resembling a cat in the picture, the vender holds it in a certain position, and lo! there is the missing cat filling the whole foliage of the tree.

The Course of True Love.

One can understand how, as Shenstone says, "A blackbird with a melodious voice, in boarding schools may have his choice of" or "How oft the dancing-master's art may obtain from the toe to touch the heart," but it is not easy to find out how a little, lean, stunted grocer's clerk can win the affections of a country heiress over six feet tall, and weighing 200 pounds. Her father, a farmer hale and hearty and rich, living near Indianapolis, and weighing 325 pounds, could not understand it. "Why, Sarah," he would say, "the lettie chap she'l tip enough to ansese." But sarah liked her lover none the less, and when he was forbidden to come courting, rose at dead of night, joined him on the road, and hastened to a clergyman's house. Ten minutes after they were married the bride's father burst into the room, and drawing a revolver ordered his daughter to go home. The "lettie chap" touched the arm of a stalwart friend, and in the twinkling of an eye a shotgun was levelled at the stern father. "Guess not, dad!" said the blooming bride, as the old gentleman dropped his revolver. "I'll cut you off with a dime," he muttered as he went out to look for his horse.

Too Much a Book-Worm.

The Revue des Deux Mondes speaks of a bibliomaniac named Leviste Carrera, who killed eight persons in order to legally inherit a rare volume which he coveted. It mentions also a pastor in Saxony who murdered a man and his female servant to obtain funds for the purchase of a library.

Says the Cincinnati Breakfast Table—Greek is the language for poetry, French for love and Italian for hand-organ melody, but a man with a shirt-collar that don't fit is the same helpless being in all.

Wild Bill's Chum.

Everybody has heard of Wild Bill, the famous Western scout; and no one knew him better than his darling chum, CHARLEY UTTER, popularly designated as "Colorado Charley." They lived and traveled, and fought side by side, and no mistaken friendship ever existed between men which connected these renowned plainsmen. Charley now figures as the valiant hero of an exciting tale which begins in the NEW YORK WEEKLY, under the quaint title of "No SLOUCH—A ROMANCE OF PIKE'S PEAK." It graphically pictures thrilling scenes in pioneer life, and of course will be eagerly perused by all who admire well-told stories.

"The Best of All."

C. H. RIVERS' Academy, 125 State street, has been thoroughly overhauled and redecorated, a portable stage, with scenery, attached, and accommodations for seating about five hundred people renders it desirable for private dramatic and soiree entertainments. RIVERS's Academy is "the best of all."

Masquerade Parties

are very popular this season. Ladies or gentlemen desirous of obtaining perfect disguises, so essential to the pleasure of such occasions, will do well to call on HAWES, 301 Fulton street, opposite Clinton street, and Broadway, N. Y., near Fourteenth street. The elegant costumes used in "Courtesella" are from this establishment.

Get the Best.

"A good thing of its kind is the cheapest." Such is the motto of H. T. VANDEVEER, proprietor of the Opera Cigar Store, corner of Fulton and Court streets, for he buys the best of imported cigars and retails them to his customers at a very light profit, and he makes it up, as he sells an immense quantity.

ACTUAL OCCURRENCES IN THEIR LIVES

Mr. RICHARDSON will be remembered as the author of a series of sketches in the NEW YORK WEEKLY, entitled "WILD BILL: TRUE STORIES OF HIS LIFE AS RELATED BY HIMSELF." These anecdotes were told in a picturesque style, which had about it all the charm of simplicity and truth, and they attained great popularity on that account. The publishers take pleasure in announcing that this new story is in the same vein, and that while it deals with some of the same characters, it exhibits

Effects of Low Practice.

The following unique handbill was issued in Buffalo, N. Y., a days ago: Ten dollars reward, For returning to the undersigned his stout leather traveling satchel (in use thirty years, lower corners recovered), bellows iron frame top—handles double leather; was locked; around the key hole—a brass plate—4 by 2 inches—inscribed—plainly words thus, "L. G. & G. L. Marvin: law office: Buffalo, N. Y." Its contents were; 4 old large registers 200 to 700 pages each, written full; also law pleadings and minutes, &c., of no intrinsic value, all only conveniences to litigants, and a reforee office—from which they were being carried—about half past five P. M., and set down (heavy) by the iron bank building—on Seneca street, at its N. E. corner steps, inside the alley, south from Seneca street, 80 feet west from Main street, while their bearer, not one minute—stepped further in the alley, and returned and another gone. If so returned—and contents, to-day, above reward will be paid, if within three days, $5; and no questions asked.

MARK TWAIN'S LATEST.

I had on new shoes. They were number sevens when I started, but were no more than fives now and still diminishing. I walk three hours in those shoes after that before we reached home. Doubtless I could have the reader's sympathy for the asking. Many people have never had the headache or the toothache, and I am one of those myself; but everybody has worn tight shoes for two or three hours, and knows the luxury of taking them off in a retired place and seeing his feet swell up and obscure the firmament. Few of us will ever forget the exquisite hour we were married. Once when I was a callow, bashful cub, I took a plain, unsentimental country girl to a comedy one night. I had known her one day; she seemed divine; I wore my new boots. At the end of the first half hour she said, "Why do you fidget so with your feet?" I said, "Did I?" Then I put my attention there and kept still. At the end of another half hour she said "Why do you say, Yes, oh, yes, and Ho, ah, ho, certainly, very true" to everything I say, when half the time they are entirely irrelevant answers?" I blushed and explained that I had been a little absent minded. At the end of another half hour she said, "Please why do you grin so steadfastly at nuthing and yet look so sad?" I explained that I always did when I was reflecting. An hour passed and then she turned and contemplated me with her earnest eyes and said "Why, do you cry all the time?" I explained that very funny comedies always made me cry. At last human nature surrendered and I secretly slipped my boots off. That was a mistake; I was not able to get them on any more. It was a rainy night, there were six omnibuses going our way, and as I walked home burning up with shame, with the grit on one arm and my boots under the other, I was an object worthy of some compassion, especially in those moments of martyrdom when I had to pass through the gate that fell upon the pavement from street lamps. Finally this child of the forest said, "Where are your boots?" and being taken unprepared I put a fitting finish to the follies of the evening with the stupid remark, "The higher classes do not wear them to the theatre."

Native Wit.

A Virginia negro boy, who professed to be dread fully afraid of ehosts, took to the woods to avoid it, and there was found asleep. Being asked why he went to the woods, he said, "To pray." "But," said the overseer, "how is it that you went to sleep?" "Don't know, massa, really," responded the negro; "but 'spect I must have overpraised myself."

Pertinent.

At one of Mrs. Hayes' recent receptions she asked a little girl what her name was. "Dora," replied the child. "Well, Dora," said Mrs. Hayes, "I am glad to see you." "You'd be gladder," answered Dora, "if you knew I was from Ohio." It is said that Mrs. Hayes greatly enjoyed the joke.

A Man Who Was "No Slouch."

The celebrated borderman and cracker-shot, CHARLIE LITTER, who has frequently split forty-nine bullets out of a fifty, at a distance of sixty yards, at last appears as the hero of a stirring romance, which is begun in the current number of the NEW YORK WEEKLY. This narrative of actual events is entitled "NOSLOCH," and is one of the most thrilling tales we have ever read.

GEMS FROM THE GERMAN.

I had a dream; the moon looked drear,
And dreamily the stars shone o'er me;
Away to the sky, where dwell my dear,
Many hundred miles it bore me.

It led me on to her home; I kissed
The stones of the stair at the door there,
Which often her tiny foot had pressed,
And the hem of her robe wore to her there.

The night was long, the night was chill,
The chill of the stones, it shocked me;
And a tenth pale form at the window still,
Lit up by the sun-shine, mocked me.

The violets blue of those eyes of thine,
The roses red of thy cheeks divine,
The lilies white of thy hands so fine,
Bloom on and on, fresh, bright and clear—
The only one heart I did not up my door.

The world is so fair, and the sky so blue,
And the breezes so soft, and so balmy, too,
And the meadow flowers are so bright of hue,
And they sparkle and gleam in the morning dew,
And all nature are merry, and glad to view;
Yet fain would I lie in the churchyard cold,
And nestle in close by my love that's dead.

A COMEDY QUEEN.

When Mrs. Jordan came to London, tragedy, under seddons, entirely monopolized the town and on her debut the actors performed to empty benches. But with the arrival of the new goddess all was changed, and the houses were as crowded to witness her performances as those of her tragic rival. In the line which she chose for herself, however, she had no rival. High tragedy she left to Siddons; high comedy, for she had not the polish and elegance of manners, to Miss Farren, the successor of Mrs. Abington; but rogues, the boys, "the breeches parts," and the youthful and tender heroines of serious plays, she entirely monopolized. In the last named line, however, she was not always successful. Sheridan was greatly dissatisfied with her rendering of "Cora" in his "Pizarro," as Lee "Imogen" lacked power and dignity. In "Rosalind" she was greatly admired, but it appears did not admire herself. "Mrs. Jordan," says John Taylor, in "Records of My Life," "though so full of spirit and apparently of self-confidence, was by no means vain of her acting. I remember sitting with her one night in the green-room of Covent Garden Theatre when she was about to perform the part of 'Rosalind,' in 'As You Like It;' I happened to mention an actor who had recently appeared with wonderful success, and expressed my surprise at the public taste in this instance. 'Oh, Mr. Taylor, don't mention public taste,' said she; 'for if the public had any taste, how could they hear me in the part I play to-night, and which is far above my habits and pretensions?' Yet this was one of the characters in which she was so popular."

At the end of the first season her salary, which had been at £4, was tripled, with the addition of two benefits. Following the pernicious custom introduced by Mrs. Siddons, she now departed upon a provincial tour, and one of the first places she visited was Leeds. Not a twelvemonth had passed since she played there at her guinea and a half a week and taken a benefit to empty benches. Her terms were now half the receipts of the house, after £18 had been deducted for the expenses, and the houses were crowded to the ceiling.

A bad egg—Fg—otism.

The Reason Why.

"That clock, stranger," said a Michigan farmer, "was the best kind of a clock up to six months ago, when my daughter began to have beaus, but now the blamed thing is always two hours too slow!"

A TELEPHONIC EXPERIENCE.

A worthy and elderly divine from the rural regions dropped in at the office of a companion of his youth, the chief of a large and extended manufacturing establishment. They had a quiet, pleasant chat in the elegant, costly furnished apartment one of the merchants in the room was telephone conversing with the factory some dozen miles off.

Our friend the chief is evidently called out; the reverend gentleman remains alone in the room. He pulls out the latest trade, adjusts his specs, settles down in the fauteuil and begins to read.

"Hello!" in sepulchral tones. Thanks it is outside.

"Hello! Wake up, old boy."

Our divine starts up and gazes around.

"Why the devil don't you answer?"

"I—I—beg—your—"

"Wot in h—l are you doing?" continues the telephone.

"Really—my dear—dear sir," gasps our kind sir, swaying melancholy through the room.

"Order down two cur loads of coke and a barrel of brim-stone."

"Lord have mercy on their souls!" mumbles the preacher in panic-stricken terror.

"Send down a new pack, a box of cigars and a half-a-ton bottles of de Monodo's best."

This was too much, the elderly divine bolts through the door, flies down the street bursts the first open door he comes to, and once over his excitement until he is landed safely in the parsonage in the rural domain.

A few days after our worthy friend, the manufacturing chief receives a long, kind epistle, offering earnest prayers for the salvation of his soul, and God may finally purge him from all the sins and great wickedness which he is surrounded.

A popular clergyman recently gave a lecture on "Fools." The tickets of admission were inscribed "Lecture no Fools. Admit one." There was a large attendance.

CREATION.

The Lord made man,
And man made money,
The Lord made bees,
And bees made honey,
The Lord made Satan,
And Satan made sin,
So the Lord made a little place
To shut satin in.

"Foregnes," was the word put out at a recent written spelling exercise in a New York city school. And one little boy who is apparently destined to be a paragrapher, handed in, "Go, go, go, go."

Conclusive.

"I don't see how you can have been working all day like a horse?" exclaimed the wife of a lawyer, her husband having declared that he had been thus working.

"Well, my dear," he replied, "I've been drawing a conveyance all day, anyhow!"

Farm-yard Notes.

The most frequented watering places—Horse troughs.

Why do ducks go into the water? To lipidate their little bills. Why do they come out? For a run on the bank.

Why did the farmer call his rooster Robinson? Because he crowed. Why did he call his hen Macdnf? Because she would lay on so. Why did he call another hen Mand? Because she would go into the garden.

Lasting travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes it.

NO LUCKY STAR.

A FOLK SONG OF THE LOWER RHINE.

There fell a frost in the Spring time night,
It fell on the tender flowers blue,
The flowers are wilted and withered.

A boy once loved a maiden dear,
They lived in secret away from home,
Unknown to father or mother.

And they have wandered here and there.
Ne'er have they known a lucky star,
And now they are lost and buried.

Upon their grave blue flowers bloom,
All gently rocked in the linden by their grave,
No frost falls to wilt or wither.

Business Is Business.

A reporter on the local edition of the Danbury News went to see the young lady he is keeping company with Sunday evening. She met him at the door with a bobbin face.

"Oh, Tom!" she cried in an agitated voice, "we have had such a scare! Ma was coming down stairs and she caught her foot in the carpet and went the whole length ——"

"Hold on!" shouted the excited youth, diving into his pocket for his notebook, while he whipped out a pencil from another recess. "Now go on! go on, Matilda! go on, and be calm. For heaven's sake be calm! Kill her?"

"Gracious, no!"

"Broke her neck? Crush her skull? Be calm, be calm? For the sake of science, be calm!"

"Why, Tom," gasped the girl, frightened by his impetuosity, "it was only a fall. It ——"

"Wasn't serious?" he gasped in turn. "Do you mean to say she didn't break anything after all this fuss?"

"Why, certainly not. She never hurt herself a bit."

"Well," ejaculated the young men with an expression of disgust on his face, as he sadly restored the book and pencil to their places, "that's all a woman knows about business."

Half a Dozen Thoughts.

Rare is the union of beauty and virtue.—[Juvenal.

The greatest truths are the simplest; so are the greatest men.—[Lavater.

The lives of the best of us are spent in choosing between evils.—[Junius.

Eminent stations make great men more great and little ones less.—[Bruyere.

Beauty attracts us men, but if, like an armed magnet, it is painted with gold or silver leaves, it attracts with tenfold power.—[Richter.

What is the difference between freight and cargo? A horse-car conductor says the passengers make the freight and the horses make the car go.

Sydney Smith once said that clergymen might be divided into three classes: Nimrods, Hamrods, and Flahingrods. This was not a bad epigram, but it has been beaten by a well-known contractor, who says railroads are built on three gauges: Broad gauge, narrow gauge, and mortgage.

Another "Old Saw" Exploded.

While a prisoner was yesterday being searched at the Central Police Station he suddenly bursted out—

"I'll never believe in old sayings again!"

"What's wrong with old sayings?" asked the captain.

"Why, there's one that says, 'Heaven helps them that helps themselves.' I helped myself to a pair of pants, and now where am I? Where is heaven? Where is the help to get out o' this?"

They couldn't tell him.

Wood's Theatre.—Master N. S. Wood—"Tom All Alones."

Brooklyn Rink.—Centemeri's Concert and Roller Skating. Grand fete every Thursday night. Olympic.—Variety.

At the above mentioned places of amusement the STAGE is the Official Programme.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

After a term of unusual preparation, Colonel Sinn has succeeded in placing the splendid comedy of "Baby" upon the stage of the New Park Theatre, in a manner which does credit to the able management and to the capital comedy itself.

It may be affirmed with truth that no piece of recent production has achieved so instantaneous and electric a success as this same "Baby." It was the furore in Paris from its first appearance; it passed through a happy era of applause and laughter in London, and has delighted enormous audiences all over this country since it started from its home at the Park Theatre in New York upon its present tour. We more than recommend a trip to see "Baby" in its present admirable dress at the New Park Theatre.

For the coming week, December 3, the ever and justly popular actor, Mr. Frank Chanfrau, will appear in his great and well-known creation, supported by the strength of the New Park Theatre Company. The engagement of this gentleman should not be neglected. Following Mr. Chanfrau, we have Miss Charlotte Thompson and Lotta, upon successive weeks.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Once again Mr. Dion Boucicault is with us at the Academy of Music, in his inimitable creation of Conn, the Shaughraun, under the able management of Mr. John F. Smith. Too much attention cannot be paid to this combination, in that Mr. Boucicault may not again play this celebrated piece in this city, and as Mr. Smith holds the reins of government in his hands, we know that the production could not be more satisfactory.

To all who have not already enjoyed it, the "Shaughraun" will be a revelation, and to those who know it, we promise fresh delights and new surprises. It is one of the great dramatic studies of the day, and with the celebrated author-actor himself to interpret it, what more can be desired? All the remarkable scenic effects are transported hither from Wallack's Theatre; the cast is one of those carefully selected ones with which Mr. Boucicault will only consent to appear, and the mass of characteristic music will be efficiently rendered. We need say no more to command public attention.

THEATRE.

Brooklyn of the talented boy-actor, Master N. S. Wood, who will essay the comic-pathetic role of Joe in an adaptation of Dickens' frequently adopted novel of "Bleak House." The dramatization has been ably performed by Mr. H. A. Weaver, of Booth's Theatre, who has given to his work the quaint title of "Tom-All-Alones."

There will be no little satisfaction in seeing the dramatic part of the vagrant Joe portrayed by an actual boy. To be sure, we have had Miss Mary Cary in the role, and very successfully too at the Union Square Theatre, but the part requires something masculine to give it its vividness, and this trait we shall find in Mr. N. S. Wood.

For the next week, "The Streets of New York" is in rehearsal, and promises to realize in the production the standard of excellence which has won for it its popularity.

THE BROOKLYN RINK.

We can but reiterate our praises of former weeks in regard to this popular resort, popular, and every day increasing in popularity. As Thanksgiving occurs on the regular fete-day of this week, an evening of unusual brilliancy may confidently be expected. Once more we must acknowledge that Centemeri and his splendid orchestra contribute an element to the daily enjoyment of the place, and assist not a little in accelerating the twinkling of the feet.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

In consideration of its being Thanksgiving week, Messrs. Chevalier and Jarvis have prepared a programme which will take in and amuse the entire variety-loving population of Brooklyn.

With a judicious sprinkling of established favorites, we are to be treated to a glimpse of the accomplished Allen Sisters, a quartet of talented and pretty ladies, not to mention a host of masculine celebrities which promise to keep the house in a roar. A visit to the Olympic, this week, will be worth the time and money expended.

Beautiful Pictures.

As the holiday season approaches, and the minds of the people are more than ever disposed to generosity and the patronage of the arts and high-class labor, there is one place which should not be passed by without a call—and that place is the Photographic Gallery, at 196 Fulton street, of Dana, the Artist. The works of art displayed by this photographer are of the very highest order, and we with those of the most celebrated artists of Paris and Vienna, which cities have always borne the palm of photography alone. The facilities of forest-ic clubs are worthy of special public notice, and from this date until the opening of the year, the prices are so reduced as to render the present the time for advantage.

He Gave Her $10,000.

It is rumored that TURNBULL, the Hatter, is about to bust. Try him. He certainly sells very low at his new stores, 59 and 61 Fulton street, Brooklyn. Query. Why? The old women in his own business found out that he made his wife a present of ten thousand dollars' worth of real estate.

Those Beautiful Bonnets.

Everybody admires a beautiful bonnet. The Brooklyn ladies will find a choice selection at Mrs. VAN ALEN'S, 308 Fulton street, where a choice stock of millinery goods is now on exhibition at very low prices. Hats trimmed, pressed and made over.

That Awful Boy!

As everybody is anxious to learn of the mischievous tricks and droll antics of "THAT AWFUL BOY," the public will thank us for informing them that at any book store or news agency, on payment of fifty cents, you can obtain possession of the lively urchin, who will deserve the title of "THAT AWFUL BOY."

A Beautiful Complexion.

Blemishes that have accumulated on the face are removed by using Laird's "Bloom of Youth," and rendered clear, fresh and beautiful.

FASHION NOTES.

During the last few years will a remarked complaints have been made that the best black silks, even while stamped by the well known and reliable makers, in course of time turn glossy and greasy.

Messrs. WEICHSELBAUM, ABRAHAM & Co., of Fulton and Washington streets, with their well known and characteristic enterprise, induced a Lyons manufacturer to make them the fabrication of a silk combining the component qualities of warp and durability, and the manufacturer experiments resulted in the most complete success.

The silk so unsurpassed for beauty of finish and durability, is made of the purest silk only, free of dressing, and warranted not to change color.

Messrs. W. A & Co. can recited for all that can be made, and have just received the first delivery. Those welcome to wear the ladies, and we know they will flock in thousands to examine the silk. The necessary of WEICHSELBAUM, ABRAHAM & Co.'s representative is well known.

The Matinee Cloak still seems to be the prevailing fancy for Winter Wraps.

WEICHSELBAUM & Co. sell a real fine two button Kid Gloves at $1, and they are excellent.

Extraordinary preparations are being made by our new firm for the Holiday trade. WEICHSELBAUM & Co. have a great surprise in store for their patrons.

WEICHSELBAUM & Co. have so-se new styles of Boys Suits, that are exceeding handsome and showy.

Some great novelties in Winter Dress goods are now shown by WEICHSELBAUM ABRAHAM & CO.

Gentlemen frequently exhibit ladies for extravagant habits, without once thinking that they are afflicted with the same habit, often in an aggravated form. The gentlemen's Dress Shirts WEICHSELBAUM, ABRAHAM & CO. make to order, of the best Linen and Cottons, at $1.25 each, and fit guaranteed, and every way equal to the shirts made to order elsewhere, at double the price, is one source of reflection. Seeing is believing.

No Natural Complexion

can surpass in freshness and beauty that imparted by LAIRD'S "Bloom of Youth." It will remove all discolorations and blemishes. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

LADIES' FASHIONS.

(WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.)

One of the most popular designs for both house dresses and street suits is that with a basque and apron in front, with the back in Princesse style, with waist and skirt in one. For street suits this design is carried out as an over dress, to be worn with a lower skirt of silk. For evening and full dress toilettes the lower skirt is dispensed with, and the Princesse back breadths are lengthened to form a train.

The following description of a very pretty evening toilette shows how two materials are combined in this way for full-dress.

The corsage of maize-colored faille is a square-necked illusion basque with fan-shaped seams, with a plaited fichu of tulle which is trimmed round at the top and bottom with strawberry vines, bearing flowers, fruit, and foliage, while a cascade of wide maize-colored ribbon loops falls down the back on the train. The trimmings on the skirt are tulle flounces and puffs. The square neck and short sleeves have maize-colored crape plaitings around them, and a cluster of straw berry blossoms on the left side of the neck.

A stylish carriage costume is of dark violet-colored grosgrain silk and gray lady's cloth. The train skirt is of the former material, and is trimmed with side-plaited flounces fourteen inches deep, and with finely plaited ruches heading the flounces.

The overdress, of the lady's-cloth, is in the form of a half-fitting polonaise, having darts in front and three seams in the back. To the back, which descends ten inches below the waist, is attached a plaited skirt, trimmed on the lower edge with a deep chenille fringe which is brought round the fronts, and extends up the center as far as the waist. The wide-flowing sleeves are edged with fringe, headed with straps of plush silk galloon, overlapping in buttoned points. Three chenille passementerie agnnies, with linked pendants, trim the plaited skirt behind, set on to a wide fold, piped with silk. Bonnet of violet-colored plush, trimmed with beaded lace of the same tint, fruit and flowers.

Six-button black kid gloves are very popular at present in Paris.

Another favorite in the line of perfumery, is the Iroris.

For the benefit of ladies who intend making useful as well as ornamental presents to their husbands, brothers, or somebody else's brother, we will name a few novelties. These are flat-folded scarfs made of figured silks, stripes, and brocades, of very small neat figures, but of very rich quality, the ground-work of many being satin. The Polo-bane is the title for these. Dark rich brocades are preferred to plain colors; the linings are of vivid, contrasting colors, in plain satin. In sailor-knotted ties, the Richmond and the Granville are the favorites. A broad, straight scarf, called the De Joinville, is to be tied by the wearer in a sailor knot, or to be worn with a ring. A new scarf, called the four-in-hand, is edged narrowly in the middle, where it forms a band around the neck, and is widened where it is to be tied when put on. Narrow black satin ties, with fringed ends, are being introduced for full dress, both here and in England. The narrow white bawn is, however, most generally used.

Scarf pins of silver are stylish ornaments, and are made in most unique designs; one represents a polo mallet, a second a dragon, a third an easel; the head of a pug-dog is another; a rake for hay, a whisp-broom, and a telegraph pole and wires. Gold pins are made in similar designs. Dazel gold stud buttons and link buttons to match are very popular sets for gentlemen.

White silk pocket-handkerchiefs are now carried in the English fashion. They have narrow hems, simply hem-stitched, or else wider hems with small dots or colored figures upon them. Indeed, these small, neat designs are found to be preferrable in all articles worn by gentlemen.

Black or navy blue full socks are worn for full dress, with low, patent-leather pumps. Many gentlemen prefer them embroidered on the sides.

Soft cambrshair socks, in pale gray and drab shades, are $2.75 a pair. Cardinal red merino socks have hair stripes of white around the ankle, or else are clocked with black or blue.

Gloves for the street are of drab, gray, or tan tints, fastened by two buttons, and widely stitched on the back with self-colored silk. The Plymouth gloves, for driving, are of fine buckskin, lined with lambskin, and trimmed round the wrist with other fur. Price, $4.50.

Street's Awful Boy.

The "New York Weekly" had "An Awful Boy;" he was an "ocker," but he acted badly. G. W. CARLETON & CO. has another "Awful Boy," which any bookseller will introduce to you on payment of 50 cents.

A Reduction in Billiards.

Mackenzie has reduced the price of playing billiards 50 per cent. at his elegant Rooms over the Post Office, Washington street.

The Ladies Don't Object.

Ladies as a general thing don't object to smell of a good cigar. The cigars sold at H. T. VANDERBILT & CO.'s, 151 Fulton and 1 Court streets are known to be good by most every smoker in the city. N. B.—The Opera has no branch store.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

I have often said that I would shun reading advertisements, they so outrage truth and violently strain credulity, yet when my wants direct inquiry, where can I go but to the source I am most despise? Well, here I must discriminate and be directed by common sense. The oldest house in the line from which I want my supply must necessarily be the safest. Furniture, Carpets and Oil Cloths are what I'm in need of just now, and JOHN F. MASON, corner Myrtle avenue and Bridge street, has for thirty years successfully supplied the public, so I think I'm safe in making up my purchase there.

BROOKLYN, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1877.

THE FALSE ORACLE.

She picked a little daisy flower
With tinge of snow and heart of gold;
And pure without and warm within,
And stood to have her fortune told.

"He loves me," so the maiden said,
And plucked the border leaf by fest;
"A little—too much—not at all—
With truest heart—beyond belief."

"A little—too much—not at all—"
She sang the changes o'er and o'er;
The tiny leaflets fluttered down
And strewed the meadow's grassy floor.

"A little—too much—not at all—
With truest heart"—O magic brief!
Ah! foolish task to measure out
Love's value on a daisy leaf!

For as she pulled the latest left
With "Not at all," I heard her say,
"Ah! much you know, you silly flower,
He'll love me till his dying day."

The Salaries of Stars.

A LEADING journal bewails the high prices which the prominent theatrical stars of the country demand, and declares it extortion against which the public ought to protest.

There is a crying want of cheap and rational amusement in which all classes may participate, the poor and the rich. But when the managers are at the mercy of these transient attractions, reform is out of the question.

Booth and Sothern demand a small fortune every week. Lester Wallack's terms are fixed to represent a certainty of $2,000 a week; Maggie Mitchell is less ambitious, and for herself alone is willing to accept $1,000; John McCullough demands $1,000 for his weekly services, and gets it; the Williamsons must have $2,400 guaranteed for a week before they will consent to appear. John E. Owens has, by constantly playing old pieces, declined 900 or thereabouts; Mrs. Oates, with her company, asks sixty-five per cent., which, supposing the week's business to be $5,000, represents something more than $3,000 for herself and company; Lydia Thompson requires seventy-five per cent., and this makes her share of the same hypothetical receipts $3,750; Aimee wants precisely the same. The English opera company ran the same, and sometimes have been known to get eighty per cent. These are enormous figures for a week's work, and where the manager absolutely nothing but a margin.

A stammering professor says, "The Dog Star is no star at all! It is a p-p-pup-piaet!"

Western Criticism.

"I TELL yo, Bill, this is the true business. We are suckin' a fre-h orange with juice in it. You soon 'em all. Take Scott-Siddons. She's the prettiest woman that ever lived, but when it comes to acting she ain't there. She's all the time strutin' round the stage showin' her teeth—they're store teeth, too, and I'll bet on it. There's Mrs. Bowers. We used to think she could act, and when she was here a few years ago we gave her a silver brick. Well, they'll need some silver bricks before they get through with her at the California. She's got a six weeks' engagement, and sin't payin, for the gas. Then there's Alice Dunning Lingard, the best-shaped, best-dressed woman in the boards. She puts on as many airs on the stage as if she thought her audience were all jahoos. It paid for exhibit, but now people don't go a-nosin each racket as that, and she's beginnin' to think that most any audience is good enough for her. I tell you, Bill, too many frills spiles a woman. You don't see Modjeska puttin' on any frills. Why? 'Cause she's a lady from the ground up. That's what's the matter. Look at her acting. Why it just walks into a man's soul without knockin,' and takes possession of the whole ground floor. First time I see her fall down by the fireplace it paralyzed me. Blast me if I'd fell so since my old mother died. I wanted to cry the worst kind, but I didn't, 'cause I thought there was a cove watchin' me, but I found out he wasn't, 'cause he was busy cryin,' too."

A well-known girl of the period.—Em Bezzie. Her near and dear relatives—D. Fault.

The Spanish Marriage.

"KIND ALPHONSO, to his cousin, Mercedes:"

Mrs. Partington says she can't make out why they are making all this fuss in the papers about the Spanish Infanta. She likes them herself, fried or boiled, and thinks it strange that the Spanish people should object to one in their own country.

Where, Indeed!

"WHERE are the boys?" anxiously inquired a religious friend yesterday. "Why, bless your innocent soul, don't you know where they are? George is down cellar, hooking choice eatables for school; Henry is in the back yard, gating ready to blow himself up with a gun; Alexander is indulging in a fight with a boy in the next house and getting his face knit over into a German chronic, while William is being impelled wildly and vivaciously over the bars floor, the motive power being a trunk strap deftly wielded by the old man. That's where the boys are?"

Autumn Leaves.—Just before the first of December.

Conclusive.

BOARDER—"I detect a rather disagreeable smell in the house, Mrs. Jones. Are you sure the drains—"

Landlady—"Oh, it can't be the drains sir, whatever. There see none, sir."

Hard On Him.

A BACHELOR persuited himself to be unreigled into Boston's baby show, and it was nearly the death of him. He stopped to gaze at a sweet cherub of one hundred and fifty pounds, with ears like full grown cabbage leaves, a mouth of much amplitude, and lungs of more than Keely motor power. While wondering whether the infant would develop into a President of the United States or disgrace his doting parents by joining a base ball club, the youngster opened its entire face wide to the ears, and set up a yell. And such a yell! Before the bachelor could hurry away, the mother caught her infant in her arms, and crooned, "What's the matter with mamma's precious petty-wetty! Did the nasty-past, ugly-phogly man frighten mammy-wammy's darling baby-waby? The bachelor fainted dead away, and was not restored to consciousness for two hours.

A Suggestion.

Barometer bonnets have been introduced in Paris trimmed with artificial flowers which change color with the weather. Thermometer hats for men might be invented here, too, for use at elections, which would serve to denote the degree of party ardor inflamed by hot-headed addresses into cold, or lukewarm voters

Humanity.

She—"How lovely are the stillness of evening to listen to the nightingale's notes."

"He—"Yet he's a decored fine fellow, is the nightingale; but I they (bright idea), he must be a beatily hoo'tiacous to all the other little birdth that want to go to sheep!"

Honesty the Best Policy.

BOARDING old gent (in Prospect Park):

"Can you tell me, my good man, if this plant belongs to the 'arbutus' family?"

Gardner (curtly):

"No, sir, it don't. It b'longs to the corporation?"

GATHERED ROSES.

Caught in a gathered rose!

Truth Will Out.

"AND are you perfectly happy? And wouldn't you like to be a bachelor again?" asked a Brooklyn bachelor the other day of a friend who had espoused a beautiful young girl only a year ago. "Happy!" echoed the Benedict; "happy! Why, of course I'm happy, and I wouldn't change back again for all the world. But I say, Fred, let me give you a quiet word of advice. Don't be a blasted fool and get married. You hear me!"

A Different Case.

MAMMA—"You're a very naughty boy, Tommy, and I shall have to buy a whip, and give you a good whipping. 'Now,' will you be good?"

Tommy—"Oh, bother—no—shall I be allowed to keep the whip at ewrads, Mammy?"

A Black Hill Dance.

WHEN the exciting moment of "gents to the right" was announced, his colossal swobbles smote the floor as the sound of a quarts mill. When the welcome sound of "balance to the right" ran through the crowded hall, our pilgrim uttered one long hoop, and, abandoning his fair partner, absorbed a tumblerful of bo ung fluid. "Partners for a quadrille." Our hero sprung upon the floor and extemporized a breakdown. "Dog on my molti! I am the tiger of the woods! Come here, gal, let's have some more tarnation jelee." "All set," shouted the floor manager. "Scrape them cat's hoards and let us cobble around." In the excitement of "all hands round," a heavy weight unfortunately collided with our pilgrim, and explanations were of no avail. "I am tard!" shouted our hero, as he rose on him—hot me chaw his mene! I'm a coyote! Let go my harness—I'm a yellow tailed wolf! Let me yuck his eyes out! I'm a wearing bear! I'm a curry! Hoop-e! I'm an elephant—I'm——" Just then he trod on a lavored corn of a hardy herder, who pasted our hero one between the eyes, which seated him violently upon the floor. As he arose, blowing the ruby fluid from his nesal promontory, he reiterated: "I'm an elephant, but my tale's lore."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

For the present week the stage of the New Park Theatre will be devoted to the performance of the admirable character actor, Mr. Oliver Bond Byron, who will appear for the first half of the week in the well-known drama of Western life, "Across the Continent." For the remainder of the engagement Mr. Byron will assume the rôle of Ben McCullough, another trans-Rocky Mountain hero. The merits of "Across the Continent" are too well known to the public of Brooklyn to require extended notice at this time; suffice it to say that the piece has been improved and is placed upon the stage in a manner highly commendable to the management. Ben McCullough is an eminently popular drama, full of sensation, humor and pathos; replete with stirring incident, and affords Mr. Byron wide scope for the play of his peculiar abilities.

For the coming week the celebrated Frank Frayne Troupe appear in the intensely exciting drama with which they have identified themselves. This is too late a day to mention the extraordinary proficiency of this wonderful family in rifle-practice, but if any have missed their entertainment, they should avail themselves of this opportunity; and those who have enjoyed this performance will find a fresh pleasure in store for them.

WOOD'S THEATRE.

After a week of undeniable success, which has gone a long way towards establishing the popularity of Wood's Theatre with the public of Brooklyn, an artiste is announced who never fails to attract the attention of theatre-goers, wherever she appears. It was only last season that Miss Dolly Bidwell completed a most flattering engagement at the New Park Theatre in this city, and the lady's return to Wood's Theatre this week will be hailed with pleasure.

The programme offered comprises an almost bewildering variety, in that "Lady Audley's Secret," "Jack Harkaway in Ireland," "The Hidden Hand," "The French Spy," "Loan of a Lover," and "Jack Sheppard" are distributed over the six nights and two matinees. Miss Bidwell will be supported by an efficient company, and every entertainment will be given in the manner which has already established Wood's Theatre as a home of legitimate drama.

For the coming week, Mr. D. H. Harkins will appear in four of his fine interpretations—those of Othello, Richard, Jack Cade, and Metamora.

THE BROOKLYN RINK.

There is no denying the phenomenal success of this favorite resort, supported as it is by the very élite of Brooklyn society. Every detail in connection with the place is managed with a liberal hand, and as a result comfort and solid enjoyment are afforded. From an exceptionally sparkling list, Conterno selects some of the choicest waltzes, polkas, galops, marches and romances for performance each evening, and were anything required to lend celerity to the revolution of the Rollers, it would be this exhilerating music.

The preparations for a grand Fete for Thursday evening are in progress which promises to eclipse its predecessors.

In every way, the Brooklyn Rink is to be heartily recommended.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

A soon programme is offered at the Olympic Theatre for the present week, which embraces the first appearance of Mr. Charles Diamond, Seamans and Somers. W. A. Allen, R. W. Smith, and King Sarbro, a truly remarkable Japanese athlete, whose performances alone are worth a trip to the Olympic to witness.

In addition to these, there will be a judicious inter-mingling of established favorites; the whole going to make up a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

BROOKLYN PHILHARMONIC.

The first rehearsal, conducted by Mr. Theodore Thomas, was given before a large and appreciative audience at the Academy of Music, on Friday, November 9. The second and third rehearsals will occur on the afternoons of November 30, and December 14, the concert being the evening evening. The following are the superb selections to be rehearsed:

Symphony in C major.....Beethoven.
Overture, Interlude, and Bridal Song } Schumann of the Alfcsar, "Manfred," Op. 115 }
Selections from "La Damnation de Faust" (1st time): Evocation—Menuet des Toilets, ballet des Sylphes, Marche Hongroise,..... } Berlioz

A Thrilling Contest.

A very exciting contest occurs in the opening scene of the heroic story just begun in the New York Weekly, under the title of "The Young Swordsman of Palmyra; Or, the Lady of the Palanquin. Startling incidents are vividly described in every chapter of this remarkably interesting story; to read it is almost as exciting as witnessing a well-acted melodrama. The boys will be delighted with the adventurous "Young Swordsman," for he is a lad whom all brave boys must admire.

What the Ladies Want.

What the ladies always want is a nice dress. Now, how and where to get it is the question. Mrs. Van Alst, of No. 208 Fulton street, makes a specialty of this business, and also makes up for those who furnish their own material.

Dougan's Return.

Mr. Toni Dougan has returned to Brooklyn, and has opened a new shop house under the Long Island Bank Building, Boerum place, near Fulton street. He has inaugurated something new in the cooking line, everything being done in your presence, on the latest improved French broiler.

The Thousands of Ladies who use Lairil's "Bloom of Youth" keep their own council, and all their admirers suppose that complexions so beautiful and perfectly natural in appearance must be nature's own. Ladies, try it, you will be delighted.

That Awful Boy!

As everybody is anxious to learn of the mischievous tricks and droll antics of "That Awful Boy," the public will thank us for informing them that at any book-store or news agency, on payment of fifty cents, you can obtain possession of the lively urchin, who well deserves the title of "That Awful Boy."

FASHION NOTES.

Cloth round hats, matching the cloth of the ulster, are now in favor for traveling wear. They are soft round Derby crowns made of many gores, the rims stitched by the sewing machine. A little wing or ornament makes them look less masculine.

Dress goods are unusually attractive this season. The "Bonnette Novelty" takes the lead. Wechsler, Abraham & Co., 207 and 209 Fulton street, have the best assortment in the city.

Cloaks were never trimmed as attractively as this season. The best line of Ladies', Misses' and Children's can be found at Wechsler, Abraham & Co.'s, 207 and 209 Fulton street.

Etamine Cloth, a new material for dresses, is all wool, and exceedingly durable. This excellent material is sold at Wechsler, Abraham & Co.'s, at the low price of 25 cents the yard.

Kid gloves are very much reduced in price. A genuine kid glove (not imitation) is sold at $1 the pair at Wechsler, Abraham & Co.'s.

The new Winter mantles are almost all in the paletot shape.

Gentlemen's fine Dress Shirts made to order, of the best muslin and 4-ply all Linen Bosoms, $1.25 each, at Wechsler, Abraham & Co's. We don't see how they can do it.

The most popular place in the city to shop is at Wechsler, Abraham & Co.'s. Not alone have they the finest establishment, but most conveniences and politest salesmen.

Now is the time to look for woolen goods. The cheapest Blankets in the city are sold at Wechsler, Abraham & Co's.

A Dashing Young Hero.

All who admire daring deeds will be deeply interested in the captivating story of "The Young Swordsman of Palmyra; Or, The Lady of the Palanquin," which is begun in No. 1 of the New York Weekly, the best story and sketch paper published. The spirited style of the author is very interesting, and his dashing young hero is constantly in action. Do not fail to read the opening installment of "The Young Swordsman of Palmyra," given in last week's issue of the New York Weekly.

LADIES' FASHIONS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.]

For Winter, of which we have had a warning, there is nothing that will, in all particulars, supply the place of a sealskin sacque. It can be consistently worn for the haute volette of visiting and the carriage, with the promenade and shopping costume, and with equal propriety a lady can wear sealskin to market; while for sleighing and skating, common consent pronounces the finish of sealskin as the most distingue that can be worn.

As has been the case ever since its popular adoption, a set of sealskin consists of a sacque, muff and boa. The average depth of the sacque is from twenty-nine to thirty inches; extreme run from thirty to thirty-five inches. Our most accomplished furriers, however, discourage to great depth in the sacque, because of the liability of wearing off the fur on the edges of the garment, and giving it an old and ragged appearance. They also recommend a plain cloak in the first purchase, suggesting borderings as a means of renewal and alteration; though trimming or bordering is highly fashionable.

Fur-lined cloaks appear in the paletot, the Dolman, the sauque and the circular. The materials employed for making are gros grain silk, Sicilienne, both plain and figured, and silk armure. The fur in most garments use for lining is the squirrel-lock, though there are linings of the fur of both whole squirrels and of squirrels' backs; then there are costly and very elegant cloaks lined with American sable fur.

The comfort and convenience found in these wraps must insure their continuance for an indefinite length of time.

The newest over-dress is the Marquise polonaise, and it is one of the most elegant designs of the season. It is suitable for the richest velvets, satins and silks, yet at the same time is simple enough for plain goods. A beautiful modle of the Marquise polonaise and Demi-trained skirt is composed of olive-green velvet and plain blue silk.

The long polonaise of velvet is fastened at the throat, and slopes away like a cut-away coat to show a cuirass vest of pale blue silk. The back of the polonaise is two long breadths of velvet. There is a long seam down the middle of the back, and two side form seams, one of which begins on the shoulders; these side forms extend very low in the new style. The lower part of the middle seam is left open, and trimmed around with a side plaiting of silk; some plaits in the middle seam draw back the fullness from the hips, and these plaits are concealed beneath sash ends and loops of velvet lined with blue silk that begin on the left front at the end of the vest. Coming from under the vest and the lower skirt, from top to toe, are straight side plaitings with two covering the front breadths of long slender pannels of velvet edged with a knife plaiting of blue silk, reaching from the belt to the foot. The back breadths of the skirt are trimmed with plaited flounces. The sleeves are of silk with velvet cuffs.

A handsome house basque is made of blue satin. This close-fitting garment has the fronts made to overlap on the right side, and is closed with buttons and button holes. The sleeves are of the coat shape, slashed at the lower portion of the outside seam to be turned back en revers, confined to the point with a button, and having a plaited frill of satin to encircle the waist, and to rest on plaited under sleeves of muslin and needle work insertion. The neck is cut out en Pompadour, framed with a frill of lace-edged cambric, and has a stomacher of alternate rows of needle work insertion and frills of fine cambric. The quantity of material required is four yards of satin.

New cravat bows are loaves or tabs of duchesse lace laid over a color and trimmed with loops and long hanging ends of very narrow ribbon. Others are very fine small handkerchiefs folded double (without cutting), and the trimmed corners are laid in flatly pressed plaits. Neckerchiefs to be worn outside of Winter cloaks, especially of fur cloaks, are squares of Paris muslin doubled in three-cornered shape, and edged with wide lace, either round point or duchesse point.

THE SAME OLD STORY.
I have often said that I would shun reading advertisements, they so outrage truth and violently strain credulity, yet when my wants direct inquiry, where can I go but to the source I so much despise? Well, here I must discriminate and be directed by common sense. The oldest house in the line from which I want my supply must necessarily be the safest. Furniture, Carpets and Oil Cloths are what I'm in need of just now, and JOHN F. MANN, corner Myrtle avenue and Bridge street, has for thirty years successfully supplied the public, so I think I'm safe in making my purchase there.
